$762,000 CITY PAYROLL INCREASE TO AFFECT ABOUT 6400 EMPLOYES

Standardization Measure Prepared by Efficiency Board Includes Technical and Labor Workers.

BIGGEST ADVANCE $30, FOR PHYSICIANS

$15 a Month Advance for 900 Firemen Agreed to by Board of Estimate, Who Asked for $30 More

Increases in the pay of 6400 city employes, which will add about $762,000 to the city's payroll, for the fiscal year to begin next month, are now in prospect, as a result of the standardization bill, details of which were made public today by the Efficiency Board, and of the negotiations of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment with the men of the City Fire Department.

The standardization bill applies to about 5500 employes, and makes increases amounting to $600,000. The Board of Estimate, in a conference with the firemen today, agreed to grant them increases of $15 a month, on certain conditions, and this, for 900 men, will come to $162,000 a year.

Firemen Asked for $30.

Until today, the city had offered the firemen increases of only $10 a month. The firemen's representatives insisted that they could not consider such a proposal back to their organizations. In agreeing finally to it, Comptroller Nolte specified that the firemen should dismiss pending suits for pay alleged to be due on the eight-hour basis, and should agree to have the eight-hour day abrogated, and present arrangement, 24 hours on duty and 48 off, established by ordinance. The firemen have been asking for an increase of $30 a month, basing their claim on the figures of other large cities.

The increases, if the $15 proposal is accepted by the firemen, will be, for captains, from $170 to $185, lieutenants $150 to $165, privates $140 to $155, and watchman from $115 to $130. There is no increase above the grade of captain. The standardization bill, which will be made to include the firemen's increase if an agreement is reached with the firemen, will be considered in detail by the Board of Estimate, and will then go to the Board of Aldermen. The Comptroller said the city would have about $600,000 more revenue in 1924-25 than in the fiscal year now ending. The State Legislature, meeting next January, may increase police salaries, to take effect before the end of the coming fiscal year.

Employes to Benefit.

The city employes for whom increases in pay are proposed, under the standardization measure, comprise practically the whole personnel of appointive clerical, technical, skilled craft and common labor workers, with the exception of stenographers.

The city's 200 stenographers, the Efficiency Board has found, make about the same rate of pay as those in similar private employment, hence increases for them were not considered necessary. Most of the stenographers are women, but the board does not feel that it can be charged with discriminating against women workers, as many women will share in the increases which it recommends, especially in the city institutions.

$30 More for Physicians.

Most of the proposed increases are in the sum of $10 a month or thereabout. The highest increases are granted to physicians in the institutions, some of whom are raised $30 a month, and to workers in some trades, a few of whom are increased as much as 25 cents an hour. The increases made for skilled trade have been in conformity with advances of the union scale for those trades. The city charter requires that the prevailing rate of wages shall be paid in these crafts, and this is interpreted as meaning the union scale. The increase for 27 crafts amounts to $110,000 of the annual total.

Classifications of Increases.

Laborers in city departments, now, from 50 to 55 cents an hour; 224, from $3.50 to $3.75 a day, 223, from $3.25 to $3.50 a day, and 514, from $2.75 to $3 a day.

Seven hundred institution employes, including scrubwomen, attendants and dining-room workers,

U. S. MARSHALS INDICTED ON LIQUOR CHARGES AT CAPITAL

Lieutenant of Police in Washington Also Accused in Blow at Law Violations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Washington's Federal grand jury struck out sharply today at liquor law violations in the capital as a question which recently has become increasingly embarrassing to officials endeavoring to enforce the prohibition statutes.

The grand jurors handed down indictments which included: Three Deputy United States Marshals, a lieutenant of police, a Washington Terminal policemen, a sergeant of Marines, two negro pullman porters, a high-priced caterer and his wife, with their waiters and helpers; three other men and 14 women, classified for miscellaneous liquor violations; three alleged leaders in Washington's famous liquor ring, whose list of high personages as customers mysteriously disappeared several months ago, and three young women stenographers of the ring.

Patrick H. Barteman, Charles Marshal and John G. Newman, are the deputies involved, and, with Police Lieutenant J. L. Sprinkle, they are charged with conspiring to have liquor brought here from the South by Pullman porters.

Benjamin Morris, Milton Scarborough and H. Curtis Lamaon are those indicted in connection with the alleged "ring" disclosures. The caterer, William H. Simpson, it is claimed, received orders to furnish "wet goods" at various social functions, two other persons furnishing him with the intoxicants.

CITY DISCONTINUES FREE MEALS

The word went through hoboland that St. Louis was an "easy flop" because the Muncipal Lodging House served free meals. So next year there will be no free meals. Announcement and explanation came from Superintendent C. W. Lillybeck today.

Tomorrow the lodging house at 110 South Twelfth street will close and the 400 lodgers there must seek elsewhere for food and shelter. Since it opened last November more than 100,000 doles of food and lodging have been offered, in many cases to repeaters who made it their winter home. There were only 40,000 doles. The increase, attributed to publicity given the two-free-meals-a-day system was what caused the order as to next year.

Army to Use Vacuum on Horses.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The cavalry board of the army today recommended a vacuum cleaner for the grooming of the horses and mules. It now takes 24 minutes to groom a horse with brush and comb, and this time will be cut down to 10 minutes by the vacuum cleaner.

CARDINALS WIN OVER BROWNS IN INJUNCTION CASE

"CLEARLY EFFORT TO GET MORE RENT"

Court Holds Browns Erred in Notice to Cardinals by Not Stating How Lease Was Violated.

A temporary injunction preventing the St. Louis Browns from evicting the Cardinals from Sportsman's Park under an alleged forfeiture of lease, was returned today by Circuit Judge Frey. The injunction has no returnable date and will continue in effect until such time as the two teams settle their grievance or further litigation is undertaken.

Judge Frey held that the notice of forfeiture was invalid because the Browns failed to state in it in what way the Cardinals had violated their lease. "It is obvious that the sole purpose of the lessor in notifying the lessee of forfeiture was to get more rent,' the Judge stated, and added that the forfeiture was attempted on echnical grounds and herefore justified a technical defense.

An injunction bond of $20,000 was required o fthe Cardinals as well as liability insurance in the sum of $10,000, as provided in the terms of the lease. Judge Frey did not offer any ruling on the question of increased rental. He called attention to the fact that the Browns planned extensive improvements to the field and remarked that the Cardinals would be "poor sports" if they did not pay their share.

Lease Expires in 1930.

The Cardinals have been using Sportsman's Park under a lease that expires in 1930, at a rental of $20,000 a year, and the suit followed default in payment of a quarterly installment of this rent, which fell due Jan. 1.

When this installment was due, Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, was absent from the city and it appears that H. W. Mason, secretary-treasurer, forgot to send a check for the rent. He discovered his oversight Feb. 5 and Breadon sent a check, which was returned, with an announcement that failure to pay the rent promptly had canceled the lease.

The Cardinals management sought an injunction to prevent the Browns from evicting the Cardinals from the lot, and the Browns' management sought a counter injunction, alleging default in payment of rent and failure to have adequate liability insurance protecting the Browns management against suit in case of injury to spectators or employes during Cardinal games.

There was evidence at hearings on these applications that the Browns' management wanted to increase the rental from $20,000 to $37,500, which was given as the real reason for the suit, but this was denied by counsel and witnesses for the Browns.

In this connection, it was said the Browns management wanted to make improvements costing $250,000, including additional seating capacity and wanted the additional rent to help defray this added expense.

The Cardinals' management asked that the Browns be enjoined from evicting the National League club, and this would deprive the club of a playing field, as there is not now another field in St. Louis suitable for major league games.

HORNSBY AND MISS PENNINGTON LICENSED TO WED

Permit Was Issued Feb. 28 —No Report on Whether Marriage Has Been Performed.

HE WAS NAMED IN HER HUSBAND'S SUIT

Clerk Says That Ballplayer and Divorcee Called at His Home — Hornsby Now in Florida.

Rogers Hornsby, star infielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, and National League batting champion, has taken out a license to marry Miss Jeannette Pennington, a divorcee. Hornsby was divorced by his first wife last June, after the ballplayer had been named in a suit by Miss Pennington's former husband, to set aside her divorce.

The license was issued on Feb. 28, but kept secret until today, owing to a "mistake" by Marriage Clerk Ruedi. The day after it was issued Hornsby left St. Louis to go in spring training with the Cardinals at Bradentown, Fla., where he still is. It is not known whether he has been married for the second time, as no return has been made on the license. Miss Pennington—or Mrs. Hornsby—is believed to be in St. Louis.

Gave His Age as 27.

Hornsby gave his age as 27 and his St. Louis residence as the Jefferson Hotel, in applying for the license. Miss Pennington said she was 22 years old and resided at 1143 North Union boulevard.

A letter alleged to have been written by Hornsby figured in the hearing last May of a motion by John A. Hine, an automobile salesman of 1346 Bayard avenue, to set aside a divorce granted his wife, the former Miss Jeanette Pennington, on Feb. 20, 1923. Hine testified he found the letter in his former wife's apartment during one of several visits to try for a reconciliation.

The letter was dated March 5, 1923, at Bradentown, Fla., according to a typewritten copy read in court, and stated:

"You ask in your letter whether my wife will come back to St. Louis. I am not sure, but it will be better for us two if she don't, as you know the detectives were hot on my trail." It concluded with a paragraph of endearment and was signed, "Your loving sweetheart, Roge."

Hornsby's Explanation.

Hornsby appeared in court during the hearing, but was not called to testify. Hine's motion was denied. In a statement at the time, Hornsby said he met Miss Pennington at the dog races in East St. Louis, but never knew her as Mrs. Hine. He admitted meeting her on two other occasions, but denied escorting her to various cafes and resorts in and around St. Louis. He said he had once received a letter from her regarding baseball and he had answered it as he answered all "fan" letters. He denied the "Roge" letter.

No mention of the Hine case was made during the divorce proceedings by Mrs. Sarah Hornsby last June. She charged indignities and the ballplayer made a general denial, but did not contest. In a prepared statement, after she had been granted a decree of divorce and custody of their son, Rogers, 3, Mrs. Hornsby said: "Mr. Hornsby is not guilty of any wrongdoing in the Hine matter." She added Hornsby had made a settlement by which she received approximately $35,000.

Mrs. Sarah Hornsby checked out of Hotel Chase last Saturday, leaving word that she was going to Joplin, Mo.

Bought House in County.

It was announced on March 19 last that Hornsby had bought a 12-room house and two acres of ground at Midland and Longfellow avenues, St. Louis County. The sale price was said to be $15,000.

Marriage License Clerk Ruedi, explaining today how a license had been issued to Hornsby and kept secret, said Hornsby and Miss Pennington called at his home, 3758 Laclede avenue, the evening of Feb. 28 and obtained the license "without disclosing that he was the famous ballplayer, and that both parties had figured in divorce suits." Ruedi said he put the record of the issuance in his pocket and then "forgot" to turn it in at the city hall for it to be published in the newspapers.

Hornsby, interviewed today at Bradentown, denied he is married. Informed that a license has been issued, he declined to make any statement, maintaining it was a private matter.

CHANGES IN PARKING RULES FOR DOWNTOWN

New Traffic Council Adopts Regulations to Become Effective Thursday.

The Traffic Council, created under the new traffic ordinance, held its first meeting today and adopted several rules, one of which eliminates parking on Olive street between Fourth street and Twelfth boulevard, Fourth street between Olive and Locust streets, Locust street from Fourth to Broadway, and Broadway from Locust to Olive. Only commercial vehicles are excepted from this rule and their parking is limited to 15 minutes.

The rule was adopted on recommendation of Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk, who believes it will be necessary ultimately to stop all parking in the congested district.

Other changes made were to prohibit parking within 12 feet on either side of fire plugs, instead of 10 feet as heretofore; also double parking and parking beyond street intersections. The rules will become effective Thursday and will continue for 90 days, at which time an ordinance embodying them must be introduced.

Lawyer Contends No Traffic Ordinances Are Effective Now.

After Herbert Finke, 3220 Vista avenue, was fined $15 in Police Court today for careless driving, his attorney, John Neu Jr., announced he would appeal on the ground that no traffic ordinances are effective at present.

He said he would contend that when the new traffic ordinance was signed by the Mayor 10 days ago, it repealed all old traffic laws. He also will claim that the new ordinance cannot be effective until it has been published in the city journal, which publication will be made April 3.

It was stated at the City Counselor's office that ordinances carrying an emergency clause, as did the traffic ordinance, are effective immediately upon being signed by the Mayor, regardless of whether or not they have been published in the city journal.

BROOKHART COMMITTEE TO CONTINUE INQUIRY; MOVE IN SENATE TO OUST ROOSEVELT

RESOLUTION BY DILL DECLARES AID WAS MORE CULPABLE THAN DENBY

Cites That Assistant Secretary of Navy Carried Oil Reserve Control Transfer to Harding to Be Signed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Demand for removal from office of Theodore Roosevelt, assistant Secretary of the Navy, was renewed in the Senate today by Senator Dill (Dem.) of Washington.

Asserting the assistant secretary was far more culpable than was his superior, Secretary Denby, in the leasing of the naval oil reserves, the Washington Senator introduced a resolution, declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that President Coolidge should call for his resignation.

The resolution charges Roosevelt with having been a director of the Sinclair Oil Co. previous to entering the Government service and stresses that he ordered marines to remove oil claimants from the Teapot Dome reserve.

Ouster Resolution.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was a director of the Sinclair Oil Co. previous to his entrance into the Government service;

"Whereas, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy he personally carried the executive order to the White House for the President to sign, which order transferred the control of the naval oil reserves from the Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of the Interior; and,

"Whereas, on July 29, 1922, Mr. Roosevelt, then acting Secretary of the Navy in the absence of Secretary Denby, ordered the United States Marines to remove all oil claimants from the naval reserve No. 3, and thereby made an outrageous use of the armed forces of the United States Government to perform acts which should have been performed only by civil officers on the order of a Court after due hearing of all the facts in the case;

"Now, therefore, Be it resolved, it is the sense of the Senate that the President should be and he is hereby requested to ask for the resignation of Mr. Theodore Roosevelt as Assistant Secretary of the Navy."

Recently Roosevelt was severely criticised before the Oil Committee by Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, the committee leader, and several Democratic Senators have declared on the Senate floor that the Assistant Secetary's close relationship with former Secretary Denby should have impelled him to follow his chief into retirement.

Fails to Find Thompson.

Failure of subpena servers to locate William Boyce Thompson, former chairman of the Republican National Committee's Finance Committee, was reported to the committee today by the Senate sergeant-at-arms.

The oil committee is in recess today, having put off until tomorrow its plans for delving further into the financing of the $1,600,000 deficit incurred by the Republican National Committee in the 1920 campaign. William Boyce Thompson of New York was summoned for questioning on the basis of reports that Sinclair stocks figured as security and for retirement of campaign loans.

SINCLAIR INDICTED ON CONTEMPT CHARGE FOR HIS REFUSAL TO TESTIFY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.

HARRY F. SINCLAIR, lessee of Teapot Dome, was indicted by a Federal grand jury here today on contempt charges growing out of his refusal to testify before the Senate oil committee.

The indictment was in 10 counts, each referring to a specific question asked the oil operator when he was last before the committee. The grand jurors held that these questions, all of which Sinclair refused to answer, were "pertinent to the matters and questions then under inquiry before the said committee."

The action was the first grand jury move to develop from the oil inquiry and is expected eventually to result in a Supreme Court ruling on the broad question of the authority of Congress to summon and question witnesses in investigations like those now in progress. This authority Sinclair has questioned.

Sinclair is not now in Washington, but his attorneys have indicated that he probably would come to the capital without compulsion to answer to the charges against him.

Section 102 of the Revised Statutes, under which the indictment was returned, provides of both fine and imprisonment. The fine is from $100 to $1000 and the imprisonment of from one to 12 months in the distirct jail.

BRITISH AIR MAIL PILOTS STRIKE WHEN PAY IS REDUCED

Men Employed by New Combine Taking Over Route, Say Proposed Rates Are Inadequate.

By the Associated Press.

CROYDON, England, March 31.—An unprecedented strike was begun here today—a strike of the airmen in the service of the concern which carries the British air mails—when the pilots and mechanics connected with long-distance flights ceased their work because of a dispute with the new air combine regarding rates of pay.

At present the pilots receive £450 to £550 yearly, with flying pay of 10 shillings hourly, bringing the aggregate pay in some cases to £850 (about $3600). The new combine, the "Imperial Air Transport Co.," which is just taking over the air mail services, proposes to pay £100 yearly to some of the airmen and £200 to others as their regular pay, with two pence per mile flying money. The men consider these rates insufficient.

None of the long-distance airplanes left the airdrome at Croydon, whence the air mail starts for the Continent, and the ban has been extended also to machines which could get out and back again during the day.

THEATER SEATS BOUGHT FOR MONTH AS POLITICAL HANDOUT

Space in New York Playhouse Sold to Democrat Who Will Entertain Convention Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Charles Dillingham announced last night that he had sold all the orchestra seats in one of his theaters for the entire month of June to one man, whom he described as a prominent New York Democrat, to be used for complimentary distribution among delegates to the Democratic National Convention. It was described as the largest single purchase of "hand-out" tickets New York has ever known.

The purchaser, Dillingham said, refused to have his name made public and, therefore, would receive no political benefit from his gift of 18,842 seats, unless his name accidentally became known. At regular prices the seats would cost more than $75,000.

NEGRO VOODOO DOCTOR ELECTROCUTED FOR MURDER

By the Associated Press.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., March 31.—Lorenzo Savage, negro "voodoo doctor" of Pittsburg, convicted slayer of Miss Elsie Barthel, a nurse, was electrocuted at the penitentiary here today. Savage went to his death calmly. He made no statement as he was taken to the chair. No one claimed the body, which will be buried in the prison cemetery.

The slaying of Miss Barthel occurred last summer. Her body, with the head crushed, was found near a deserted house in the East End district of Pittsburg. Prosecuting attorneys charged that Savage killed Miss Barthel when she refused to pay for a "love charm."

GOING INTO FAILURE TO ACT IN WAR FRAUD CASES

OBJECT IS TO AID NEW ATTORNEY-GENERAL

G. B. Means Held as Witness Despite Court Order for Him to Return to New York.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee decided today to continue its inquiry despite Daugherty's retirement from the attorney-generalship to private life.

At the same time committee members announced they intended to hold Gaston B. Means, former Department of Justice investigator, in attendance under a Senate subpena, in spite of the issuance today of a bench warrant by the Federal Court at New York, ordering Means returned there to answer charges of conspiracy.

Wheeler's View of Order.

When news was received of Judge Garvin's order in New York for Means' arrest, the committee took up the subject in executive session.

"This is an apparent attempt on the part of H. C. Todd, the special assistant to the Attorney-General, in charge of Means' prosecution, to block this investigation," said Senator Wheeler, the committee prosecutor.

"It is the committee's purpose to keep Means here as a witness, and to retain his services for the committee. Of course, that prosecution at New York could be conducted at any time."

Means testified early in the committee's procedure, telling of money payments made to Jess Smith in connection with pending cases.

A decision on the motion before the committee to have Mal E. Daugherty, brother of the former Attorney-General, cited to the Senate for contempt for failure to respond when subpenaed, was postponed. The question may be decided later.

At the open hearing tomorrow, the committee will replace on the witness stand H. L. Scaife, former investigator for the Government in war fraud cases.

Committee's Decision.

Two courses lay before the committee when it met behind closed doors today—preparation for a quick windup or switching attention from Daugherty's personal conduct and relationship to an examination of war fraud, antitrust, and other phases of the work of the Department of Justice.

The latter course was favored by most of the committee members. Senator Wheeler (Dem.), of Montana, leader of the inquiry, expressing this view, has explained that the "object will be to clear up the situation for the new Attorney-General.

"Our purpose will be to show up corruption, if there has been corruption, both in the nonprosecution of antitrust cases and in nonprosecutions of war frauds," Wheeler said.

Picking an Attorney-General.

President Coolidge moanwhile is going forward with his survey of the situation with a view to selecting a new Attorney-General. He is described as feeling that the new Attorney-General must be a man thoroughly versed in law, possessed of administrative capacity and holding unmistakably the public's confidence. It is understood, however, that he has not settled upon any individual among the

MELLON INQUIRY ABANDONED AFTER DEBATE IN SENATE

McKellar Resolution Laid Aside Indefinitely in Face of Republican Opposition and Division Among Democrats.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Faced with a determined opposition from the Republican organization, and lacking united support among the Democrats, the resolution to investigate Secretary of the Treasury Mellon was laid aside indefinitely today by the Senate.

After two hours of debate and many conferences among the Democratic leaders, the proposal was permitted by its author, Senator McKellar, (Dem.) Tennessee, to go ot the Senate calendar. From that parliamentary status, i will be difficult to again bring it before the Senate for action, and some Senators believe no serious effort will ever be made to do so.

Many administration officials saw in the day's developments a significant turn in the situation on Capitol Hill. Unlike the resolutions dealing with Secretary Denby and Attorney-General Daugherty, the Mellon resolution evoked immediate and apparently united opposition from the regular Republicans.

The Democrats, who have been credited in cloakroom gossip with a desire to put through a definite program of attack against one cabinet official after aonther, did not join extensively in the debate, but put their heads together at a number of conferences over the question of keeping the measure ahead of pressing legislation.

It was manifest, too, during the debate that interest was lagging, and toward the close the chamber was almost empty. The reference of the resolution to the calendar was effected without a word of protest from Senator McKellar, and the Senate proceeded smoothly to the consideration of a pension bill.

Mellon was called upon by Senator Couzens (Rep.) Michigan, to furnish the Senate committee investigation the Internal Revenue Bureau with a list of all the companies "in which Mr. Mellon is interested."

Legal Questions Considered.

Senator Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, informed the Senate that the legal questions raised by the McKellar resolution had been considered fully before Mellon accepteed the Cabinet post.

Mellon had been advised of the old statute prohibiting a Treasury Secretary from engaging in trade or commerce, Reed said, and had endeavored to evade Cabinet service on the strength of these restrictions. The late Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, a former Attorney-General and Secretary of State, was consulted, and had the law examined by a firm of Washington lawyers, who on Jan. 25, 1921, gave an opinion that there was "nothing in the ownership of stock in various corporations to disqualify Mr. Mellon from holding the office of Secretary of the Treasury."

This opinion, at the request of Senator Overman (Dem.) of North Carolina was read to the Senate.

Says Mellon Didn't Want Job.

Former Judge James H. Reed of Pittsburg told Mellon of the statutory restrictions when his name first was mentioned for the Treasury portfolio, Senator Reed said, and as Mellon "had no particular enthusiasm" for the Cabinet office, he came to Washington to ask Senator Knox to tell President-elect Harding that he could not serve. It was the belief of Senator Knox, supported later by the legal firm of Faust & Wilson, Reed continued, that he need only retire from active management of his various companies and from directorships he held to remove the legal restrictions.

The counsel employed by Knox stated that the eligibility of Mellon was only sloudy in one respect—as it might be affected by that section of the statute which says a Treasury Secretary can have no "interest directly or indirectly" in commercial organizations.

Applying a rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the Delaware & Hudson case and reaffirmed in the Reading case, both arising under the Hepburn act, the attorneys held that the mere ownership of stock in a corporation carrying on trade is not an interest direct or indirect within the meaning of the law. Should any questions arise relating to any of the corporations in which he owned stock, it was added, they could be handled by an assistant secretary or some other officer of the Treasury.

Unable to Hold Bank Stock.

Reed said attention also was directed to section 10 of the Federal Reserve act, which provides that no member of the Federal Reserve Board can be an officer of "or hold stock in" any banking institution. As the Secretary of the Treasury is a member of the board, the Washington law firm was asked to examine that question also. The lawyers found that it was only necessary for Mellon to dispose of all bank stocks in order to qualify for the Cabinet job.

When Mellon decided to accept the appointment, Reed said, he accordingly sold "every share of stock" he held in Pittsburg banks, including the Mellon National, founded by his father, and also his holdings in the National Bank of Commerce at New York. He added that Mellon also had divested himself of all directorships and corporation offices he held, and that "he even came to us to ask if he should resign" as an officer of Pittsburg University and hospital and charitable organizations."

On advice of counsel, he retained his minority stockholdings in the Aluminum Co. of America, the Gulf Oil Corporation and the Standard Steel Car Co.

"We, believing then and now, that he had a right to do so," said Reed.

Robinson Disclaims Responsibility.

After the resolution questioning Mellon's legal qualifications came up for debate Democratic chieftains went into a series of conferences on the wisdom of recognizing the resolution as a party measure.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, returning to Washington after an absence of several days, immediately disclaimed responsibility for the move to have the Treasury Secretary's business connections inquired into.

There plainly was a difference of opinion among the Democrats as to the expediency of keeping the McKellar resolution ahead of pressing legislation as a subject of Senate discussion. Senator Robinson, who said the resolution had been introduced without his knowledge, quickly canvassed sentiment on the Democratic side.

Replying to that part of the McKellar resolution, which refers to Mellon's interest in the Overholt Distillery at Pittsburg, Senator Reed declared the distillery had not been operated since Dec. 15, 1916, and that not one quart of its intoxicating spirits had been sold or released since prohibition, and that the company was now in the hands of the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburg, for the winding up of its affairs.

When an offer was made by an English company for purchase of the property, said Reed, Mellon urged the trust company to reject the offer, because he feared the liquor exported might again be smuggled into this country and fall into the hands of bootleggers.

Democrats Approved Tax Refunds.

"Secretary Mellon transferred his whole interest in the enterprise," the Senator said, "to the Union Trust Co. of Pennsylvania as trustee to close up the business absolutely. He has retained no control or discretion or authority whatever in the matter. When the business is finally liquidated, he will be entitled to his proportion of the net proceeds and no more."

Taking up the tax refunds to the Gulf Refining Co. for 1918-19, Reed said the company had been required to pay millions "illegally" and, after long discussion, "a Democratic Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Mr. Williams, under a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Houston, made a decision on Feb. 28, 1921, fixing the company's assessment for those years and thus the amount of the refunds."

"The check was written on instructions of the outgoing Democratic administration," Reed said, "although it was mailed out after Mellon came into power. He didn't even know the refund had been paid until long after."

The specific charge in the McKellar resolution as to tax abatement allowances of $2,631,000 to the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies S. S. Co., Reed said, fell to the ground because Mellon "does not and never did" own a share of stock, a bond or a promissory note of this company or any of its subsidiary or allied companies.

Should the construction of the statutes contended for by Senator McKellar prevail, Reed argued, the President, in looking for a Secretary of the Treasury, "would be restricted to the poorhouses or to Heaven."

McKellar Explains Resolution.

McKellar, in a speech explaining his resolution, declared Secretary Mellon occupies exactly the same position under the law as Alexander T. Stewart, in the Cabinet of President Grant, who resigned the office of Secretary of the Treasury after Congress had refused to pass an act exempting him from the law. Secretary Stewart was willing, McKellar declared, to sell "every dollar of his property," but nevertheless resigned because he was disqualified from continuing in office.

The Tennessee Senator obtained unanimous consent to strike from his resolution the paragraph relating to the tax refund of more than $2,000,000 to the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamshop Co., saying he would accept the statements of Senator Reed and Mellon that the latter was not now interested in that company. He asserted, however, that the "facts admitted here" as to Mellon's continued ownership of Gulf Oil stock made it clear beyond a doubt that he was "interested or concerned" in the oil business.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the Republican leader, interrupted, saying that the matter of the refund to the Gulf company "was closed under the previous administration," but McKellar said the actual payment of the refund took place after Mellon came into office.

"I'm not charging these companies with receiving favors from Mr. Mellon," continued McKellar, "I'm charging that Mr. Mellon was interested in the ownedship of them in violation of the statute."

Republicans Defend Secretary.

"A severe stretch of the examination will be required," said Senator Edge (Rep.) of New Jersey, "to consider the Secretary of the Treasury disqualified for service to his country. Apparently we've gone back to 1789 for an old blue sky law, which I classify with statutes forbidding delivery of packages on Sunday—old obsolete laws to which we pay no attention and never consider in a sensible discussion."

"Surely the Senator doesn't object to our going back for our law," interposed McKellar. "The Constitution is even older."

"We would be better of if we followed that document more closely," replied the New Jersey Senator.

Edge declared that "even if Mr. Mellon should demand it, as now seems likely," he would oppose any investigation of the Treasury head by the Senate.

Senator Fess (Rep.) of Ohio asserted that operation of the Treasury under Mr. Mellon constitutes the greatest fiscal achievement in the history of the United States, with the possible exception of that of Alexander Hamilton. He reviewed the various steps taken to refund the floating debt and cited statistics showing the steady decline in the national debt.

OGDEN M. HOAGLAND.

OGDEN M. HOAGLAND, former musical comedy actor, was bequeathed $250,000 in the will of Mrs. George B. Wilson of Philadelphia as a "token of my appreciation of his friendship at a time when most needed."

Friends of Mrs. Wilson, who was 72 years old when she died, said Hoagland had been her traveling companion in Africa and had advised her in the purchase of orchids, of which she was an enthusiastic collector. Hoagland has assigned his legacy to the sons of Mrs. Wilson. His stage name was Jack Henderson.

MYERS DENIES HE BLOCKED SCAIFE'S AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

Special Assistant to Attorney-General Also Says He Was Not Appointed Through Wickersham.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senate committee investigating the Department of Justice affidavit from A. F. Myers, a special assistant to the Attorney-General, flatly denying testimony given last week by H. L. Scaife, who at one time was attached to the Department of Justice and assigned to investigation of aircraft audits.

"Taking up the testimony of the said Scaife, as reported in the newspapers," Myers' affidavit says, "I say that the statements attributed to him, to the effect that I blocked him in any investigation of the Standard Aircraft Co., or of any other company, and that I was appointed to my position through the influence of Hon. George W. Wickersham, attorney for the Standard Aircraft Co., and all the inferences and innuendoes intended to be conveyed thereby," are wholly untrue.

"Didn't Possess Authority."

"Not only did I not block Scaife in the manner in which he seeks to convey," Myers says, "but I did not possess the authority to do so had I been so minded."

Myers says that from the hour of his designation by the Assistant Attorney-General to aid Scaife, the latter exhibited "openly his resentment and manifested a disposition not to co-operate in any way."

The affidavit sets forth a version of an instance where Scaife had demanded of the War Department certain documents relating to the Glenn L. Martin Co., compliance with which the War Department, then conducting an audit in aircraft cases, reported would impede their work.

"Never Quoted in Full."

"I sent a memorandum to Scaife," Myers says, "stating the circumstances as related to me, and inquiring whether he still desired the document in question. This memorandum, from which Scaife has occasionally quoted a sentence, but which, so far as I am informed, he has never quoted in whole, was purely and simply a request for information which I wanted to submit to the Assistant Attorney-General for decision. Instead of complying with said request, Scaife, on Jan. 5, 1922, sent me a memorandum claiming I had blocked him in his work and stating he would take up the matter with Col. Goff (then Assistant Attorney-General) and not with me."

Myers quotes Scaife's memorandum saying his investigation was being blocked, and a reply he sent, saying he could not "allow to pass unnoticed such a statement."

"No Connection" With Work.

"Col. Goff," Myers said, 'subsequently informed me that, in his judgment, in view of the peculiar disposition evidenced by Scaife, he (Scaife) had better be permitted to carry on his work without reference to the work being done by other employes under the arrangement," and that from that time on he (Myers) "had no connection, direct or indirect, with the investigation of any aircraft manufacturer or aircraft contract."

"At the time of the interchange of memoranda with Scaife, as just described," said Myers, "I was wholly unacquainted with the fact that Scaife was doing any work in connection with the Standard Aircraft Co.; no audit of that company's contract had come to my attention and I did not know that one was being made; least of all did I know who were the attorneys for the company.

"Especially false and unwarranted is the statement, often repeated by Scaife, that I was appointed to my position by former Attorney - General Wickersham. Even if such were the fact the inferences sought to be drawn would be unworthy of any perosn not consumed by envy and suspicion. The simple fact is that I have been in the Department of Justice for nearly 16 years. I was first appointed by Attorney-General Bonaparte."

Myers said he "asserted on information and belief" that former Assistant Attorney-General Goff never made the statement that he was appointed through influence of Mr. Wickersham, as testified by Scaife, and says he believed Scaife's allegation was founded on the fact that Scafe saw a letter or letters to him from the Wickersham firm written in the ordinary course of departmental business. He also includes a copy of a letter from Mr. Goff denying Scaife's charge as to Mr. Wickersham's influence as well as a letter from Mr. Wickersham and excerpts from the Congressional Record at the time of the Daugherty impeachment proceedings in the House as bearing out his contentions.

The affidavit winds up with the statement that Myers has been informed that the reason no case has been brought against the Standard Aircraft Co. was that an audit has only recently been completed.

COOLIDGE (KAN.) CITIZENS RIGHT PROUD PRESIDENT IS "NAMED AFTER THEM"

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COOLIDGE, Kan.

THE 14 inhabitants of this little Kansas town are right proud to have a President of the United States named "after them."

And Coolidge, Kan., wants it ot be distinctly understood that it was named Coolidge long before anyone, with the possible exception of Calvin Coolidge's mother, ever dreamed he would be President.

Coolidge, Kan., is one of four towns in the United States which bear the name of the chief executive. The others are in Georgia, Montana and Massachusetts. This particular Coolidge was founded more than 40 years ago, when the Santa Fe Railroad extended west from Dodge City into Colorado, and was named for a Coolidge of Massachusetts, who was director of the Santa Fe at that time.

EXPENSE "$3 A VOTE" FOR COOLIDGE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Senator Norbeck's Estimate of Cost of President's Losing Primary Campaign in State.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Charges that "there was much more evidence of lavishness" in the Coolidge primary campaign in South Dakota than was noted in the Wood and Lowden campaigns in that State in 1920, when criticism of the expenses resulted in a Senate inquiry into campaign funds, were made today in a telegram from Senator Peter Norbeck, a leader in the Johnson campaign.

Senator Norbeck, pledged to the Johnson candidacy, was elected as a delegate at large in the primary last week.

The telegram challenged the denial of William M. Butler, national director of the Coolidge forces, that excessive amounts were expended in North Dakota. "The statement of the Coolidge management as to their expenses in South Dakota is untrue in many respects," the telegram said.

"They spent about $15,000 in advertising alone, during only the last week, misrepresenting Hiram Johnson's record. During this period the Johnson committee spent only $200 for advertising. Paid Coolidge organizers were numerous in trains and hotels. Paid workers were much in evidence on the street corners of our villages and towns.

"Checks were sent into the smallest villages by the Coolidge organization with instructions to draw for more if needed. A daily newspaper was established in the State capital to champion the Coolidge cause. There was a large army of South Dakota men and women on their payroll. They maintained elaborate headquarters under the direction of Federal employes. Expensive offices and organization forces were maintained in towns and cities. I believe the expenses would average $3 for every vote they received."

PROGRESSIVE DEMOCRAT WILL WIN ELECTION, SAYS WALSH

Criticises Coolidge and Drops Hint of Own Candidacy if McAdoo Is Not Named.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Headed by an able and progressive presidential nominee, the Democratic party will win at the polls in November, United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, moving spirit of the Washington oil investigation, predicted yesterday in his room at the Hotel St. Regis. His prophecy of Democratic victory, he said, was made on the harm done the Republican administration by revelations of graft and corruption in connection with leasing of the naval oil lands.

Who the "able and progressive" Democrat is, Senator Walsh did not reveal, although he intimated that if William Gibbs McAdoo, whom he has supported hitherto, was not named at the Democratic national convention, he might enter the race himself.

Failure by the Democrats to nominate a progressive candidate, Walsh said, would enable a third party nominee to carry at least six Northwest states and might throw election of a President into the House of Representatives for the third time in the country's history.

"I feel that the political effects of the oil investigation will be far-reaching," he said. "Obviously, because the Republicans were in power at the time these things took place, it is to be assumed that the results will be especially disastrous to them. I think the people will believe the country is not safe in the hands of men who control the destinies of that party.

"I don't think Mr. Coolidge has carried out the assurance he gave the public when the revelations broke, that he inteaded to use the power of his office to ferret out the facts and bring the grafters and corruptionists to justice.

"Up to the present, I don't know of a thing he has done."

LEONARD KLEINLEIN, 56, A FLORist, of 1443 Clinton street, suffered a fracture of the left ins and scalp wounds at 4:30 p. m. yesterday in a fall as he was crossing the street in front of 4355 Easton avenue.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—One particularly important reason why Senator Wheeler, and at least two of his associates, are disposed to push their inquiry on rapidly for the next month or two is that reports have been made to them that within the next few weeks the statute of limitations will operate to halt the prosecution of those who have been involved in their disclosures and there is little hope at this late date that, unless the committee pushes this matter, prosecution would be brought about in any other way.

It is learned that within the last week a large bag of documents containing important evidence concerning aircraft corporations had been stolen. The documents in question had been collected by Capt. H. L. Scaife while a special agent in the Department of Justice and kept by him under lock and key for the last three years.

Early last week he placed them in a large brown bag and took them to the office of Senator Wheeler for examination by some of the lawyers attached to the committee. While everybody was absent from the office someone slipped in and took them away. A quiet search has been made for them and for the thief since, without disclosing even a clue to his identity. Capt. Scaife, however, believes he has duplicates of most of the more important papers and is now getting them together.

At least two members of the committee will not be satisfied until W. J. Burns has followed his chief into private life. Commenting on the necessity for continuing the investigation, Senator Wheeler said:

"By getting rid of Mr. Daugherty, who was obstructing us, Mr. Coolidge has made it possible, if he chooses to extend his co-operation, to make a real cleanup of the Department of Justice. With the department properly functioning it will then become possible for alleged corruption in other departments to be properly dealt with. We intend to go right through with this thing. I think the majority of the members of the committee feel as I do in the matter, that the revelations have little more than begun. There is the liquor conspiracy in several parts of the country, the aircraft scandal, which grows to greater proportions each day we dig into it and which must under the circumstances be dealt with speedily, the Mexican neutrality situation, the anti-trust cases, and a deplorable condition which exists in the Federal penitentiaries. While Mr. Daugherty was primarily responsible in each of these matters, he was not solely responsible and other men who failed in their duty must be cleaned out."

MEANS' $15,000 BAIL FORFEITED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Federal Judge Garvin today ordered a bench warrant issued for the arrest of Gaston B. Means, former agent of the Department of Justice, who is under indictment for conspiracy to violate the Volstead law and whose trial was to have begun here today.

When Judge Garvin called the case of Means and his former secretary, Elmer W. Jarnecke, both named in the conspiracy indictdiment, John T. McGovern, counsel for Means, declared his client was in Washington and would not be able to appear here because he was under subpena by the Senate Committee investigating the Department of Justice.

Hiram C. Todd, Assistant Deputy Attorney-General, moved that Means' bail of $15,000 be forfeited and that a warrant be issued for his arrest. Judge Garvin granted the motion. The Government attorney asserted that Means twice had failed to appear for trial and had given illness as his reason. He declared the District Court here took precedence over the Senate Committee.

The indictment against Means, returned Oct. 18, contains four counts, the first alleging he entered into a conspiracy to obtain the release of 12,000 cases and 12,500 barrels of whisky from Government warehouses.

The second involves 55 barrels of whisky, the third 88 barrels and the fourth charges conspiracy and use of the mails to defraud in connection with an attempt to obtain $75,000 from a man in Chicago for the release of liquor from Government warehouses.

MAULDING CO. IS DENIED WRIT AGAINST RECEIVERSHIP

State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh Now May Investigate Firm's Records.

The Maulding Co., 315 North Tenth street, was denied a permanent writ of prohibition against State Finance Commissioner's receivership action by the State Supreme Court today and Millspaugh may now investigate the firm if any records are left to examine.

The company moved to halt involuntary receivership after Millspaugh learned that it had been operating an alleged lottery system of selling furniture. A temporary writ of prohibition was granted the concern and this prevented Millspaugh from seizing assets and records. The company then filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

Millspaugh acted on complaint of several women customers of the firm that they had joined $1-a-week furniture clubs and had got nothing for their money. The plan as reported by the complainants was that some members of the furniture clubs holding lucky numbers got $55 worth of furniture before they had paid the required 55 weeks' dues, while less fortunate customers were given furniture not worth $55.

PRODUCE TAX RESTORED

Senate Committee Also Puts Levy on Promissory Notes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The taxes on produce exchange sales and on drafts of promissory notes were restored to the revenue bill with the rates of the present law today by the Senate Finance Committee.

The House had cut in half the present tax on sales of produce exchanges, amounting to two cents for each $100 of value, and had stricken out entirely the tax on drafts and promissory notes, amounting to two cents for each $100. The first cut, it was estimated, would reduce revenue $4,000,000 and the latter $2,150,000. Secretary Mellon had not proposed either of the reductions. The sections of the bill providing for taxes on cigars and tobacco were agreed to by the committee.

OREGON'S SCHOOL LAW HELD INVALID

Catholic Sisterhood Wins Suit Filed in the Federal District Court.

PORTLAND, Ore., March 31.—Oregon's compulsory public school law was declared unconstitutional in an opinion rendered in Federal Court here today.

The opinion was rendered on a hearing en banc by Circuit Judge W. B. Gilbert and District Judges C. E. Wolverton and R. S. Bean. The law, which requires children of grammar school age to attend a public school, will have become effective Sept. 1, 1924.

The Court made it plain that it acted on the proposition that constitutional rights of parents have been contravened by the law just as much as the rights of the complaining organizations.

"Parents and guardians," the decision, "have an interest the constitutional rights of complainants to see that their schools may be maintained for the benefit and use of the parties concerned."

The decision declared that the Court has the right to enjoin enforcement of a State law that deprives a citizen of constitutional rights or deprives a corporation of its property without due process of law, and then proceeds to join the defendants from enforcing the law on those grounds.

The compulsory public school law was adopted by a vote of 115,506 to 103,685, after a heated campaign. The bill, originally proposed by the Scottish Rite Masons, became one of the main issues in the general election of 1922, being backed by the Federated Patriotic Societies and the Ku Klux Klan.

The Oregon school law requires parents to send their children to the public schools. When it was adopted by referendum in 1922 it was generally regarded as a blow at parochial schools.

The suit to test the law was filed in the Federal District Court at Portland last August by the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary, a Catholic order that conducted schools in various parts of the State.

The validity of the law was also tested on the ground that it took properly seized property, restricted the rights of parents, children and teachers; and violated the contract between the State and schools created under the corporation laws.

Gov. Pierce Will Appeal Case to U. S. Supreme Court.

SALEM, Ore., March 31.—On being informed today that the compulsory public school law of Oregon had been declared unconstitutional by the Federal Court at Portland, Gov. Walter M. Pierce said the case would be appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

SEVEN FARMERS ON JURY FOR TRIAL OF JIMMY HOGAN

GANGSTER CONVICTED AT HIS FIRST TRIAL

State Supreme Court Reversed Verdict—Pillow, Chief Witness, Slain After Being Threatened.

Seven Franklin County farmers are on the jury which was chosen at Union today to try James Hogan, member of the Hogan gang, for the second time, for the robbery of Erris Pillow, negro bank messenger, in St. Louis, April 4, 1921. The other jurors are two restaurant men, one insurance agent, one shoe worker and one foreman of the local corncob pipe factory.

As in his previous trial, Hogan leaned forward and glared at the first of the State's witnesses, who showed some signs of being disconcerted, and who had difficulty in remembering some matters. This witness was A. J. Green, clerk for the North St. Louis Savings Trust Co., by which Pillow was employed. He was questioned as to the money and checks which Pillow carried at the time of the robbery, and Judge Breuer permitted some questions to which the defense objected as "leading." The Court said that, because of the time which has elapsed, it was natural that the witness' memory should need to be refreshed on some points.

Identifies Canvas Bag.

The witness did not remember the figures as to the amount of money that Pillow carried, but he identified the canvas bag used by Pillow, as being of the sort that the messenger used, and he identified also a $500 treasury certificate figuring in the case. He erred in giving the location of the police station which he visited after the robbery, saying it was on Olive street. the station is on Laclede aveneu.

Before the jury was selected, Hogan made several expressions of cheerfulness, and asked reporters if there would be "big headlines" about him again. A number of his friends are attending the trial. Extra Deputy Sheriffs are on duty in the courtroom, but there were few local spectators.

William Losemann, who was called next, is the surviving direct witness to the robbery. He told of having seen two men attack a third man at the southeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Washington street, and saw one of the men throw a coat over the third man's head. The man who was attacked dropped a satchel, which one of his assailants seized. The two then threw the third man into an automobile and drove away.

Losemann said positively that Hogan was one of the two men whom he saw attacking the third man. The third man (Pillow) the witness did not see to notice his features, and did not even see his color, because of the coat over his head. Hogan made comments to his lawyers, during Losemann's testimony.

The defense lawyers tried an odd expedient, by which witnesses are sometimes confused, on Losemann. They asked him what kind of clothes he himself was wearing at the time, and he told them. They then asked him what he wore on several other dates in 1921, and he said he was wearing the same. When they took the question back to 1920, he was not certain as to the apparel then.

Surprise to Hogan.

Losemann's presence as a witness at the second trial appeared to be a surprise to Hogan and his friends, when they say Losemann on the train going to Union last night. Losemann was sitting with Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnston and a Police Sergeant, and he shared a hotel room with them.

Losemann testified in Hogan's first trial, at Union two years ago, in which Hogan was convicted and his sentence fixed at 15 years' imprisonment. This conviction was later reversed by the State Supreme Court, and there has been uncertainty whether Losemann would be available as a witness in the second trial. Before the first trial, Losemann telephoned to the Chief of Detectives that he had been threatened with death if he testified at Union.

Chief Witness Murdered.

A threat of this kind gained weight from the fact that Erris Pillow, chief witness in the case, was murdered, after similar threats had been made against him. However, the police located Losemann, and he was persuaded to go to Union and testify, which he did without apparent reserve or timidity. As two years have passed and he has not been molested, he says he is ready to give evidence again.

At one time recently, Losemann got out of touch with the Circuit Attorney's office, but he was on hand when the time came to go to Union.

"I am not scared," he said to a

He erred in giving the location of the police station which he visited after the robbery, saying it was on Olive street. The station is on Laclede aveneu.

Before the jury was selected, Hogan made several expressions of cheerfulness, and asked reporters if there would be "big headlines" about him again. A number of his friends are attending the trial. Extra Deputy Sheriffs are on duty in the courtroom, but there were few local spectators.

William Losemann, who was called next, is the surviving direct witness to the robbery. He told of having seen two men attack a third man at the southeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Wash street, and saw one of the men throw a coat over the third man's head. The man who was attacked dropped a satchel, which one of his assailants seized. The two then threw the third man into an automobile and drove away.

Losemann said positively that Hogan was one of the two men whom he saw attacking the third man. The third man (Pillow) the witness did not see to notice his features, and did not even see his color, because of the coat over his head. Hogan made comments to his lawyers, during Losemann's testimony.

The defense lawyers tried an old expedient, by which witnesses are sometimes confused, on Losemann. They asked him what kind of clothes he himself was wearing at the time, and he told them. They then asked him what he wore on several other dates in 1921, and he said he was wearing the same. When they tok the question back to 1920, he was not certain as to the apparel then.

Surprise to Hogan.

Losemann's presence as a witness at the second trial appeared to be a surprise to Hogan and his friends, when they say Losemann on the train going to Union last night. Losemann was sitting with Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnston and a Police Sergeant, and he shared a hotel room with them.

Losemann testified in Hogan's first trial, at Union two years ago, in which Hogan was convicted and his sentence fixed at 15 years' imprisonment. This conviction was later reversed by the State Supreme Court, and there has been uncertainty whether Losemann would be available as a witness in the second trial. Before the first trial, Losemann telephoned to the Chief of Detectives that he had been threatened with death if he testified at Union.

Chief Witness Murdered.

A threat of this kind gained weight from the fact that Ferris Pillow, chief witness in the case, was murdered, after similar threats had been made against him. However, the police located Losemann, and he was persuaded to go to Union and testify, which he did without apparent reserve or timidity. As two years have passed and he has not been molested, he says he is ready to give evidence again.

At one time recently, Losemann got out of touch with the Circuit Attorney's office, but he was on hand when the time came to go to Union.

"I am not scared," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter on the train. "I think the only time I was really afraid was one night in France, with the Twentieth Field Artillery. I was sent out to walk a post where the sentries had been shot dead on each of the three nights before. I was scared, and I fired my automatic at every sound that I heard. That probably saved me, for we found next day that four escaped German prisoners had been sniping our sentries from a haystack."

Testimony at First Trial.

In the first trial, supplementing Losemann's testimony, it was shown by other witnesses that Hogan was seen running near the Compton avenue viaduct, after the automobile had been wrecked in a collision there, and that he was arrested in that neighborhood. This testimony is the chief feature of the State's case in the second trial, and no legal obstacle to its admission has appeared.

In the first trial, policemen testified that Pillow identified Hogan, after Hogan's arrest, as the man who had covered his head with a coat and robbed him. The coat was produced in court, and markings in the pocket, "J. B. H." and "J. B. Hogan," were exhibited. As Hogan did not testify, the prosecution was not permitted to try the coat on him.

The testimony, as to the statement of the deceased Pillow, was the cause of the Supreme Court's action reversing the verdict. At the time when the testimony was given, the defense lawyers objected to it, but Judge Breuer admitted it. Circuit Attorney Sidener said afterward that he had not intended to bring out this statement in the police testimony, but that the first of the police witnesses had "blurted it out," and that, after the objection was overruled, there was nothing to do but to go ahead and confirm it by the other police witnesses. He said there were two lines of judicial decisions, one of which would have admitted such evidence.

The Supreme Court opinion, reversing the verdict, pointed out that the court had ruled repeatedly that when one is under arrest, charged with a crime, he is under no duty to make any statement concerning that crime, nor under any duty to deny charges made against him; therefore, that statements (such as Pillow's) tending to implicate him, even though made in his presence, are not admissible in evidence against him: The Hogan opinion also quoted scripture concerning Christ's trials before the Jewish Sanhedrin and before Pontius Pilate, before whom He was silent.

An Alibi Defense.

The defense in the first trial depended chiefly on an alibi. It also offered testimony by a man who said he saw the robbery, and declared Hogan was not there, and testimony that Hogan was christened "James Henry," in refutation of the inference that the coat marked "J. B. H." was his.

Hogan was convicted of burglary in St. Louis in 1917 and was paroled by former Gov. Gardner through the political influence of his brother "Jelly Roll" Hogan, member of a State Legislature, who is head of the Hogan gang.

In his first trial, Hogan was represented by Jacob H. Mackler, St. Louis gang "mouthpiece," who was murdered in gang warfare last year. This time he has no St. Louis lawyer. James Booth of Pacific represented him at the opening of the trial today and Frank H. Farris of Rolla was expected to arrive later. The prosecution was started off by Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnston, with the expectation that Circuit Attorney Sidener would arrive in time to direct the State's testimony.

This is the first St. Louis trial to be held in the New Franklin County Courthouse, which has been completed since the trial of Cashier Meininger of the Night and Day Bank was held in Union last May. The Meininger trial and Hogan's first trial, were held in a skating rink.

GANGSTER ON TRIAL AGAIN FOR ROBBERY

JAMES HOGAN.

Attorney-General Takes Action Following 4 to 3 Decision of the State Supreme Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Attorney-General Barrett today filed a motion for rehearing by the Supreme Court of the case of Arthur O. Meininger, convicted looter of the Night and Day Bank of St. Louis, in which the court, by a vote of 4 to 3, made permanent a preliminary writ barring prosecution of Meininger on 46 additional indictments because he already had been sentenced under one conviction.

This ruling, on a turning point of one vote, blocked further prosecution of Meininger, for the present at least, pending disposition of an appeal by Meininger from his conviction at Union on May 31, 1923, and sentence to five years in the penitentiary on a charge of embezzlement.

Grounds Set Forth.

The motion for rehearing closely follows the dissenting opinion filed in the case by Judge J. T. Blair, in which Judge White and Judge David E. Blair concurred. It sets out these grounds for rehearing:

"That the court in its majority opinion overlooked a decisive question in the case i. e. that the court quoted with approval a ruling in a previous section 22, article 6, of the Constitution of Missouri and section 2436, revised laws of Missouri, giving to Circuit Courts general jurisdiction of all crimes.

"That the court overlooked a previous decision holding that there is no constitutional nor statutory want of jurisdiction in Circuit Courts to try persons under penitentiary sentences for the commission of felonies.

"That the court in a previous decision held that the trial of a defendant previously sentenced under one felony, for another previously committed, is error, but not want of jurisdiction."

Cites Additional Cases.

The Attorney-General cited additional cases to show the Supreme Court had held the Circuit Court had jurisdiction to try one undergoing sentence or life imprisonment in the penitentiary for another murder, and that the court, in another case, had held that one under one sentence of felony might be tried and sentenced for another felony and that the terms of imprisonment so assessed should run concurrently.

In suggestions presented with the motion for the rehearing, it was pointed out that the court, by a majority of one vote, had held to an obsolete ruling followed only by the Missouri court. This rule is that a defendant, once sentenced on a conviction, cannot be tried for another offense committed prior to the sentencing.

Much importance was attached in the majority opinion to the holding in a previous decision in the case of ex-parte Meyers, that Missouri Circuit Courts "have no common law jurisdiction of felonies," it was stated in the suggestions.

"No Authority Cited."

"No authority is cited in the Meyers case for this statement, the suggestions continued nor is any reasoning advanced in support of it," says the Attorney-General. "We contend that the statement quoted was loose grammatical construction and what the learned Judge intended to say was 'Circuit Courts in Missouri have no jurisdiction of common law felonies,' for that is true."

Present Aspect.

"In the present aspect of this case, as shown by the record," the suggestions continued, "the people's interests as regards this malefactor, charged with some 40 crimes involving the savings of the people and the integrity of a financial institution, are in imminent danger of extinction, either at the hands of the scylla of this decision on the one nand, or the charybidis of the decision of the State ex rel. Stevens vs. Wurdeman, holding the courts without jurisdiction to try the defendant after more than three continuances, on the other hand.

"Should the original case now suspended, pending appeal, be reversed, and in the meantime by reason of this decision, preventing Meininger's trial upon any other charges, those charges should have to be continued more than three terms and thereupon the court ousted of jurisdiction to entertain them, under the ruling in the Stevens case, the result will be that Meininger may go unwhipt of justice.'"

Precedent Cited.

As has been related, Judge Walker, who wrote the majority opinion, cited the Meyers' decision as a precedent of the court in holding that the limitations upon the trial court's power where separate sentences are to be passed on the prisoner, which will subject him to more than one term of imprisonment, are that the different convictions upon which the sentences are based be obtained previous to the sentences. Following Meininger's conviction by Franklin County jury at Union May 31, 1923, he immediately was sentenced by Judge Ransom A. Breuer. The defense took an appeal and had a year from the date of the appeal in which to perfect it.

When the State announced its intention to try Meininger on additional indictments at the November term, 1923, Meininger's attorneys obtained a preliminary writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court, staying the trials on the ground his sentence barred further trials for offenses committed previously to the sentence.

This preliminary writ was made permanent by the Supreme Court in its opinion handed down March 12, last.

EX-SOLDIER, MISTAKEN FOR PACIFIST, ROUGHLY HANDLED

He Later Explains to University President That Fellow Students Misjudged Him.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Patriotic students of Northwestern University nearly mobbed an anti-pacifist today under the mistaken impression he was a student "pacifist."

Isador Spector, a Russian, an anti-pacifist, who fought for Russia against Germany and against the Turks and later fought the Bolshevists and still bears the wounds of battle, afterward told Dr., Walter Dill Scott, president of the university, that he was glad to see the students were "ready to fight."

Spector, who is struggling to obtain an education and who speaks English with difficulty, for two days has been trying to express his view that pacifism might lead to Bolshevism. He sought yesterday to e allowed to speak at a patriotic meeting held by Northwestern University and the Evanston Post of the American Legion. The meeting was not permitted, however, to deviate from its program.

Today in the business law class, Spector attempted to make some remarks, but was prevented. The students believe he was trying to air pacifist views and after class a group surrounded him, thust his coat and hat on him and told him to get off the campus. Later he went to President Scott and explained his views and the mistake of the students.

It was explained at the university that Spector is a close student of Hebrew and the Bible.

At the meteing yesterday, President Scott said the attitude of the university was that "we should risk all in defense of our country."

A negro burglar broke into the home of Thomas M. Brady at 5243 Nottingham avenue, early yesterday, ransacked a bedroom where two guests were sleeping and carried Brady's 8-year-old daughter, Katherine, from her second-floor bedroom to the kitchen, where he dropped her to the floor and escaped when the mother called.

Mrs. Brady was asleep in the room adjoining her daughter's when, just before dawn, she awoke to hear the child crying. The bed was empty when Mrs. Brady ran in, and cries from the floor below drew her downstairs. "What's the matter, baby?" the mother called as she ran downstairs. Katherine was lying on the kitchen floor when Mrs. Brady ran in. The negro, she said, had dropped her and ran out the kitchen door when her mother called.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Keilty, who had slept in a second-floor room, told police the burglar had ransacked their room, taking a purse with two rings worth $160.

STREET CAR CUTUP NO LONGER TO HARASS THE STRAPHANGER

Street-car cutups who shoot pins at passengers' ears with rubber bands and try to rock trailers off the track and squeal and giggle are in for trouble hereafter.

This morning police took six youths and four girls from a Broadway car, northbound, at Chippewa street and Broadway. United Railways conductors had complained of a crowd of about 20 girls and boys who had been wont to make merry on Broadway cars to the annoyance of other passengers. The 10 arrested were members of this group.

William Sofka, 20, of 439 Hoffmeister avenue, must go to Police Court on a charge of peace disturbance, the five other boys face sessions in Juvenile Court, and the girls were warned by a Police Captain and released.

Determination of the fair valuation is necessary, the application stated, before any reorganization of the properties can be effected.

Gerard B. Cleary, 39, Shot While Trying to Stop Row at Gravois Avenue Saloon and Dance Hall.

MAN SLAIN WAS FORMER POLICEMAN

Had Intervened in Dispute Between City Counselor's Son and Arthur Hartman, 27—Slayer Flees.

A fight over a girl ended in the murder of Gerard B. Cleary, 39 years old, of 4976 Arsenal street, president of the Guarantee Service Co., in the darkened barroom of a saloon and dance hall at 4100 Gravois avenue, at 12:30 a. m., today.

Cleary, who was trying to stop the fight, was shot in the abdomen and died later in an ambulance on the way to city hospital. The slayer fled. Witnesses told the police he was Arthur Hartman, 27, of 4427 Wilcox avenue, a service car driver.

Oliver Senti Jr., 24, of 4329 Juniata street, son of the City Counselor, escorted Miss Viola Brennecke, 3942 Winnebago street, to the dance hall, and they were seated at a table when Hartman, a former suitor of Miss Brennecke, entered at about 11:30 p. m., and took a seat at another table.

Girl Departs After Quarrel.

Later Miss Brennecke and Hartman danced together and Senti became angry. Following a quarrel with her escort, the girl put on her hat and coat and announced she was going home. Hartman volunteered to take her home in an automobile and she went with him.

Half an hour later, when Hartman returned to the dance hall, after having taken Miss Brennecke home, he followed Senti into the barroom, where Senti was in conversation with a friend, Theodore Endejan, of 4331 Connecticut street. The lights in the barroom had been extinguished at midnight, and the three men stepped into a washroom, where a light was burning.

"Are you looking for trouble?" Hartman asked Senti.

Endejan stepped between them and held out his arms as though to shield Senti from a blow. Hartman knocked Endejan down and beat and kicked him, at the same time drawing a revolver from his pocket.

Runs Into Dance Hall.

Senti ran into the dance hall, where Cleary was seated at a table with several other men, and informed the party there was a "gun play" in the barroom. Cleary, who formerly was a policeman, ran into the barroom and Hartman pointed his revolver at him.

"If you move closer I'll shoot!" yelled Hartman.

Cleary continued to advance and Hartman fired twice. One bullet entered the floor, the other struck Cleary. As the latter fell, Hartman ran out through a back door.

Although the witnesses remained in the saloon, the police were not notified of the shooting until after Cleary had been taken to the hospital. A policeman on duty at the hospital learned from the ambulance driver where the shooting had occurred and informed the Mounted District. When policemen reached the saloon the flow from Cleary's wound had been washed from the floor.

Eight persons found in the saloon, including Senti, Endejan and Mr. and Mrs. George Leikam, the owners of the establishment, were taken to the Mounted Station, where they gave an account of the shooting to Capt. Hanna. Mrs. Leikam said she was in a kitchen adjoining the barroom when Hartman began beating Endejan. She looked out, she said, saw a revolver in Hartman's hand and then returned to the kitchen. Later she heard the shots.

Miss Brennecke today called at the Hartman home at the request of detectives to see if she could ascertain the whereabouts of the missing service car driver. Later she told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she wished Hartman would surrender to the police and give his version of the shooting. She expressed the belief that he was attacked before he fired the shots. She said the story, related by witnesses, that she had accompanied Senti to the dance and had allowed Hartman to accompany her home was true.

Cleary was a policeman from January, 1917, until June, 1918, and again from July, 1919, until May, 1922, when he resigned to enter private business. The company, of which he was the head, hauls payrolls in armored cars from banks to corporations. The business was started as a result of the numerous payroll robberies in the city.

HYDE ORDERS POLICE STATISTICS ON CRIME

Governor Interested in Particular in Disposition of Cases by Prosecutors.

Crime and the punishment thereof in St. Louis is under investigation by Gov. Hyde, it became known today when the Police Department record clerks began compilation of statistics for the last six years at the Governor's request.

Assistant Chief Rundle and the entire force of clerks in the record room at Police Headquarters went to work this morning on the records with expectations of an all day and all night task. The Governor particularly wished to know how cases referred by the police to the courts were disposed of by prosecuting authorities.

Hyde requested this data of President Brockman of the Police Board, who gave Rundle his orders. Brockman has repeatedly complained in speeches that courts and juries fail to properly co-operate with the police in criminal cases.

Hyde Makes Statement.

Gov. Hyde explained to the Post-Dispatch over telephone today that he was anxious to ascertain whether charges that "enforcement of law in the cities had broken down" and to that end had asked for statistics on arrests and dispositions of felony cases in St. Louis and Kansas City.

"There has been quite a furore down there about the matter," the Governor said, "and I want to find out about it. I don't know whether I can do anything, even if there has been. I will see about that when I get the facts. My inquiry has no other significance and does not indicate expectation of a political attack or intention of making changes in either Police Board."

WELFARE LEAGUE HEAD URGES YEAR-ROUND HALF-HOLIDAY

Rev. Rufus Putney Makes Recommendation to the Associated Retailers.

Closing of stores for half a day each week during the entire year is recommended to the Associated Retailers in a letter sent today by the Rev. Rufus D. S. Putney, president of the Missouri Welfare League.

The half-holiday is urged as a means of preventing delinquency and to promote efficiency. Thousands of women workers remain away from churches on Sunday to repair clothing or clean homes, because they have no time for such tasks during the week, the letter declares.

In a letter to the Board of Education the Rev. Mr. Putney asks the board to set a tax rate which would make possible increased supervised recreational activities during the summer months and use of schools for community centers during all the year.

COURT ORDERS RELEASE OF G. W. HENDERSON

April 10 Set as Date to Permit of New Sanity Hearing, if Desired.

Circuit Judge Frey today ordered the release of George Wallace Henderson, president of a pickle and vinegar company at 511 North Second street, who has been incarcerated in the City Sanitarium since last October. Henderson, in a habeas corpus suit heard last Friday, attacked as void the proceedings in Probate Court by which he was committed. Judge Frey upheld his contention, but set April 10 as the date for his release in order that another sanity hearing may be held at which Henderson could be present represented by counsel.

Henderson was incarcerated at the instance of his wife, Mrs. Mildred Henderson of 1701 Wagoner place, who said he had acted strangely, threw his money away and had a propensity to drive his automobile at full speed. Physicians testified he is suffering from visions of grandeur and recommended confinement.

Judge Frey, in his opinion, declared that there was nothing in Henderson's conduct on the stand to indicate insanit, and that his mind seem unusually active. His story of mistreatment at the sanitarium, in the light of recent revelations, could not be indicated as evidence of insanity, he said.

"If press reports are accepted, many outrages have been perpetrated at the sanitarium," he commented. "It must indeed take persons devoid of all characer and without any of the milk of human kindness to beat an insane person. It is indicated that the situation has been corrected and it is hoped that this is true."

Judge Frey pointed out that the Probate Court issued no order of committment when Henderson was confined last October, but declared his ruling was not to be construed as a criticism of that court. He ordered that Henderson be permitted to employ counsel and confer with them to prepare for his defense in a new hearing.

FIVE SCHOOL GIRLS ILL WITH AN UNUSUAL MALADY

Irena Blankenship, 16 years old; Beatrice Blankenship, 12; Gladys Meathery, 16; Vera Baggott, 16, and Vonna Baggott, 15, all living in the Meathery School neighborhood, north of Mulberry Grove, Ill., have been seriously ill for several days with a malady of unexplained origin, diagnosed by local physicians as tetany, an inflammation of the colon, affecting the voluntary muscles and causing hysteria, spasms and unconsciousness.

Irene Blankenship and Gladys Meathery were stricken Tuesday afternoon at school and were taken to the home of Mrs. Ellen Tippe, near by, where a doctor was called. In the evening Beatrice Blankenship went to see her sister and was stricken during the visit. The other two took sick Wednesday.

They are all still sick, but are thought to be out of danger. An investigation is being made to ascertain the cause.

STORK UNBELIEVER IN DIVORCE, HELIGOLAND OBSERVER NOTES

Female Returned Without Male, but Welcomed Him Back After "Unsurper" Was Thrown Out.

By the Associated Press.

HELIGOLAND, March 31.—Storks are monogamous and they do not believe in divorce. Dr. H. Weigold, of the Ornithological Observatory on this island, has made this discovery after long observation.

For many years a stork couple, which the observer had marked, lived in an old windmill. In the Spring of 1923, only the female stork returned from her winter vacation in Africa. In a short time she mated with a strange male.

But the missing "husband"-suddenly returned and immediately attacked the "usurper." The fight was so bitter that the two males fell out of the nest and continued their battle on the ground. But the "husband" won and the wife welcomed him back into the nest.

Easy Terms of Payment Places One in Every Home

THIS is the first time in months that we have been able to accumulate, at one time, a sufficient quantity of "Miltons" to advertise.

So great has been the demand for this fine Player-Piano, that it has been necessary for us to place orders months ago to insure a sufficient number of instruments for this extraordinary announcement. We now have two carloads ready for delivery.

We purchased them as an Anniversary feature because we consider the "Milton" Player the best obtainable for this low price.

AN enviable reputation is not the result of mere chance. It is built by years of adherence to a policy of making only instruments of fine quality.

Milton Players Are Equipped With the

GUN, THROWN BY WOMAN, KILLS HER

Weapon, Tossed Out of Doors, Discharged on Striking Step, Police Are Told.

Members of the homicide squad, after investigating the death of Mrs. Genevieve Gerhard, 32 years old, of 1209 South Cardinal avenue, at the city hospital last night from a gunshot wound, have concluded it was caused by her own act in flinging out of doors a shotgun which was discharged when it struck.

Her husband, George B. Gerhard, returned home after midnight Saturday night. He had been at a club on Cardinal avenue, near Chouteau avenue, and had been drinking. A quarrel ensued and Mrs. Gerhard awakened their 8-year-old son, William, and left the house.

Gerhard says he thought she had gone to get her brothers to beat him, as she had threatened to do, and he took his shotgun from under the bed and leaned it against the dining room table. Mrs. Gerhard went instead to the clubroom and protested against the sale of liquor to her husband. When she returned in half an hour she found the gun leaning against the table.

"I'll get rid of this thing," she exclaimed, and flung it through the open door. It discharged when it struck and Mrs. Gerhard received the full charge in her abdomen, she said, at the city hospital. Her husband made the same statement at the Soulard Station. Sergt. Linder found the hammer of the gun broken off and the edge of the doorstep splintered, where the hammer seemed to have struck it.

So the accident version is accepted, but Gerhard is held for the Coroner's jury. Meantime the son is beign cared for by neighbors.

23 COMPANIES FIGHT FIRE AT PLANT OF SHOE CONCERN

The plant of the Huette-Bourquin Shoe Co., 611 North Jefferson avenue, formerly used as a clinic by the Washington University Medical School, was the scene of a fire yesterday which required all the efforts of 23 companies to extinguish. The loss was estimated to be $185,000.

Patrolman Leahy, walking his beat at 7:30 a. m., noticed smoke issuing from a third-story window and turned in an alarm. The fire spread rapidly and soon a general alarm was sounded. The fire was under control after four hours.

The damage to the four-story brick building was placed at $35,000, all insured, by the owner, George Burdeau, 805 Chestnut street. Damage to the stock, partially insured, was estimated at $150,000, by Ellsworth Bourquin, president of the shoe company, who said a watchman should have been in the building at the time the fire started, but it is not known that he was.

THREE KILLED WHEN FIRE DESTROYS MICHIGAN HOSPITAL

Orderly Dies in Vain Attempt to Rescue Two Patients After Giving Alarms.

By the Associated Press.

NEGAUNEE, Mich., March 31.—Three persons were killed when fire, believed to have been caused by a defective chimney, last night destroyed the Negaunee Hospital. Alex Martison, 21 years old, night orderly, gave his life in vainly trying to save Mrs. Richard Sjolund, 45, mother of eight children, and Jack Eddy, 53, pioneer resident of Negaunee.

After arousing Sophia Lukenen, a cook, and enabling her to escape, Martinson and Miss Ingeborg Persons, nurse, attempted to rescue the three patients in the institution.

Miss Impi Latinen, a waitress, recently operated on, was brought out safely. Her condition is critical. Firemen later brought out the bodies of Mrs. Sjolund and Eddy. Martinson was found alive, but died later.

The hospital was destroyed with a loss estimated at $35,000.

Cod Liver Oil Now In Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

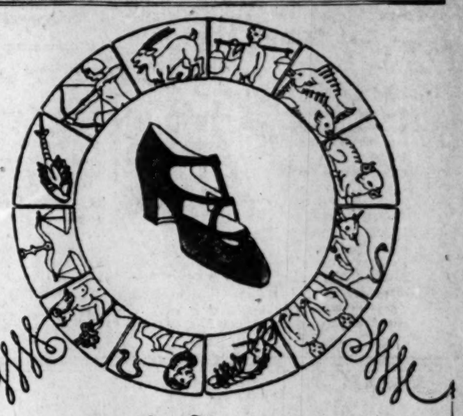

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of magnesia.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only sixty cents for 60 tablets. Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet.

Mothers!

Give the Children WRIGLEY'S after every meal

"Dentists have found that the exercise of gum chewing brings about a better nutrition of the teeth . . ." "The cleansing action of the gum between the teeth helps to keep them free from the particles which lodge in the crevices and cause decay."

You know how hard it is to get the children to clean their teeth. By giving them WRIGLEY'S you not only reward them for cleaning their teeth, but the reward is actually the means of performing this important service!

WRIGLEY'S is a benefit and a pleasure combined. It serves two purposes—and its cost is very small.

HEARINGS SET FOR BIRTH-CONTROL BILL

Spencer Is Chairman of Senate Subcommittee That Will Consider Measure.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senator Spencer of Missouri, chairman of the Senate subcommittee for report on the Cummins-Vaile birth control bill, announced today that public hearings on the bill would start April 8 before a joint subcommittee of the judiciary committees of both houses.

Other members of the Senate subcommittee are Norris of Nebraska and Overman of North Carolina. Representative Sam C. Major of the Seventh Missouri District is a member of the House subcommittee.

Missouri may decide the fate of the bill, for the State has two Senators and two Representatives on the two Judiciary committees. Senator Reed is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Representatives L. C. Dyer (Rep.) of St. Louis, is on the House Judiciary Committee.

This fact is emphasized in the statements of the Voluntary Parenthood League, the sponsor of the bill, which says, however, that Missouri is one of the 24 States in which doctors are prohibited from giving contraceptive information. The league endeavors to prove that this information would be of value in the State by quoting letters said to have been received from there.

One paragraph of a recent statement said: "From the chairman's State, Missouri, come some of the saddest and most insistent letters from baffled parents in dire need of contraceptive instruction. Discouraged mothers write to the Voluntary Parenthood League that the bill cannot pass soon enough to help them."

Support for Bill Cited.

The league also says that the bill has the support of the St. Louis Woman's University Club, the Council of Jewish Women, both of St. Louis and Kansas City; Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Cook, Phil Rau and Charles Hubbard of St. Louis, Dr. Irene Blanchard of Webster Groves, Mrs. Walter McNab Miller of Columbia and Homer Talbot of the Jefferson City Associated Charities.

Regarding the qualifications of the members of the Senate subcommittee, the league says:

"Senator Spencer has an honorary title of M. D. from the Missouri Medical College, where he was professor of medical jurisprudence. This fact is thought to add materially to the preparation he has for considering the bill from the broad standpoint of health and welfare.

"Senator Norris has long felt that the old Comstock obscenity laws need renovating, and aside from a mental attitude that is constructive, he brings to the consideration of the bill a clean-mindedness that is of special advantage in dealing with a subject of this sort.

"Senator Overman, also, while not having given his special judgment on the bill, has shown a most reasonable and human approach to the subject."

Spencer Noncommittal.

Senator Spencer told the Post-Dispatch that he was not prepared to give his judgment on the bill as it stands.

Sponsors for the bill declare it will rectify the blunder committed by Congress in 1873 which hurriedly passed the proposals of Anthony Comstock. Under the present law, contraceptive information is classed as obscene matter and cannot legally be sent through the mail. According to its sponsors, the Cummins-Vaile bill amounts to a legal declaration that contraception is not per se indecent.

The bill itself requires special medical indorsement for all contraceptive instruction and means. It does not, in the words of Representative Vaile, "limit the size of the family, legalize the crime of abortion, or make immorality safe."

Vaile cites that the United States is the only country in the world to penalize this knowledge as obscenity and points out that Holland and New Zealand, where contraceptive knowledge is general, have the lowest infant death rates and the highest ratios of increases of population of any civilized countries in the world.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Ten-year-old Pasquale Palonli's alleged theft of an orange from a peddler's cart Saturday is held responsible for the death of two men and the wounding of two others and a woman. Masso Vilillo, owner of a peddler's cart, died of bullet wounds soon after the pistol fight that followed Pasquale's alleged theft. Clestine Gentile, one of three other participants in the quarrel, died last night. The other two, both of whom were slightly wounded, were arrested and charged with murder. A woman shopper was shot in the leg and scores of others had narrow escapes.

Vilillo, the police say, gave the boy a severe beating when he found an orange missing and suspected Pasquale as the thief. The boy's father took Vilillo to task. Gentile ran to the aid of Vilillo and Samuel Granevese to that of the elder Palonli. Palonli and his friend are the two being detained.

Sheriff, Showing Handcuffs, Killed

By the Associated Press.

BRYAN, Tex., March 31.—Sheriff L. E. Moorehead of Brazos County, was shot and instantly killed Saturday night while taking part in a school play near here. Sheriff Moorehead was giving a demonstration in the handling of handcuffs when a bullet was fired through the window, striking him in the back of the head at the base of the brain. A youth, who was recently discharged from a naval hospital, is being sought. It is believed the assailant was demented.

GOODFELLOW LUMBER COMPANY — GOOD LUMBER — ALWAYS ON TIME

When You Buy a Home

THE BEST recommendation it can have is that lumber from the Goodfellow Lumber Company was used in its construction.

If Goodfellow lumber was used, the builder or real estate company can sell you an honestly built house at a fair price. There has been no loss by short measure or substitute grades to be covered up in the price.

When a contractor or builder orders lumber from the Goodfellow Lumber Company he knows he will get the exact quality, grade and footage he orders. This saves him the unnecessary waste and expense of trimming out or covering up inferior lumber which will dry rot and deteriorate quickly behind the plaster.

The Goodfellow Lumber Company has established a recognized reputation for square dealing and delivery of correct grades and full measure—always on time—to the job. It has grown until it is one of the largest and best equipped lumber concerns in St. Louis—the lumber distributing center of the world.

Before buying a house, it will pay you to ask if Goodfellow lumber was used

CAMPAIGN TO END ILLITERACY IN MISSOURI URGED BY BUNN

Elimination of all illiteracy in Missouri by means of an extensive educational campaign on the part of the Missouri Association is suggested by Paul W. Bunn, general secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, in a letter to J. E. Hull of Maryville, Mo., president of the association.

Bunn points out that there are 5,000,000 persons in the United States who cannot read or write—five per cent of the total population—and suggests that the association take up the task of remedying the condition in Missouri which ranks thirtieth from a standpoint of literacy. He urges support of the bill now pending in Congress for a Department of Education, with a Cabinet secretary in charge.

"Let us resolve to cut the number of illiterates in half within two years and see that within five years that every man, woman and child in the State can read and write," Bunn writes.

ALBRECHTS PLACED ON TRIAL

East St. Louis Men Accused of Dry Law Violation.

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ill., March 31.—Henry Albrecht Sr. and Henry Albrecht Jr., owners of an East St. Louis restaurant, and their bartender, Thomas Mahar, were placed on trial in Federal Court today for violation of the Volstead act, in nine counts. Judge Lindley declared affidavits of four East St. Louis klansmen were weak, but that the District Attorneys would be permitted to make new ones.

Frank Ellis and Louis Oldenburg, employes and co-defendants, were freed, charges being dismissed because of lack of evidence connecting them with the alleged violations.

OBREGON RECEIVES WARREN

U. S. Ambassador Presents Credentials—Papers Extol Him.

MEXICO CITY, March 31.—The diplomatic corps and all the high officials of the Mexican Government were present today at Chapultepec Palace when Charles Beecher Warren, the new American Ambassador, presented his credentials to President Obregon. Few receptions in honor of a foreign diplomat have equaled the event since the days of Porforio Diaz.

Excelsior printed a long editorial extolling Ambasador Warren and hailing him as an exponent of "international justice and friendship." The general opinion is that the coming of Ambassador Warren opens a new epoch in the friendly relations between Mexico and the United States.

Harvey Offers Democrats Advice.

By the Associated Press.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 31.—George Harvey, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who boarded the steamer Chattanooga for New York here yesterday, declared to newspaper men that Senator Robinson of Arkansas and Gov. G. S. Silzer of New Jersey were the best candidates the Democratic party could put forward for the presidency and vice presidency. Harvey also named Senator Borah as the best running mate for President Coolidge. He said it was doubtful, however, if the Senator would enter the race.

Vanderlip Files Answer in Slander Suit.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, today filed answer to the $600,000 slander suit brought against him by Louis H. Brush and Roy D. Moore, owners of the Marion Star, formerly owned by the late President Harding. The answer presented through his attorneys, declares the statementsmade by Vanderlip questioning the transaction by which the paper passed from President Harding to its present owners, were justified as "fair comment on matters and persons of general public moment and interest."

WESTERNER LIKELY TO BE NAMED FOR DAUGHERTY'S JOB

Considered Almost Certain the President Will Seek to Appease Demand From the Radicals.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1924.)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—President Coolidge will choose an Attorney General from the Middle West or West—and not from the East.

This much has been decided upon, though the individual who will fill all the requirements of the present situation has not yet been selected.

The President is giving consideration to the geographical questions which enter into the makeup of Cabinets. He already has a member from Massachusetts in the Secretary of War. The Democrats have been getting ready to raise the cry of New England domination in the Government since the Speaker of the House and the chairman of several important committees come from Massachusetts, as does the Republican leader of the Senate.

To add another man from Massachusetts would, it is recognized, simply add ammunition to Coolidge's opponents. Coupled with this is the fact that Chief Justice Rugg of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, who would be chosen if anyone from New England were taken, would hardly wish to take the Attorney-General's task at this time unless he could look forward to an appointment to the Supreme Court of the United States and there is no telling just when the next vacancy will occur.

Radicals Want Kenyon.

The outgoing Attorney-General came from the Middle West and it is natural that his successor should be chosen from the region west of the Alleghenies.

The radicals in the Republican party, as well as some conservatives, are clamoring for the appointment of Judge William S. Kenyon of Iowa, former member of the Senate. Unfortunately, these radicals have given the impression that they are dictating to the President. Some reports significantly indicated that if Mr. Kenyon were appointed, the investigation of the Department of Justice under Daugherty's regime would be slowed down. Coolidge doesn't want to be in the position of purchasing immunity for any department of his administration.

Then there is the fact that Judge Kenyon declined recently the President's offer of the Secretaryship of the Navy. Some people think he should have responded to a call for service, irrespective of personal convenience, and his argument then was that he was not temperamentally fitted for the position. What Coolidge wanted was not some one to worry about battleships, but about the efficient administration of the oil reserves of the country.

Kenyon, however, has spent his life in the legal profession. He was an Assistant Attorney-General under the Taft administration. It was natural for him to wish to remain on the bench rather than take the Navy portfolio.

While the President may not like some of the tactics of those who are pressing for Kenyon's appointment, he cannot fail to note that the demand is a significant show of strength and that to disappoint the radicals, and particularly the farm bloc, over which Kenyon presided when he was in the Senate, would be a severe blow. Indeed, it might be the indirect cause of a nomination of Kenyon to the presidency, if Senator La Follette should happen to be too ill to run.

Mentioned for Vice Presidency.

Some of the friends of President Coolidge, recognizing Kenyon's remarkable strength in the West, a strength due to his conscientious application to duty while in the Senate, are talking of him for the vice-presidential nomination. In fact, it would be most pleasing to Coolidge to have Kenyon as a running mate.

Would the Coolidge administration be in a better position to draft Kenyon for the vice presidency after he has served for a few months as Attorney-General? This is one of the questions being discussed in the inner circle. Certainly the same reasoning which prompted Coolidge to offer the secretaryship of the navy to Judge Kenyon is being applied now—for he carries conviction in the West. And Coolidge's principal attack has come from the West. It is the battleground of the next campaign.

At the moment Kenyon's candidacy for the portfolio of Attorney-General has awakened the interest of so many members of the Senate who have written to the President or communicated their thoughts to his advisers, that unless someone else with exactly his qualifications can be found who will satisfy both wings of the Republican party, the chances are still in favor of the appointment of the former Senator from Iowa.

The evolution of this enterprise does not find a counterpart for achievement in the annals of business history.

Its product filled a dire need, which has grown into a world-wide demand in a remarkably short time.

Its volume of business has doubled every year.

Today the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner Company holds the dominant position of leadership in the manufacture of domestic oil burners; an industry destined to equal the proportions of the world's industrial giants.

The Company has developed a complete line of oil burners for practically every heating purpose, including furnaces, ranges, heating stoves, water heaters, etc., which are now in use in every state of the Union and in most every country on the globe.

In solving the domestic fuel problem with an efficient, safe and economical oil burner, the Company, through quantity production, made a low price possible which accounts in a measure for their wide distribution; and are now serving more than 200,000 homes and satisfied users.

The simplicity and principle of the Oliver Burner is acknowledged by leading authorities to be correct for domestic purposes; this is emphasized by their popular use.

The figures and pictures here, showing the remarkable progress of the Company, both in sales and factories over the short period of six years, graphically tells its own story.

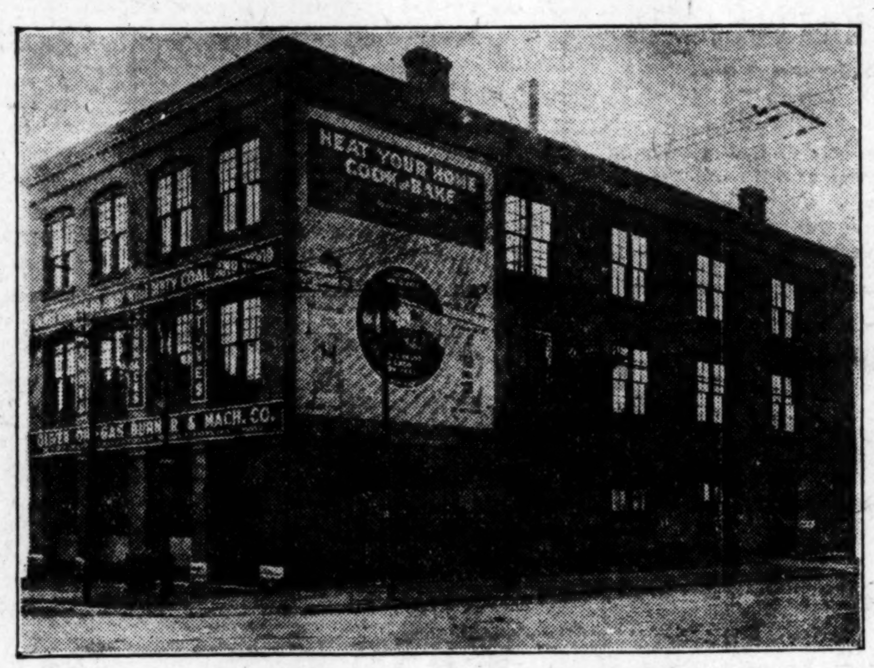

This illuminating record up to the present time, is a fair forecast of the future Oliver Oil-Gas Burner activities in manufacture and sales. The business now offers an unusual opportunity for a limited number of men of vision, seeking an investment in a rapidly growing enterprise to participate in our new capital issue.

Leading Figure In A New Big Industry

Son of a minister, and one of eleven children, born in Abilene, Texas, B. M. Oliver is the founder and now president of the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner Company. As a boy he sought to relieve his mother of the dirt and drudgery incident to the use of coal and wood for cooking and heating. Thus determined, he fashioned his first oil-gas burner from an old pipe and fitted it in the cook stove over which his mother toiled in Texas.

B. M. OLIVER.

Succeeding years found him working his way through college. He became prominent in athletics, which subsequently carried him into Y. M. C. A. work, college instructor, sales executive, and in 1914 found him in St. Louis as assistant general manager of the St. Louis Provident Association. Later he became manager of the Ross-Gould Company of St. Louis.

Oliver never lost sight of or forgot his early inspiration to supply a better means for cooking and heating. He spent over $50,000 of his hard earned money during 10 years of effort in experimenting and proving both the product and methods of merchandising. Then, in 1918, with only $2000 left, he succeeded in starting his first factory. It was very small. Today his factory is the largest of its kind in the world and the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner Company is known internationally. One needs, no vivid imagination to conceive the difficulties that Oliver, as pioneer in oil burning, successively met in blazing the trail and his way to the top of a great industry which prophecies to hold the leading position among the world's foremost industries.

A Reward Equaling the Wealth of John D. Rockefeller and of Henry Ford

Enormous Fortune in Store for the Genius Who Masters Domestic Heating Economically With Oil

The Oil and Gas Journal of August 16, 1923, says, " * * * Petroleum contains three wonderful properties—light, heat and power * * * * * Rockefeller developed light; Ford developed power. The third great stage in the history of Petroleum will unquestionably be recorded through the achievement of the development of exploitation of the element of heat. The whole world is now ready and waiting for the effective and inexpensive fuel oil burner for domestic use. There is not a single habitation on the face of the earth but requires heat in some one form or another. A wider market could not be possible. America awaits the rise of the third great genius to complete the development of the element of heat. Who shall it be? What fabled wealth shall be this reward?"

It is incomprehensible that the property of heat, though more evidently present than that of power, should be the latest to evolve.

The Fuel Question Has Been Answered

Newspaper dispatches from all parts of the country show increasing use of oil-burners in homes, apartment houses, factories and institutions.

The day when lack of coal can cripple a whole nation is drawing to a close. The oil-burner has settled the fuel question for all time, especially for domestic heating.

Two Thousand Dollars and an Idea

(All Rights Reserved.)

Everybody has opinions—some have ideas.

Six years ago $2000 and an idea were combined in a practical invention, which has made coal and wood no longer necessary for domestic heating.

Today this $2000 has grown to nearly $400,000.00.

Everyone must have heat in some form or another. As a human need it is second only to food, and the production of food is the world's largest industry.

A practical idea for improving an essential utility which presages universal acceptance, is indeed rare. This has been emphasized by the utter absence, until now, of any progression in our heating problems since the inception of the electric light, telephone or other improved and more convenient utilities, which have displaced primitive devices and methods.

And the nucleus of $2000 and a practical idea coupled with vision has established an oil-burner industry which has won international recognition, and a new fuel for efficient and economical heating has been placed within reach of all people.

The manufacturing of Oliver oil burners was started in St. Louis in a humble, small storeroom with only three people. The personnel grew to an organization of over 500, housed in the largest established domestic oil-burner manufacturing plant in the world; producing oil-burners to fit all types of heating furnaces, stoves and ranges, with a system that eliminates all moving parts, motors, fans, etc., greatly reducing purchasing and installation costs.

Already over 200,000 of Oliver burners are in service in homes.

Many installations have been made by the U. S. Government to heat lighthouses and for cooking on ships in the navy.

They are serving in all corners of the earth.

Public demand, which is sweeping the world for an efficient oil-burner, has been answered but not supplied. The era of oil for fuel has arrived.

In 1918, just six years ago, the total sales of these burners were $36,111.67. In the last six months of 1923 the sales were $1,016,271.51.

With an original cash capital of $2000 and an idea, this oil-burner business has grown to its present proportions.

This enormous volume has reached without the investment of a single dollar from any source but from the profits of the business.

In the past two years alone the Oliver Company has expended more than $500,000 in advertising its products through national mediums and a tremendous volume of printed literature. Every field has been covered—through farm papers, women's publications, burner papers, men's magazines, metropolitan dailies and such general publications as Literary Digest, Saturday Evening Post, American Magazine, Review of Reviews, and many others. The value of this national prestige is inestimable in figuring the future progress of the Company.

The public mind is now alive to the adoption of oil burners for domestic heating.

Leading journals are commenting favorably every day on this new industry.

Our largest refining companies are inaugurating house-to-house delivery to serve the constantly increasing number of oil-burner installations.

Worthy of note is this excerpt from an article in the August issue of the Oil and Gas Journal which says: "* * * A reward equal to the fortune of John D. Rockefeller or Henry Ford awaits the leader in this field * * *."

With the increasing demand for furnace burners, it is now essential to secure wide dealer distribution, in order that the attendant service and installation requirements may be handled satisfactorily. This means expansion in all departments and, obviously, additional capital.

To accomplish this the Company recently increased its authorized capital to $1,000,000, offering $300,000 of 7% Preferred and $300,000 Common. To each subscriber, to one share of Preferred at $100.00, the opportunity is open to secure ten shares of Common at $10.00. The Preferred issue is to be retired at the end of five years at $110.00 per share and provided for with a sinking fund equal to 20% of the total issue of the Preferred.

No money is needed for further experiments, mechanical or otherwise; the product is acknowledged by leading authorities to be correct in principle, which it has proven in practice.

Six years of success behind this oil-burner business, evidences its soundness. Its phenomenal growth is proof of its possibilities for investment.

If $2000 under the difficulties of the past has grown to nearly $400,000.00 in six years, it is hard to conservatively estimate what $600,000.00 additional capital in this business can grow to in a very short time.

There are only two types of investments—good and bad.

Radicalism Breeds in Gloomy, Ill-Smelling Flats Where 300,000 Dwell—Seven Sleep in One Bed—Disease Rampant.

The British Labor Government's acts already have shown it is not revolutionary, but there remains in the party a strong extremist wing, at the head and front of which are bitter Reds from Scotland. The conditions under which these men grew up shaped their political views. In order to make these conditions clear, The World and Post-Dispatch sent a member of its London staff to Glasgow, the center of this group. His story is contained in a series of vivid articles, of which the following is the second:

By WILLIAM BOLITHO.

GLASGOW—If revolution, that foreign harpy, despite the aliens' restriction act, is really lodged within the empire, and in Britain, it is in Glasgow we should look for her; and at some such address as this:

But the stranger and the superficial tourist would have little chance of seeing her at home. For Glasgow does not allow the people of these districts to keep the roads in the same state as their own rooms. It may even surprise a dweller in Blythwood or Kelvinside to hear that behind these ferocious, growning houses there is another city, hidden away forever in the dark, the back row of the chorus, the back lands—a city behind a city.

Inspector William Roy and Dr. Macgregor have undertaken to show me behind the screen. We go first to Anderston, once a handweaving village, now one of the worst congested areas. One thousand one hundred and forty-four families live in a room apiece in Anderston. In Cowcaddens, near by, there are as many as 2382 one-roomed flats. And Glasgow is a city of large families. The average number of persons to a room for the whole city, rich and miserably poor, kitchens included, is 1.79. For the one-roomed house there is an average of 3.2 persons for the room and kitchen, 4.70 for every flat.

"This Is the Back Green."

We pass through the stone passage to a back land, come into a courtyard that is no more than a crooked space between the back walls of the street tenements and the front walls of the back land. It is dark as the bottom of a Highland gorge. Growing in the corner against the face of the somber back land, as straight as a monster pine, is the turnpike stair, a circular stone turret, in the center of which winds the only stair to the scores of rooms within. Near it is an open stone pent-house, roofed with broken flagstones, under which are three rubbish bins. Cats and children are pursuing their mysterious plays on the loosely cobbled floor. "This is the back green," I am told. Names, after all, are the things that last. This is the last relic of those days when the citizens bleached their linen on the grass plot.

We enter the close—the door gap of black stone that leads to the winding stairs—and go up. On one side of the tiny landing opens a long, impenetrably black gulf, the central corridor of five homes. We feel our way, knock at a door and enter, calling out: "Sanitary." A small room, one side of which is taken up by the Scots fireplace, like an inclosed iron altar, with two hobs on which the teapot is kept everlastingly on the boil. The floor is worn wood, there are irregular square inches of frayed oilcloth.

An enormous drabbled woman, who is dressed in dirty dishclothes which do not show the dirt so plainly as her face, explains the arrangements. They are typical of all the 40,591. Some cleaner, some filthier, in strict proportion to the number of children and the ration of weak-eyed daylight that trickles through the guillotine window. Here she has five children and the gas is kept burning all day at the glimmer.

Symbol of Hope Among Poorest.

The elements are simple and human. There is the bed, set into a niche, deep, evil-smelling, strewed with heaps of the same material as her dress. The good man's chair, a flimsy, decrepit affair, of the sort known as "a bedroom chair," elsewhere sometimes an old armchair from the country, the hearth and chair; humanity's minimum, as simple as the Paramoun. But there is more left in the filter, the sieve of the back lands which inexorably sifts out everything that can be done without: sun, air, space, all superfluities; but leaves ornament.

On the mantelpiece are two china dogs, and between them curious shapes of solid brass, which I take up and find to be rough profiles of—women's boots, cut and scored out of a plate of metal. These or similar shapes of ships, money boxes, pillar boxes, are universal in Glasgow in the poorest den. So art and the making of things only for the eye, the instinct that left us prehistoric carved bones in those earlier caves, has left us traces of itself even here. Sheer primitive love of metals has something to do with it. On the wall are four burnished dish covers, with handles, shaped like the half of an egg, of the sort that boarding houses still use to cover the Sunday joint. Even the poorest houses have this ornament, memento, symbol of hope.

Ornaments Cleaned Weekly.

Every speck or brass in the room is polished; the floor may be dirty, the bed a nightmare; but the brass taps and fringe on the mantelpiece and the ornaments on it are cleaned every Friday night. "It is the custom," says the Doctor indifferently.

We go on, to other doors, other landings, other corridors like lanes in the night, other turnpike stairs, and back greens, and closes. My companions point out to me the "back-to-back" construction of all these dens, each of them ending in a dead wall, without possibility of a free current of air, "any more than there is in a deep hole of the rocks." From an architectural point of view, these are caves and the people, I suppose, anthropologically, troglodytes. They have their technique of life; a stranger thrown among them would have to learn the trick of living like sardines in a nasty tin. It seems impossible that seven, eight people could find a place for themselves even in the auspicious profundities of a satin bed. I am to see them at night. Under the cross purlins of the bed is, it appears, another, called something like a "huddly," which they draw out at night. Some of them try to separate the sexes in this way.

Disease Spread There.

I begin to hear stories of the meaning of nights, in spite of the huddly: Chief Constable Alexander Smith confirms them to me later, with details and figures. Incest, he says, is common, inevitable. Chief Constable Smith gives me his definite opinion:

"All the children in these tenements learn details about life usually and properly kept to a late age, as soon as they can think."

The medical officer of health, Dr. A. K. Chalmers, believes that venereal diseases are spread in a serious way by this overcrowding.

I visit two-roomed flats, kitchen and bedroom, find them little different, though here separation of the sexes is often practiced. The dwellers (we have statistics to guide us), however, have some greater chance of surviving. The general death rate from 1909-1912 (Chalmers: House and death rate) for males of all ages in one-roomed apartment in Glasgow was 27.26 per 1000 living. For those in two-room apartment houses, it was 17.07. For those in four-room apartment houses and upward, it was 12.89. For women, those in one-room apartments died at the rate of 24.90; those in two-room apartments died at the rate of 16.12. Those in apartments of four rooms and upward had a death rate of 9.19. Boy babies in one-room apartment houses died in the number of 210.25 per 1000 during this period, and 163.88 of every 1000 boy babies died in two-room apartment houses; 102.57 per 1000 died in four-room apartment houses. Girls preserved the same proportions, 163.64 per 1000 dying in one-roomed apartments; 123.31 in two-roomed apartments; 72.95 in four-room apartment houses.

Death Rate Reduced.

The figures of this rate of death since the period they were drawn up for, owing to the admirable efforts of the municipality toward sanitation, which I shall describe in outline later, reduced the general death rate from 19.4 to 14.06, but the same proportion, the same revealing differences between the chance of life for the overcrowded and the comfortable, remain.

There are no recent statistics for the different chances of life for the inhabitants of back lands and front lands, but I am assured it is considerably in favor of the latter. Nor are there exact estimates of the number of inhabitants of the back lands as a whole, but it may be put down, on the authority of the Department of Health, at between 30,000 and 40,000. The overcrowding and insufficient housing conditions generally are almost equally as great in front as in back lands, and, indeed, in most of the latter that I visited (about 50 houses) the lighting and air were very little better owing to the narrowness of the streets and the height of the tenements.

The minimum standard of space for a human being (children counted up to the age of 10 as half standard) is only 400 cubic feet (New York, 600 cubic feet), and the Labor Party figure at 600,000 persons living in the city under the standard of health out of a population of 1,081,983, probably includes 309,000 who do not enjoy this tight minimum of space and air. "The citizen of Glasgow," says a former medical officer of the city, Dr. J. B. Russell, in his book, "The Public Health Administration of Glasgow," writing in 1905 when conditions were not nearly as bad as they are today, "Has less of earth's surface than any other citizen of the realm."

And the unending dark, gloom; the smell, when clean cold has at last been beaten by putrefaction, among which these "best workmen in the Empire" live and breathe, that is unparalleled by any exotic misery. "Wait till you see these places at night," my guides said. I did see them.

Daily Mirror —of— Washington

A report day by day of what politicians of the National Capital are talking about.

By CLINTON W. GILBERT

WASHINGTON, March 31.

A GOOD many persons are telling Senator Borah how he may be President of the United States. Some say by staying a regular Republican and trusting to his party's turning to him in the Cleveland convention next June. Others say by staying regular and waiting for his party to name him in 1928 after Mr. Coolidge's defeat, which they predict, in 1924. Others tell him that he should lead a third-party movement this year and that thus he will win—they are enthusiastic—either this year or in 1928. But I don't think any one of these ways is a very good way. In front of Mr. Borah for the Republican nomination lies Mr. Coolidge, who is pretty sure to get it. And in front of Mr. Borah for the third-party nomination lies Mr. La Follette, who is pretty sure to get that or render it not worth anyone else's having.

Now, suppose these two likelihoods are realized and Borah stays regular. That is precisely what he did in 1912, when Roosevelt split off from the Republicans. Can a man do it twice without being known as what Senator McCormick calls "a Laodicean"? I have run around among men who are interested in the third-party movement. "What about Borah?" I ask. "Borah will do exactly what he did in 1912. He will ruminate a lot about a third party. He will warm up toward it privately and he will end by supporting Mr. Coolidge." I think they are right.

If he were a perfectly cold, calculating politician, he would wait till June. If then the third-party movement looked powerful, he would throw in his lot with it and support La Follette warmly. If it looked weak, he would throw in his lot with Coolidge and support him warmly. In either case he would be an outstanding figure in 1928. He would make himself indispensable to one party or the other.

But Borah won't do either, unless I am totally astray in estimating him. Once in analyzing him I said passion had been left out of his makeup. He is an intellectual. He has a dozen complexes where a man of action is only entitled to have one. He is a kind of eloquent Hamlet. Hamlet, it is true, broke through his complexes in the end and killed the King. But I don't see any sign in Borah's opposition to the Denby resolution that he is making any with his.

Some say that Borah lacks courage, but that is not true. Whichever way he turns, there rises up in front of him one of his thought-complexes. It is not strong enough to inhibit him from brilliant action. He supported Harding with reservations in 1920. He will support someone else with reservations in 1924. It will require much less action to support Coolidge than to support La Follette. Therefore, he will probably support Coolidge. And right here the Hamlet complex that I just got in my mind rises up and I make a reservation. It is: He will, always provided that he does not run true to the original Hamlet, that the man in Borah does not burst through the ring of thoughts that surround him, and that he doesn't this time kill the King.

There, I've made quite a safe prediction in the best journalistic style. He will do so and so if he doesn't do the exact opposite! On second thought, I'm sure he will. Oh, somewhere I implied that I was going to give him my advice. I advise him to do the exact opposite. It will do him good for once to do the exact opposite.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 31.—For eight months Jim Lucey's friend, Cal Coolidge, has been President of the United States. Most of that time Coolidge has been swept by a series of political tempests more trying than many public officials face in a lifetime.

The world may differ on how the tight-lipped Cal has come through his trials, but the faith of Jim Lucey, the shoemaker, to whom Coolidge wrote, "If it were not for you I would not be here," works on serenely.

Jim Lucey at his work bench in his basement shoe shop, tucked under the wing of the big red brick Gazette office in Gothic street, has looked out of his dusty windows for 40 years at the feet of the world marching by. For eight months those feet have stopped and entered. Jim Lucey has taken his place beside the frame house in Massassoit street, the Coolidge rented home, as a landmark.

Yesterday it was Lieutenant-Governor Hyland of North Dakota. Today it was a casual visitor from Boston. Tomorrow it will be a tourist from Seattle. To all of them Jim Lucey tells the same anecdotes he told eight months ago, with the zest of a fresh story. To all of them he repeats his prediction that "my friend, Cal, the brainiest man in the country," will be elected President.

JAMES LUCEY.

"Fine Thing for Cal."

To all of them he argues that oil and Daugherty have not weakened but have strengthened Cal in his executive chair. Jim Lucey bases his faith on the elements of ward politics and he can see no reason why those same standards don't apply to "big politics."

"All this pryin' and pokin' by the little Dimocrats—it takes a thief to catch a thief—has been a fine thing for Cal," he said. "It has strengthened him. There are some men, always hollering, who will vote against Cal because they think the Republican party is crooked. But they don't amount to anything.

"Cal has done just right. It's better for him that it happened. It will show a lot of people what we knew all along—Cal's a brainy man. Leave it to Cal! He'll take care of himself. He couldn't put that man—what's his name? Daugherty; he couldn't put Daugherty out right away.

"Those fellers Dinby, Fall and Dauhgerty, weren't his men. They were appointed by a fine man who died. Cal wouldn't have done right if he had said the minute he got in office: 'You fellers that fine man put in have got to get out.' People might have thought he was disrespectful to the dead.

Can't Reason Out That $100,000.

"He had to wait until there was good and sufficient reason to put them out. With all this pokin' and talkin', I don't see the Dimocrats have proved anything. There's only that $100,000 I can't reason out. That's all they've shown.

"Then, when Daugherty gave Cal good and sufficient reason to put him out he did. I'm glad Daugherty's out. It'll be a good thing for Cal. It's getting close to election and maybe now they won't keep up all this pokin' and investigatin' and talkin'.

"I don't see they've proved anythin', these Dimocrats. I think Dinby was an honest man. I don't think Daugherty was the bad man they made out. I guess he wasn't any saint, but I don't see they have proved anythin' against him.

"That woman who got on better with her husband after she was divorced from him than when she was married to him. Such stuff as that I'd tell her to go home. I don't like to say anything about a woman but such stuff as that. Here she was more friendly with her husband after she was divorced than when she was his wife. I'd send her home. Such stuff as that!

"Cal's got good common sense. He's done what is right. He don't go to takin' advice of what to do. He listens to advice they want to give him, and then if the advice fits in with what's he thinkin' he takes it and improves it.

Shown He's a Brainy Man.

"Cal's shown people he's a brainy man. The brainest man on earth, I think. I used to admire Roosevelt. But he wasn't as brainy as Cal, not as brainy as my friend the President. He can reason and he's got good common sense. He's got a fine moral character, too. Of course, there are a few of these Democrats that will criticise Cal if he doesn't do anything and criticise if he does."

Events, incidents, political tempests may come and go, but Jim Lucey's estimate of Coolidge remains the same. Only once did he hesitate. It was when he was asked whether Cal should not have kept Daugherty until Daugherty had a chance to answer the charges against him.

"Well," said Jim Lucey slowly, "if I was Cal Coolidge, which I'm not, I think I would have waited until the Secretary's proved a little more. But leave it to Cal. He knows what he's doing."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The wealth of the nation is $320,803,862,000, more than one-half of which is real property and improvements. The per capital wealth is $2918.

Statistics of the country's wealth as of Dec. 31, 1922, issued by the Census Bureau, disclosed that the total wealth increased 72.2 per cent and the per capita wealth 49.6 per cent in the 10 years from 1912. All classes of property increased in value except livestock, which decreased 6.9 per cent, to $5,807,104,000. The increases in money value of other classes of property, Census Bureau officials state, are to a large extent due to the rise in prices in recent years and so far as that is the case they do not represent corresponding increases in the quantity of wealth.

Taxed real property and improvements were valued at $155,308,625,000, an increase of 6.9 per cent in 10 years; exempt real property (exclusive of national parks and monuments) $20,505,819,000, an increase of 66.5 per cent; farm implements and machinery, $2,604,638,000, an increase of 90.4 per cent; manufacturing machinery, tools and implements, $15,783,260,000, an increase of 159.1 per cent; railroads and their equipment $19,950,800,000, an increase of 23.5 per cent; privately-owned transportation and transmission enterprises, other than railroads, $13,607,570,000, an increase of 42.1 per cent; stocks of goods, vehicles other than motor, furniture and clothing, $75,983,607,000, an increase of 121.3 per cent and motor vehicles $4,567,407,000. No comparison is possible for motor vehicles as no separate estimate was made in 1912.

The value of the United States navy is placed at $1,455,992,000, an increase of 259.4 per cent; privately-owned water works, $360,885,000, an increase of 24.4 per cent, and gold and silver coin and bullion $4,278,155,000, an increase of 63.5 per cent.

ATTACK IN COMMONS ON LAUSANNE TREATY EXPECTED

LONDON, March 31.—The Post-Dispatch and New York World understand a lively attack on the Lausanne treaty will be made when peace with Turkey is brought up for ratification in the Commons tomorrow. Refusal of the United States to accept the Straits convention limiting the passage of allied warships through the Dardanelles, to which Britain stands committed, will make trouble. The dominions, whose troops fought at Gallipoli, have not accepted the restrictions and they were bitterly criticised in Australia and New Zealand.

Premier Macdonald also will be heckled about the failure of the allies to redeem their most solemn war pledges of indemnity and security for Christian minorities in Turkey.

DAUGHERTY SAYS HE'S SUPPORTING THE PRESIDENT

LOOKS TO 'REASON' FOR VINDICATION

Intimates He Is Still in Race for Delegate-at-Large to Republican National Convention.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 31. — Former Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, in a formal statement issued here last night, declared he had no personal feeling against President Coolidge, and made known his intention of helping the chief executive "at any personal sacrifice."

Daugherty disclaimed any intention of issuing an extended statement as to "what has taken place and what it all may mean." He expressed surprise that such a thing (apparently meaning President Coolidge's request for his resignation after he had announced his determination not to quit under fire) could "take place in free America."

"We should all pull together, unselfishly, and at any personal sacrifice to help the President," he said. "He is honest and is trying to put through a program that means much to the American people."

Daugherty asserted there was no need to waste any time "worrying about the ex-Attorney-General," and expressed the conviction that he would be "fully vindicated when reason is restored."

As he handed the statement to a group of newspaper men, who gathered in his room at the Hotel Traymore, Daugherty announced he intended to leave for Washington this afternoon. He checked out of his hotel today, and it is presumed he took a train for Washington.

"I have quite a few things to look after," he said, "and I want to move Mrs. Daugherty, who has been an invalid for 18 years, from Florida to Asheville."

Daugherty's Statement.

The statement follows:

"No extended statement from me, as to what has taken place and what it all means, may be expected for some time.

"Its usefulness would now be chiefly personal and that does not interest my friends or me. I was fully warned it was to be done. I did not think it could take place in free America. It did, however, take place, though I did all I could to prevent it. I stood against it as a matter of duty, and in saying this I have no ambition to be decided a martyr.

"One thing now, let me say, I have no personal feeling against the President. I am yet his dependable friend and supporter.

"I have no fears as to my own contented future, and I have no favors to ask, except the continuance of confidence on the part of my friends and the respect of the thinking, patriotic, self-respecting American people. Of all this I feel confidently assured.

"I took a difficult position with the President as a matter of duty and a desire to help him out in the long run. To give up a place in the Cabinet was not a second's disappointment to me. As to the method employed against me, the greater the benefit to the country as an object lessen.

"Hope It Stops."

"I happened to be in a position where I could stand it better than some others. I hope it stops with me. The President's Cabinet deserves support from Congress and the country. He needs them and they are deserving of confidence, respect and gratitude.

"We should all pull together, unselfishly, and at any personal sacrifice to help the President. He is honest and is trying to put through a program that means much to the American people. The complete story of this thing will wait. The carrying out of a program agreed upon and known to be helpful to the country will not wait too long.

"No one need waste any time worrying about the ex-Attorney-General. He will take care of himself until reason is restored and the time and truth fully vindicate him, as they surely will. Nobody's feelings are much hurt, but if they are hurt at all, it doesn't amount to anything.

"Now is the time for cool heads, considerate counsel and help by all."

As he handed the statement to the newspaper men, Daugherty was asked what he had to say about the United States Senate.

"Nothing," was the prompt reply.

Earlier in the evening, Daugherty had intimated that he would

Is There a Radical Political Revolt in the Northwest?

By CHARLES G. ROSS

Montana Always Progressive on National Issues; Conservative Democrat Couldn't Carry State

McAdoo Organization Held Together for Trading Purposes—"Inside Story" of Walsh's Telegram to McAdoo Meeting.

This is the fourteenth article in the series by Charles G. Ross, chief Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, who is investigating political conditions in the radical farm states of the Northwest. These states ordinarily are bulwarks of conservative Republicanism, but are said to be giving up their old political allegiance because of dissatisfaction with Congress' failure to pass suitable farm relief legislation. According to reports reaching Washington, they are turning to the leadership of La Follette and the group of radicals that hold the balance of power in Congress.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HELENA, Mont., March 31.—Maybe it's the altitude, maybe it's the flickering remains of the Western pioneer spirit. Something at any rate puts jazz and variety into Montana politics. It's a game, out here, in which the voter may shift his allegiance back and forth between the old parties, or perhaps fare forth into a new, without exciting wonderment among his neighbors.

But whatever may be the individual vagaries of the electorate, Montana, in a composite sense, is and will remain fundamentally a progressive state where national issues are concerned. On that point all the politicians are agreed. It is about the only point, I am constrained to believe, on which any two of them think the same way. Concerning every other aspect of the political situation, you can get about as many opinions as there are politicians.

It is because Montana is a progressive state that the Democrats are keen to have the party choose a man of the progressive stripe as a candidate for the presidency. They want, moreover, a man who is already nationally known as a progressive thinker, not one whom they would have to get out and "sell" to the voters in an advertising campaign. I have previously written that the best guess respecting Montana is that Coolidge won't get the electoral vote. But even that, so confused is the situation, is a guess, subject to qualification. Coolidge might win, so I am told by well-informed Democratic leaders here at the State capitol, if the Democrats should nominate a man of the Ralston type. Coolidge could not possibly win, they say, against a Democrat recognized by the voters as a progressive.

Leaders' Plans Upset.

The bursting of the McAdoo bubble has completely upset the plans of the State Democratic leaders. They counted on his nomination and were convinced he would sweep the State. Reluctantly, they have been forced to the conclusion that he is out of the running, and, though the McAdoo organization is being held together under former Gov. Sam Stewart and others, there is no real expectation that he will be nominated. The purpose of maintaining the organization here, as in other states where a McAdoo machine had been built up, is to take a block of votes to New York for trading purposes. McAdoo will almost certainly not be nominated, but there is a large prospect that his followers will hold a veto power over any other candidate who may be brought forward.

The Montana McAdoo strength—and the same is true generally—will be thrown to the Progressive candidate. It is clear from the talk one hears in Montana that missionary work is being done on behalf of Homer Cummings of Connecticut, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Cummings will certainly be given a tryout at the New York Convention. Here, as elsewhere in the northwest, the name of Senator Copeland of New York is the subject of speculation among Democrats. The feeling here is that Copeland, so far as Montana is concerned, would need more advertising as a Progressive than could be given between June and November. Former Secretary of the Navy Daniels and former Vice-President Marshall are being talked about. There is very little Ralston or Underwood sentiment.

On the Republican side, Coolidge appeals only to the conservative business interests. Johnson, not so strong as in 1920 when he carried the presidential preference primary by a large majority could probably defeat Coolidge handily in this year's primary, May 27, if he would come out and make a few speeches. So far there has been no indication that he intends to make a fight here.

Senator Walsh's lieutenants at Helena express supreme confidence that he will be re-elected in spite of the expected klan opposition. The strength of the klan in this State is variously estimated at between 5000 and 17,000. It has gone after the recruits vigorously and is said to be about to start a State paper. Some of Walsh's friends assert the klan will not go solidly against him, as it might be expected to do if Walsh were just coming in the political scene, with the issue of his religion raised against him for the first time. That issue, they point out, is greatly reduced in political importance by the fact that Walsh has triumphantly survived it in his previous races for office, and the further fact that he is known everywhere as a man of great ability and high personal integrity.

Walsh's McAdoo Telegram.

The "inside story" of the famous Walsh telegram to the Chicago McAdoo meeting was related here by one of the Senator's intimates. According to this account, Walsh himself did not send the telegram, which, as will be recalled, was an indorsement of McAdoo given after the disclosure of his Doheny connection. Walsh has been roundly criticised for "inconsistency" in this connection, especially as the telegram was sent to an oil man, Tom Arthur of Great Falls.

This is the story: Two young Milwaukee men went to David Rockwell, McAdoo's manager, on the night before the Chicago gathering, and said they had a telegram from Walsh that "would be worth a million dollars" to the McAdoo cause. All they wanted in return was the support of McAdoo's Milwaukee friends for their candidate in the mayoralty election in that city. What the telegram really was, it developed, was a message in which Walsh told a Wisconsin group who had boomed him for the presidency that he was "committed" to McAdoo and a message similar to one he sent to Nebraska. Walsh had taken this means of squelching the incipient boom. Rockwell did not "fall" for the Milwaukee's men's proposition, but it gave Tom Arthur an idea. He got Walsh's secretary on the long-distance phone, Walsh himself then being at Pinehurst, and asked that the message Walsh had sent to Wisconsin be repeated to him at Chicago. This was done, with the result that Arthur was enabled to produce at Chicago a telegram which to all appearances had been prepared especially for the gathering, with a view to bolstering up the McAdoo candidacy. Then—the story concludes—the originators of the bright idea "sewed up" Walsh against repudiating the telegram by getting the convention to pass a resolution highly eulogizing his services in the oil investigation.

All of which goes to indicate that Montana politicians, whether operating here or in Chicago, are capable practitioners of their art.

Montana Republicans are split—which is another reason given by the friends of Walsh for believing he will be re-elected.

Gov. Dixon, Republican, is not in harmony with the Attorney-General, Welling D. Rankin, who aspires to succeed Walsh. Dixon, moreover, is out of favor with an influential conservative group that went to bat for him strongly in 1920. Wheeler, the present Senator, was his opponent for the Governorship in that year. The conservatives were not especially fond of Dixon, the former Bull Mooser, but they liked the radical Wheeler less. Partly through their efforts, Wheeler was beaten by 39,000 votes.

Instead of playing on the conservative side after he got into office, Dixon went the other way, as may be judged by the fact that a nonpartisan "conference for progressive political action," recently held at Helena, named him as its choice for the governorship on the Republican side. Some of the men who, as they claim, put him into office are now set to knife him. They say he has ruined the financial standing of the State.

Dixon May Seek Senatorship.

The fight on Dixon for the governorship may have a bearing on the senatorial race, as some of his enemies, in their eagerness to get him out of the State, would not be averse to "kicking him upstairs" into the Senate. It is said here that Rankin, who has been regarded as the probable Republican nominee, may not run after all, and that Dixon with the field thus cleared for him, may step in. If that

Road Building Funds.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A FEW months ago our Governor could detect no danger of a shortage in the funds for maintaining and building roads. Now his vision has cleared up wonderfully. He is willing to allow the people to vote a 50 per cent increase on automobile license fees and a 2-cent tax on gasoline.

Undoubtedly a large majority of automobile owners are in favor of almost anything which will speed up road construction. As is customary, the theorists and practical politicians make the loudest noise and receive the most consideration. This holds true in regard to the proposed tax on gasoline.

The New England States, which were among the first to adopt a tax on gasoline, have found that the cost of collection is so great that a very small percentage of the money is available for road work. This is not odd when the thousands of filling stations are taken into consideration with the difficulty of an examination of the records of each, as an assurance that the full tax is being turned into the road fund.

Approximately 150,000,000 gallons of gasoline should be sold as automobile fuel, rendering a tax of $3,000,000, if the 2-cent rate were in effect during the current year. This would mean an average payment of about $7 for each automobile owner. The average license fee for 1923 was about $9. Under the proposed increase Mr. Average Driver would pay $13.50 license fee plus $7 gasoline tax, total $20.50, or about 225 per cent of his 1923 payment.

Assuming that the majority of us are in favor of paying this amount, we want the greatest percentage possible to appear in the form of properly maintained, modern highways, and not to be spent for salaries and "expenses" of a lot of gangster politicians put on the already overloaded State payrolls as collectors of the gasoline tax.

If the present license fee were increased 100 per cent, and the proposed gasoline tax eliminated, automobile owners would not pay as much and a greater portion of the money would be available for road work. The present force in the offices of the Secretary of State and State Treasurer could handle the increased revenue with no additions.

Mr. Average Automobile Owner buys about 350 gallons of gasoline a year, though few realize this. When the man who is paying for the roads begins to show some interest in how his money is being spent, he will get the worth of it.

Bonding Murderers.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NOW that the robbery and attempted murder of another citizen (Mr. Bauer) has been seen by several people, will the murderous robber be let out on bond to rob and kill someone else?

I say it is an outrage against society to let such a creature out after he has been caught red-handed in the crime by several disinterested people.

There is no justice in bailing a criminal caught red-handed by several disinterested people. CONSERVATIVE.

Poodles as Companions.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

PLEASE publish the following in answer to "Sympathetic's" letter of the 25th.

The way you speak of, and describe a poodle, one is led to think that they could not harm a flea. Then, again, reading between the lines, one is led to think you have been much harmed by one.

During the recent World War, I happened to know of an aged woman, 65, who had two sons in France. There was no one for her to talk to, no one to comfort her in those long years of waiting, except—a poodle.

Then, another instance. A young married woman of my acquaintance, whose husband was forced to work at night, could not leave her house to find pleasure outside on account of a small child, found much company and enjoyment (after her child was asleep) playing and talking to her poodle.

Mr. "Sympathetic," I suggest and sincerely hope that every family within two blocks of your home buys a nice poodle, and I am sure if you went to the dog show yourself you would find row after row of nice, white, fluffy and cute poodles, along with your desired meat hounds.

As for the running noses and sore eyes, I suppose that your nice big "dawgs" blow their own noses and wipe their own eyes. A POODLE LOVER.

The Senate Investigating Committee.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MAKE a note of this: The Senate Investigating Committee are loaning themselves the rope that will hang them.
WATCH AND SEE.

NOW FOR TAX REDUCTION.

With Daugherty's resignation as Attorney-General the immediate objectives of the senatorial investigations were attained. There is still vital work to be done, of course. Public opinion insists upon the prosecution of faithless public servants, such as Fall and Forbes. It also insists upon the recovery of the oil lands leased to Doheny and Sinclair. But such work is not the duty of Congress. The recovery of the oil lands has been intrusted to special counsel appointed by the President and litigation is now in progress. The problem of prosecuting official delinquency may now be left, where it properly belongs, to the Department of Justice directed by an Attorney-General who commands public confidence.

The public looks to Mr. Coolidge to select an Attorney-General of that character. The public also expects the President to get rid of the untrustworthy and incompetent, whoever and wherever they are. It would rejoice to see the cautious Coolidge become, for the time being, a vigorous, righteously indignant Coolidge.

The report that the Democrats of the Senate had decided to wage a war of extermination upon the entire Cabinet may be safely dismissed. Color may have been lent to the rumor by the McKellar resolution to determine whether Mr. Mellon's incumbency of office was in violation of an old statute prohibiting the Secretary of the Treasury from being "interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce." The news in the Sunday papers, however, made it clear that Mr. McKellar's colleagues were lukewarm to the proposal. Though Washington dispatches indicate the probable adoption of the resolution today, it is evident that the inquiry, if conducted, will be a quiet, unemotional effort to determine a point of law. There will be nothing sensational about it, no intimation of official negligence or incapacity, nothing to send the public temperature shooting again up to fever heat.

Washington's hectic era draws to a close. For that the public is thankful. The experience has been trying. To the Senators who have led the fight it has doubtless been an ordeal. Fortunately for the country, those Senators stood by their guns until victory was won. The antihysteria propaganda left them cold, as did the admonition from an exalted source, which was widely echoed, that they were neglecting their constitutional business of legislation.

But with the victory won the fighting should now cease. Let "the shouting and the tumult" die. It would be a fine thing if the competent liberals of the Senate, the Walshes and Wheelers and associates who have cleaned out the Cabinet, would now turn in and assist in enacting a revenue law which will give the American people substantial relief from the oppressive tax burden.

COMPULSORY BIBLE READING.

Gov. Fields of Kentucky has signed the Rash bill providing for the daily reading of the Bible in the public schools of that State. The measure passed the Senate 81 to 1, and the House 77 to 11. Under this law the Bible must be read in every classroom every day "in the presence of the pupils." Revocation of teachers' certificates is the penalty for failure to comply with the law.

The Antisaloon League, a religious-political organization, having succeeded in injecting what is practically a religious taboo into the United States Constitution, recently celebrated its 30-year jubilee convention in what is known as "The President's Church," in Washington. At that convention the league speakers rejoiced over the culmination of the long battle to put over this religious taboo, and some of the speakers predicted that before prohibition enforcement reached its climax, the United States army and navy would be employed in the work. The establishment of religion is forbidden by the Constitution, but the forces of illiberalism and religious bigotry are succeeding only too well in establishing religious taboos and religious commands in national and state governments.

The recent outburst of Sabbatarianism in New Jersey, engineered by the Lord's Day Alliance, and this astounding Kentucky Bible force law, are indications of what is going on. Religion forced upon intelligent men and women brings about a natural repulsion. But religion administered by the state, under penalties, is a return to the worst days of medievalism. Kentuckians can profit by reading the Bible voluntarily, and have done so. They should resent, to the limit, this state interference with liberty of conscience and their constitutional rights.

WHICH ARE THE PATRIOTS?

The National Republican Committee, wrapping itself in the flag, calls the investigation of the official conduct of Republican officials a "slime-slinging contest." It calls those who are bringing information to the two Senate committees "blackmailers, boodlers, ex-convicts, forgers, bribe-takers, murderers, train robbers and other criminals." It cites one of the Democratic investigators as an "unpatriotic citizen" with "open sympathy for the radical, anarchistic and seditious elements of Montana."

It is the dearly cherished ambition of the Republican committee to turn the investigation of corruption in the Republican party into a trial of Senators Wheeler and Walsh. Nothing has been found against Walsh except that he was the "political godfather" of Wheeler. And Wheeler is intemperately denounced because he refused to take advantage of the war spirit in Montana to persecute certain characters distasteful to big business.

Wheeler, during the war, stood for constitutional rights. How much the committee thinks of the Constitution is betrayed in the sentence:

> Finally the decent, patriotic Americans of Butte took the matter in hand, hanged one of the leaders, ran the others out of Butte and then called a meeting of the Montana State Council of Defense for the purpose of trying Wheeler for his action.

We submit that the exposure of corruption in Washington is a higher test of patriotism today than the lynching of labor agitators in Montana six years ago. Montana's latest judgment is that Wheeler is worthy to represent it in the United States Senate. Which are the real patriots—those who would cleanse the Government of its Daughertys, Falls and McLeans or those who would pull off the investigators by attempting to revive the irrelevant mob passions and blind hatreds of war?

THE COST OF THE BONUS.

When the House passed the bonus bill it was assured by Chairman Green of the Ways and Means Committee that the total cost would be less than $2,100,000,000. The estimate of the Veterans' Bureau was somewhat higher. Now comes Herbert Hesse, actuary of the American Legion, with an estimate of $3,300,000,000 for the cost of the House bill, as compared with the Treasury estimate of $4,850,000,000. It looks as though it was anybody's guess. But whatever the cost comes to, $2,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, or somewhere between, the taxpayers must pay it. Congress cares nothing about a few billions, more or less.

AN OLD TARIFF GAME GOES WRONG.

President Coolidge came to the rescue of the wheat farmers against low prices on March 7, when he proclaimed an increase of 12 cents a bushel in the Fordney-McCumber "protective" tariff on wheat. May wheat had closed in the Chicago market the day previously at $1.11 3-8, compared with $1.19 5-8 the year before. It has been falling ever since and made a low price on Saturday of $1.00 3-8, exactly 11 cents down from the point when Republican tariff action began for the purpose of putting the price 12 cents up.

South Dakota is in the heart of the wheat country most distressed by the low prices. It was there also in the Republican presidential primaries last week that President Coolidge ended only second in the race. Would that probably have been the fact had wheat prices been rising since March 7, according to Republican tariff theory?

There is evidently a large and growing number of farmers in the American wheat country who are through with being fooled any longer by this time-worn tariff game of old guard politicians at Washington. It is becoming altogether too obvious—so obvious, indeed, as possibly to destroy all hope of ever winning another presidential election by this means.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"THE first flower of Spring is the perfect bloom of salesmanship," Mr. Antwine said. "We have talked about selling ourselves and selling this that and the other thing, until the first thing we knew we were selling the Government.

"I never attended a salesmanship revival, but I have seen people come home from them. They were in something like a religious ecstacy. They wanted to sell. It did not matter what it was, they wanted to sell it. Thus began the great emotion of salesmanship, in which some of us sold God, others sold manufactured products, still others sold ideas, and finally our servants at Washington began selling anything they could lay hand upon.

"Mr. Bryan was the worst offender. He sold us Paradise. Young Mr. Rockefeller sold us his father.

"It illustrates the power of an idea. Can we stop its ravages, now resulting in a dozen different investigations at Washington? I doubt it. The very investigators have now to sell themselves and the investigating idea.

"It is perhaps fair to say that Mr. Harding completely sold himself to us in 1920. His majority of seven million must have eclipsed anything done with Mr. Ford's automobiles. It was a feat in salesmanship worthy of Stinnes. It outdid the suffragists, who sold us themselves in countries as far away as China and Turkey. It beat anything that Mr. Wrigley has done in gum, it shamed the early triumphs of Piggly-Wiggly.

"Yet we have no happiness in it now. I see Eddie Guest says every young chap is selling himself. If so, it is the duty of fathers to show their sons what the selling idea, worked out by Will Hays beyond the dreams of Rockefeller, Thyssen, Schwab, Sears, Roebuck, interchurch, or the Coca-Cola people, came to at last.

"While the Government was selling oil leases, liquor permits and fight films, the rest of us were in no bigger business. Inoculated by the same efficiency serum, we were selling Ku Klux, 100 per cent Americanism, prohibition and those other political novelties which give foreigners the impression that the Woolworth Building is our national capitol and prompt the South to move the amendment that not cotton but Cotton Mather is king.

"I am disgusted with the whole salesmanship idea. The next man who tries to sell himself or anything else to me is going to be brained. We have finally sold our souls, and we should have known that this would be the result. I hope we don't sell a damn thing here in the store all this week," Mr. Antwine said.

A ROBIN full-breasted was singing his song perched in a tree
At the breaking of day.
The bird seemed to say:

 have been long
Since I went along
Into life and its way.
No bird seems to say:

The cost of living is going up again. ANOTHER SUGGESTION FOR THE NEW LIGHT AT LINDELL CIRCUS.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

OIL SCANDAL AND REFORM.
GLENN FRANK in April Century.

IT may be that out of the oil scandal will come our political redemption, provided we do not feel that we have fulfilled our duty in the matter when we have jailed a few culprits, ousted a few incompetents, and indulged in an emotional debauch of moral indignation. The oil scandal is nothing less than a challenge to an exhaustive re-examination of the tools, the technic and the leadership of American politics. There is today a very active fundamentalist movement in American politics, strikingly similar to the fundamentalist movement in religion in that it attempts to withdraw from criticism all of the original institutions and philosophy of American Government. But the moment constitutions or institutions of government are withdrawn from criticism and made sacrosanct, the stage is set for corruption and catastrophe. The true guardians of government are its critics not its worshipers. The dead rebels who founded our Government, were they alive today, would be the last to contend that a changeless government can serve a changing world. I am sure that George Washington and Thomas Jefferson would have least in common with those who quote them most today. In the beginning Senators and Representatives were trusted representatives; today they are instructed delegates. They are not human substitutes for us; they are phonograph records of our fluctuating moods. Subserviency of spirit is a bigger political asset today than superiority of mind. The fathers sought to found a responsible government; we seem to prefer a responsive government. The ideal of the fathers was a representative republicanism; we have forsaken that ideal for the ideal of a direct democracy. But we have overlooked the fact that democracy and republicanism are essentially different ideals of government and that the political forms and methods that express the one cannot adequately express the other.

GOOD NEWS FROM FRANCE.
From the Dallas News.

PARIS did a thing the other day which should hearten the world. In a way it was a small matter, but in another light it was certainly worth the cablegram which Associated Press devoted to it, and a great deal more besides. What Paris did was simply to cheer a bicyclist who came out third in a race at the Velodrome. Not merely did the grandstand cheer him, but they insisted that he make an extra circuit by himself, thus according him the honors which customarily belong to the winner. And the man was a German. Of course there is something to be said for the plucky German who kept on in the race after having trouble with his machine at the beginning. For a time he appeared to be out of it, but he kept doggedly on and made up for much of his lost distance. He did it so well that Paris forgot he was a hated Hun. Or it may be that Paris overlooked it. Anyhow, the insistence was that he receive the real honors of the race. And when he reached his dressing room there was a huge bouquet awaiting him—from Frenchmen. * * * The lone and venturesome German out there in the contest with representatives of other nations, the first of his people to come on such a mission since the outbreak of the war, somehow appealed to the sporting instincts of the spectators. He had his courage, that man, and it was a courage of excellent messieurs, and he should have his recognition—the recognition of a man of spirit from men of spirit. And he got it.

"Tiger Rose," "The Great White Way," "The Fighting Coward," "Harbor Lights" and "Women Who Give" on View.

"Tiger Rose" on the Screen.

A FINE play which in its stage version pointed the way to stardom for several actresses is "Tiger Rose," on view this week in its screen form at the Grand Central and West End Lyric Theaters. Lenore Ulric, who created the part of Rose on the stage, gives the film characterization of the fiery, elemental young Canadian girl who fights with truly tigerish intensity to protect the man she loves when he is being hunted down for murder. There is a competent supporting cast. The picture closely follows the stage version and, as might have been expected, Miss Ulric's technique is that of the spoken, rather than the silent drama. One misses the spoken lines and the unforgetable vocal method and accent with which Miss Ulric invested the part on the stage, but this in a measure is supplied by title lines which are literal transcriptions of the text of the play.

The story is well known to theater-goers. Rose, adopted daughter of the Scotch factor of a Canadian trading post, is a creature of elemental emotions who, under stress interlards her conversation with picturesque profanity and who loves with whirlwind intensity. She is coveted by a Northwest mounted policeman, but spurns his love for that of a young engineer. This engineer kills a man and the mounted policeman is set on his trail. Jealousy increases the policeman's zeal in the chase and love causes Rose to bring into play all of her tigerish propensities to protect the fugitive. The big scene in the picture, as it was in the stage play, is the one in which Rose hides her lover in her cabin and shoots the mounted man in her desperate effort to protect her lover. In the end, of course, the killing is found to have been justifiable and wedding bells ring out.

Those Good Old Days.

"THE FIGHTING COWARD," which is the current attraction at the Missouri Theater, is one of the great productions of the screen. In acting, in its natural touches, in plot, in the creation and sustaining of interest it is far and away ahead of the vast majority of motion pictures.

The scenario is based on Booth Tarkington's play, "Magnolia," and the producer was James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon." The cast is exceptionally strong, each principal part being taken by an actor who seems made for it.

The play is based on life along the lower Mississippi in slavery days—life among the hot-blooded planters who were much concerned about their "honor," and were quick on the trigger.

"Fighting and drinking," is the way in which one of the women in the play characterizes the men. Probably the picture is overdrawn, but the film gives an impression of life along the lower Mississippi among a certain type. It also gives a vivid picture of the mighty days of the steamboat, when fighters and gamblers rode up and down the river fleecing every one with whom they could play a game. The film is a veiled satire on the life which it depicts.

Cullen Landis has the role of Tom Rumford, the only son of a plantation owner, who was educated in the North and has no sympathy with the code of honor that means so much to his father and his mother. He is the coward of the play, because he refuses to fight; but when his father drives him from home he adopts the belligerent attitude that seems the pass to public respect. He becomes a river gambler and is known up and down the Mississippi as "the notorious Cunnel Blake."

Ernest Torrence, the tall star of "The Heritage of the Desert," is the owner of a gambling hall and the mentor of young Rumford in his career as a bully. His acting is genuine throughout. Every gesture, every glance counts.

Others in the cast are Noah Beery, who has the role of a notorious "killer," who is soundly whipped by Rumford, and Richard Neal, who has the part of the man who wins the hand of a girl after he "vindicates his honor" by killing a man.

The story ends with young Rumford returning to his father's home and winning the respect of everyone by making them think he is a first-class fighting man. It then develops that he has never killed anybody, but has bluffed his way through on the theory that "a little man like I am must make people afraid of him."

A Romance of the Sea.

"WOMEN WHO GIVE," featured at the Delmonte and Capitol theaters, is a picturization of "Cape Cod Folks," a novel of New England life. It has genuine New England settings and some remarkably fine sea views and fishing scenes. Frank Keenan, Joseph Dowling, Robert Frazer, Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree have the leading roles.

The story turns about the love of a young fisherman for the daughter of an old seaman who has retired and is rounding out his days as keeper of the light that guides the fishing smacks to shore on the "bleak and rock-bound coast." This love is crossed in villainous style by the son of the town's richest man, who also is the closest chum of the old lighthouse tender. There

This love is crossed in villainous style by the son of the town's richest man, who also is the closest chum of the old lighthouse tender. There are excellent bits of character work by Frank Keenan and Joseph Dowling in these roles. As for the other New Englanders in the picture they are well drawn, but much more emotional than folks in that section of the country are generally supposed to be.

In the end the rich man's son and his unworthy love are thwarted after thrilling sea scenes which include a most realistic shipwreck. The big climax comes when the lighthouse lamp goes out and the old light tender sets his home on fire to make a beacon light. It is melodrama, but interesting all the way.

Yanking in the Celebrities.

THERE is material for half a dozen ordinary melodramas in "The Great White Way," the week's feature at the Kings Theater this week. In addition to the lurid story of adventure in the big city the producer has rounded up most of the artists, writers, sports and fighters who fondly believe their names are known around the world and has put them on the screen. Most of them are simply lugged in by the ears and shooed off the screen after they have shown their faces. Among those shown are a noted editorial writer, artists who draw the newspaper comics, fight promoters, a prize-fighter and a noted jockey. The introduction of all these celebrities in the early episodes consumes a great deal of footage without helping to unfold the story. Then comes the melodrama. It is all about a musical comedy star who is loved by a young prizefighter. After it starts the gates are down for thrills. The fighter saves the heroine from a designing villain. Next she is trapped in a burning building and he has to rescue her all over again. The villain gives the pair of lovers a false tip on a horse race and they lose all their money. The hero had intended to give up fighting, but after going broke he is forced to don the gloves again. The villain has him drugged just before the fight, but he comes to and wins. Anita Stewart has the leading role.

Melodrama and Mysticism.

THE Liberty Theater, under new management, has for its picture feature Tom Moore in "Harbor Lights," a homely New England drama in which the smiling Tom grins his way through a series of most disquieting events, including the kidnaping of the girl he loves. There are a good sister and one not quite so good. A scheming villain having discarded one sister, attempts to press his love upon the other.

The hero loves the good sister. In order to discredit her the villain lures her to his home. As an outcome of this meeting the villain is shot and killed. Suspicion falls on the hero and he has great difficulty in clearing his name, but in the nick of time the real slayer comes forward and confesses. On the program also is an "Our Gang" comedy. About half the time at the Liberty is taken up with a vaudeville act in which an alleged mind reader answers questions written on cards by persons in the audience.

"She Walks in Her Sleep" Is Nightie Farce

A YOUNG woman of somnambulistic propensities who strolls in her nightie into the hotel rooms of perfectly strange young married men and clings—terrible, but true—clings to husbands in the very presence of their wives, is the soul-stirring dramatic motif about which is constructed the somewhat strained and flimsy bedroom farce, "She Walks in Her Sleep," which is being romped this week at the Empress Theater, with the Woodward Players doing the romping. Last night all cavorted in a style highly befitting bedroom farces, and a jolly evening was had by most of the spectators. This marks the play's first appearance in St. Louis.

As in most bedroom farces, everybody does anything and everything but what he or she would probably do in real life, and even then it is with the greatest difficulty that they forestall the solution of their various dilemmas until the last. But starting with such an improbable situation, the improbable complications that arise are no more than justified, if proper consideration is to be taken of the mentality of characters represented in such works. Since the prime object is to compress into three acts as many laughs as possible, the performance could hardly be accounted as anything other than a success, for it got the laughs, even if there was boredom occasionally while the constantly threatening denouement was being buffeted back into the wings to make way for another laugh.

Finally after the matrimonial affairs of two couples are taking a decided trend toward Nevada, and the husbands are about to be assassinated by the sleep-walker's ogre parent, it is 11 o'clock and time for the happy ending. So with all hands assembled, the nocturnal stroller strolls in through the window and the Reno pilgrimages are turned into second honeymoons.

Helen Gilmore, a new member of the company, seen last week in a small part, makes her first appearance in a major role and stalks a husband diligently as one of the wives. Hazel Whitmore is the half-wit scrub girl of the hostelry. Alney Alba is the nightie-clad interloper.

Marriage Is Great Fun at the Orpheum

HARRY J. CONLEY said he escaped paying elevator fare by walking to the top floor of the Woolworth Building. Perhaps it was his way of saying it that made the Orpheum audience laugh. He was boastful. But Harriet Towne, as the girl who loved and waited, took him seriously. His half-embarrased, half-bombastic small-town gallant seemed quite the best thing in yesterday's hilarity. "Rice and Old Shoes" was funny almost to the end, when the audience traced the tail-light of a motor cycle across scenery to a church and then to a cottage.

A fat man in love is usually excellent comedy, but Douglas Leavitt made a fat man married even better fun in his skit with Ruth Mary Lockwood. Was it the way the Mrs. kept pulling up his vest? Or was it that furious tete-a-tete in which Ruth tells him now she knows "how a Cadillac" and he comes right back with "Stutz so?" Such quick repartee wrung admiration. Shrieks of laughter, too.

Miss Norah Bayes, "returning by popular demand," as the program had it, was applauded as usual, thus proving the perennial charm of a comely woman with a semibaritone voice and personality. The audience liked best her song with the chorus, "He lay there and she lay there, and the wall lay right between." One knew that at the end Norah would marry them and then take the wall away before either they or the audience got used to it.

McLaughlin and Evans' East Side sketch and the black-face turn by Dennie O'Neill and "Cy" Plunkett amused the audience greatly; the roller-skating "Las Splendides" went well; Wade Booth, baritone soloist, was encored; the crowd stayed to enjoy Fred Berrens and Lora Foster, and a mechanical piano put on a song-dance act.

DRAMA

Thrills and Laughs of "The Cat and the Canary" Are Still Functioning.

THE rigors of winter may have come and gone, many a cat and many a canary may be the worse for the cold and the rain, the snow and the sleet, but "The Cat and the Canary," which returned to the Shubert-Jefferson last night, wasn't visibly affected by the hardships of the past few months. It retained all the thrills and spooky emotions it exhibited when it opened the season at the same theater last September, playing for two weeks.

At that time this mystery melodrama, called by its producers more refinedly a play, caused a goodly part of its audiences to fluctuate between hysterical laughter and shrieks denoting the same state. It did the same thing last night, whenever an unseen had popped through a wall or a lifeless body lunged out a secret panel. The audience sympathized with the heroine, whom a villainous person was trying to frighten into insanity, so he might inherit the fortune left to her, and during the intermissions the male members began betting on "Who is the murderer?"

The cast was led by Emily Taft, daughter of Laredo Taft, who played the lead during the September visit. Miss Taft and her company carried off the business and the comedy just as if they hadn't been doing it all season. An audience of fair size attended.

FRED STONE CHURCH SPEAKER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Fred Stone, comedian, yesterday made his first planned public speech for religion since he announced more than a year ago that he had decided to work actively for the church instead of being a passive Christian. He spoke in behalf of a campaign for funds to build the $4,000,000 Broadway Temple. Elsie Janis, actress, also spoke briefly and a prayer she wrote in war time was read.

Declaring that religion has enabled him to sing and dance with "an added inspiration," Stone said he did not consider a career on the stage to be incompatible with a religious life, and urged that New York City build as many first-grade churches as it now has theaters. The Broadway Temple will be housed in a 21-story building, which will contain a church, an auditorium, a day nursery, playgrounds, gymnasium and swimming pool.

BY RICHARD L. STOKES.

WITH a consistently pleasureable performance of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," the San Carlo Opera Co. brought to a close, last night at the Odeon, what the management pronounced its most successful season in St. Louis, both as to attendance and receipts. It was estimated that at least 15,000 persons witnessed the nine productions.

From the first note of the overture to the finale, Verdi's opera is characterized by inspired melody and dramatic ardor. "La Forza del Destino" belongs chronologically to the master's second period, following "Un Ballo in Maschera" and preceding "Don Carlos." It antedated "Aida" by nine years and "Otello" by 25 years. In view of the fact that "Tristan und Isolde" was not produced until 1865, and "Das Rheingold" and "Die Walkuere" until 1870, it is interesting to note that Verdi, as early as 1862, apparently of his own initiative, struck in the present opera upon the Wagnerian ideas of the leit-motif and of declamatory melos.

Novelty 62 Years Old.

Unlike those battle horses, "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore" and "La Traviata," the withers of "La Forza" remain unwrung by incessant campaigning. This was its second production here in recent years. At least two of its numbers are universally familiar—the duet for tenor and baritone, "Solenne in quest' ora," and the soprano solo, "Pace, pace, mio Dio." But as a whole, this 62-year-old opera retains, for St. Louis audiences, much of the freshness and surprise of a novelty.

The story, after a Spanish drama by the Duke of Rivas, relates how the capricious power of fate compels a lover accidentally to slay his sweetheart's father and brother, and to bring about his own death and hers. The plot is sanguinary, but it is redeemed by the sweetness and purity of the music.

Salazar at His Best.

Manuel Salazar, cast as the ill-starred lover, has never sung here with more beauty of voice, a more virile and yet poignant feeling, than he exhibited last night. He was admirably supported by the appealing accents of the hapless heroine, sung by Miss Saroya, and by the manly utterance and demeanor of Mario Basiola, as the brother who discovers that his bosom friend is the man against whom he has sworn vengeance for his father's murder. Minor parts were capably supplied by Misses Klinova and Morosini, and by Messrs. Cervi, Curci and Di Biasi. The audience, a large part of which understood as a native tongue the text of the opera, was highly demonstrative. Carlo Peroni directed with spontaneity and fire.

Members of the company left after the performance for Chicago, where the San Carlo organization is making its first visit this week, although it has played frequently in New York and Boston.

Road Building Funds.

A FEW months ago our Governor could detect no danger of a shortage in the funds for maintaining and building roads. Now his vision has cleared up wonderfully. He is willing to allow the people to vote a 50 per cent increase on automobile license fees and a 2-cent tax on gasoline.

Undoubtedly a large majority of automobile owners are in favor of almost anything which will speed up road construction. As is customary, the theorists and practical politicians make the loudest noise and receive the most consideration. This holds true in regard to the proposed tax on gasoline.

The New England States, which were among the first to adopt a tax on gasoline, have found that the cost of collection is so great that a very small percentage of the money is available for road work. This is not odd when the thousands of filling stations are taken into consideration with the difficulty of an examination of the records of each, as an assurance that the full tax is being turned into the road fund.

Approximately 150,000,000 gallons of gasoline should be sold as automobile fuel, rendering a tax of $3,000,000, if the 2-cent rate were in effect during the current year. This would mean an average payment of about $7 for each automobile owner. The average license fee for 1923 was about $9. Under the proposed increase Mr. Average Driver would pay $13.50 license fee plus $7 gasoline tax, total $20.50, or about 225 per cent of his 1923 payment.

Assuming that the majority of us are in favor of paying this amount, we want the greatest percentage possible to appear in the form of properly maintained, modern highways, and not to be spent for salaries and "expenses" of a lot of gangster politicians put on the already overloaded State payrolls as collectors of the gasoline tax.

If the present license fee were increased 100 per cent, and the proposed gasoline tax eliminated, automobile owners would not pay as much and a greater portion of the money would be available for road work. The present force in the offices of the Secretary of State and State Treasurer could handle the increased revenue with no additions.

Mr. Average Automobile Owner buys about 350 gallons of gasoline a year, though few realize this. When the man who is paying for the roads begins to show some interest in how his money is being spent, he will get the worth of it.

Bonding Murderers.

NOW that the robbery and attempted murder of another citizen (Mr. Bauer) has been seen by several people, will the murderous robber be let out on bond to rob and kill someone else?

I say it is an outrage against society to let such a creature out after he has been caught red-handed in the crime by several disinterested people.

There is no justice in bailing a criminal caught red-handed by several disinterested people. CONSERVATIVE.

Poodles as Companions.

PLEASE publish the following in answer to "Sympathetic's" letter of the 28th.

The way you speak of, and describe a poodle, one is led to think that they could not harm a flea. Then, again, reading between the lines, one is led to think you have been much harmed by one.

During the recent World War, I happened to know of an aged woman, 65, who had two sons in France. There was no one for her to talk to, no one to comfort her in those long years of waiting, except—a poodle.

Then, another instance. A young married woman of my acquaintance, whose husband was forced to work at night, could not leave her house to find pleasure outside on account of a small child, found much company and enjoyment (after her child was asleep) playing and talking to her poodle.

Mr. "Sympathetic," I suggest and sincerely hope that every family within two blocks of your home buys a nice poodle, and I am sure if you went to the dog show yourself you would find row after row of nice, white, fluffy and cute poodles, along with your desired meat hounds.

As for the running noses and sore eyes, I suppose that your nice big "dawgs" blow their own noses and wipe their own eyes. A POODLE LOVER.

The Senate Investigating Committee.

MAKE a note of this: The Senate Investigating Committee are loaning themselves the rope that will hang them.

NOW FOR TAX REDUCTION.

With Daugherty's resignation as Attorney-General the immediate objectives of the senatorial investigations were attained. There is still vital work to be done, of course. Public opinion insists upon the prosecution of faithless public servants, such as Fall and Forbes. It also insists upon the recovery of the oil lands leased to Doheny and Sinclair. But such work is not the duty of Congress. The recovery of the oil lands has been intrusted to special counsel appointed by the President and litigation is now in progress. The problem of prosecuting official delinquency may now be left, where it properly belongs, to the Department of Justice directed by an Attorney-General who commands public confidence.

The public looks to Mr. Coolidge to select an Attorney-General of that character. The public also expects the President to get rid of the untrustworthy and incompetent, whoever and wherever they are. It would rejoice to see the cautious Coolidge become, for the time being, a vigorous, righteously indignant Coolidge.

The report that the Democrats of the Senate had decided to wage a war of extermination upon the entire Cabinet may be safely dismissed. Color may have been lent to the rumor by the McKellar resolution to determine whether Mr. Mellon's incumbency of office was in violation of an old statute prohibiting the Secretary of the Treasury from being "interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce." The news in the Sunday papers, however, made it clear that Mr. McKellar's colleagues were lukewarm to the proposal. Though Washington dispatches indicate the probable adoption of the resolution today, it is evident that the inquiry, if conducted, will be a quiet, unemotional effort to determine a point of law. There will be nothing sensational about it, no intimation of official negligence or incapacity, nothing to send the public temperature shooting again up to fever heat.

Washington's hectic era draws to a close. For that the public is thankful. The experience has been trying. To the Senators who have led the fight it has doubtless been an ordeal. Fortunately for the country, those Senators stood by their guns until victory was won. The antihysteria propaganda left them cold, as did the admonition from an exalted source, which was widely echoed, that they were neglecting their constitutional business of legislation.

But with the victory won the fighting should now cease. Let "the shouting and the tumult" die. It would be a fine thing if the competent liberals of the Senate, the Walshes and Wheelers and associates who have cleaned out the Cabinet, would now turn in and assist in enacting a revenue law which will give the American people substantial relief from the oppressive tax burden.

COMPULSORY BIBLE READING.

Gov. Fields of Kentucky has signed the Rash bill providing for the daily reading of the Bible in the public schools of that State. The measure passed the Senate 81 to 1, and the House 77 to 11. Under this law the Bible must be read in every classroom every day "in the presence of the pupils." Revocation of teachers' certificates is the penalty for failure to comply with the law.

The Antisaloon League, a religious-political organization, having succeeded in injecting what is practically a religious taboo into the United States Constitution, recently celebrated its 30-year jubilee convention in what is known as "The President's Church," in Washington. At that convention the league speakers rejoiced over the culmination of the long battle to put over this religious taboo, and some of the speakers predicted that before prohibition enforcement reached its climax, the United States army and navy would be employed in the work. The establishment of religion is forbidden by the Constitution, but the forces of illiberalism and religious bigotry are succeeding only too well in establishing religious taboos and religious commands in national and state governments.

The recent outburst of Sabbatarianism in New Jersey, engineered by the Lord's Day Alliance, and this astounding Kentucky Bible force law, are indications of what is going on. Religion forced upon intelligent men and women brings about a natural repulsion. But religion administered by the state, under penalties, is a return to the worst days of medievalism. Kentuckians can profit by reading the Bible voluntarily, and have done so. They should resent, to the limit, this state interference with liberty of conscience and their constitutional rights.

WHICH ARE THE PATRIOTS?

The National Republican Committee, wrapping itself in the flag, calls the investigation of the official conduct of Republican officials a "slime-slinging contest." It calls those who are bringing information to the two Senate committees "blackmailers, boodlers, ex-convicts, forgers, bribe-takers, murderers, train robbers and other criminals." It cites one of the Democratic investigators as an "unpatriotic citizen" with "open sympathy for the radical, anarchistic and seditious elements of Montana."

It is the dearly cherished ambition of the Republican committee to turn the investigation of corruption in the Republican party into a trial of Senators Wheeler and Walsh. Nothing has been found against Walsh except that he was the "political godfather" of Wheeler. And Wheeler is intemperately denounced because he refused to take advantage of the war spirit in Montana to persecute certain characters distasteful to big business.

Wheeler, during the war, stood for constitutional rights. How much the committee thinks of the Constitution is betrayed in the sentence:

Finally the decent, patriotic Americans of Butte took the matter in hand, hanged one of the leaders, ran the others out of Butte and then called a meeting of the Montana State Council of Defense for the purpose of trying Wheeler for his action.

We submit that the exposure of corruption in Washington is a higher test of patriotism today than the lynching of labor agitators in Montana six years ago. Montana's latest judgment is that Wheeler is worthy to represent it in the United States Senate. Which are the real patriots—those who would cleanse the Government of its Daughertys, Falls and McLeans or those who would pull off the investigators by attempting to revive the irrelevant mob passions and blind hatreds of war?

THE COST OF THE BONUS.

When the House passed the bonus bill it was assured by Chairman Green of the Ways and Means Committee that the total cost would be less than $2,100,000,000. The estimate of the Veterans' Bureau was somewhat higher. Now comes Herbert Hesse, actuary of the American Legion, with an estimate of $3,300,000,000 for the cost of the House bill, as compared with the Treasury estimate of $4,850,000,000. It looks as though it was anybody's guess. But whatever the cost comes to, $2,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, or somewhere between, the taxpayers must pay it. Congress cares nothing about a few billions, more or less.

AN OLD TARIFF GAME GOES WRONG.

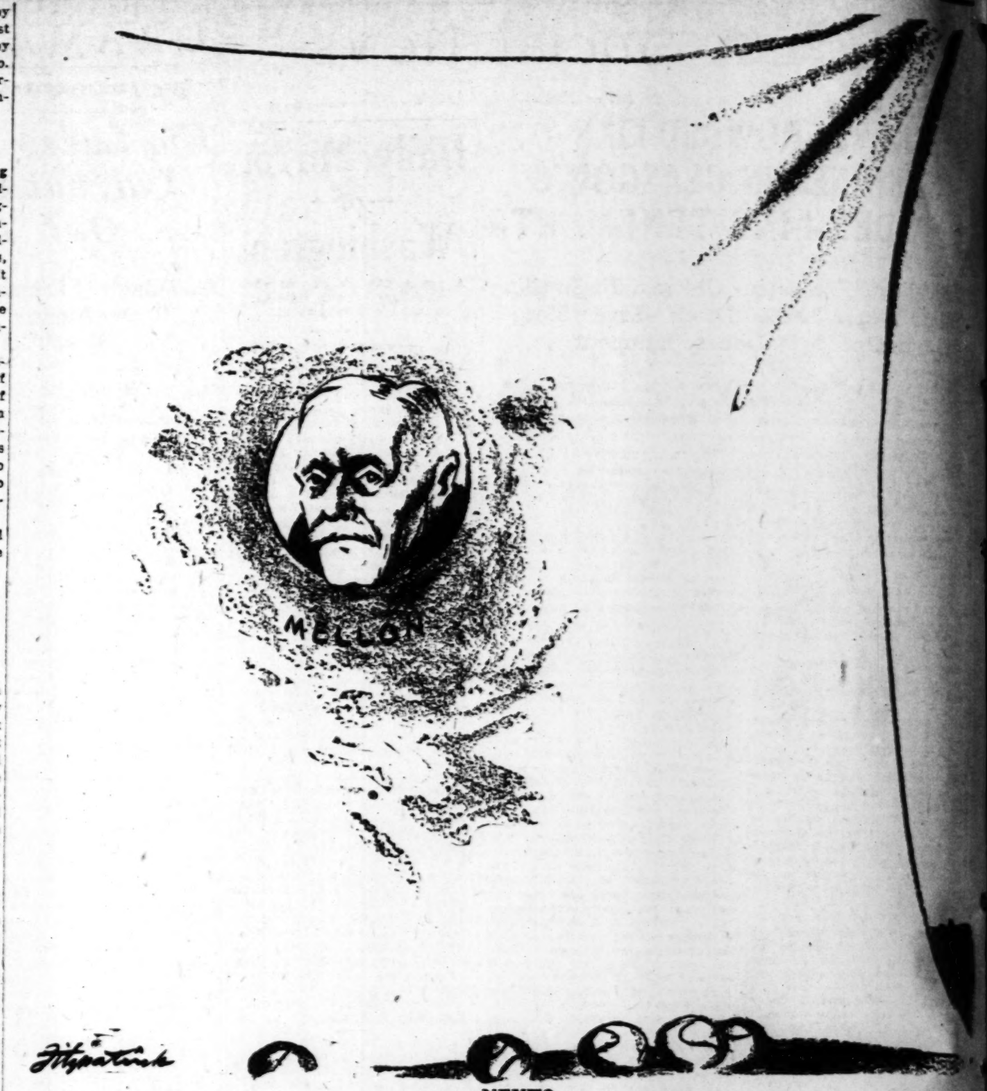

President Coolidge came to the rescue of the wheat farmers against low prices on March 7, when he proclaimed an increase of 12 cents a bushel in the Fordney-McCumber "protective" tariff on wheat. May wheat had closed in the Chicago market the day previously at $1.11 3-8, compared with $1.19 5-8 the year before. It has been falling ever since and made a low price on Saturday of $1.00 3-8, exactly 11 cents down from the point when Republican tariff action began for the purpose of putting the price 12 cents up.

South Dakota is in the heart of the wheat country most distressed by the low prices. It was there also in the Republican presidential primaries last week that President Coolidge ended only second in the race. Would that probably have been the fact had wheat prices been rising since March 7, according to Republican tariff theory?

There is evidently a large and growing number of farmers in the American wheat country who are through with being fooled any longer by this time-worn tariff game of old guard politicians at Washington. It is becoming altogether too obvious—so obvious, indeed, as possibly to destroy all hope of ever winning another presidential election by this means.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"THE first flower of Spring is the perfect bloom of salesmanship," Mr. Antwine said. "We have talked about selling ourselves and selling this that and the other thing, until the first thing we knew we were selling the Government.

"I never attended a salesmanship revival, but I have seen people come home from them. They were in something like a religious ecstacy. They wanted to sell. It did not matter what it was, they wanted to sell it. Thus began the great emotion of salesmanship, in which some of us sold God, others sold manufactured products, still others sold ideas, and finally our servants at Washington began selling anything they could lay hand upon.

"It illustrates the power of an idea. Can we stop its ravages, now resulting in a dozen different investigations at Washington? I doubt it. The very investigators have now to sell themselves and the investigating idea.

"It is perhaps fair to say that Mr. Harding completely sold himself to us in 1920. His majority of seven million must have eclipsed anything done with Mr. Ford's automobiles. It was a feat in salesmanship worthy of Stinnes. It outdid the suffragists, who sold us themselves in countries as far away as China and Turkey. It beat anything that Mr. Wrigley has done in gum. It shamed the early triumphs of Piggly-Wiggly.

"Yet we have no happiness in it now. I see Eddie Guest says every young chap is selling himself. If so, it is the duty of fathers to show their sons what the selling idea, worked out by Will Hays beyond the dreams of Rockefeller, Thyssen, Schwab, Sears, Roebuck, interchurch, or the Coca-Cola people, came to at last.

"While the Government was selling oil leases, liquor permits and fight films, the rest of us were in no bigger business. Inoculated by the same efficiency serum, we were selling Ku Klux, 100 per cent Americanism, prohibition and those other political novelties which give foreigners the impression that the Woolworth Building is our national capitol and prompt the South to move the amendment that not cotton but Cotton Mather is king.

"I am disgusted with the whole salesmanship idea. The next man who tries to sell himself or anything else to me is going to be brained. We have finally sold our souls, and we should have known that this would be the result. I hope we don't sell a damn thing here in the store all this week," Mr. Antwine said.

The cost of living is going up again. OIL SCANDAL AND REFORM.

GLENN FRANK in April Century.

IT may be that out of the oil scandal will come our political redemption, provided we do not feel that we have fulfilled our duty in the matter when we have jailed a few culprits, ousted a few incompetents and indulged in an emotional debauch of moral indignation. The oil scandal is nothing less than a challenge to an exhaustive re-examination of the tools, the technic and the leadership of American politics. There is today a very active fundamentalist movement in American politics, strikingly similar to the fundamentalist movement in religion in that it attempts to withdraw from criticism all of the original institutions and philosophy of American Government. But the moment constitutions or institutions of government are withdrawn from criticism and made sacrosanct, the stage is set for corruption and catastrophe. The true guardians of government are its critics not its worshipers. The dead patriots who founded our Government, were they alive today, would be the last to contend that a changeless government can serve a changing world. I am sure that George Washington and Thomas Jefferson would have least in common with those who quote them most today. In the beginning Senators and Representatives were trusted representatives; today they are instructed delegates. They are not human substitutes for us; they are phonograph records of our fluctuating moods. Subserviency of spirit is a bigger political asset today than superiority of mind. The fathers sought to found a responsible government; we seem to prefer a responsive government. The ideal of the fathers was a representative republicanism; we have forsaken that ideal for the ideal of a direct democracy. But we have overlooked the fact that democracy and republicanism are essentially different ideals of government and that the political forms and methods that express the one cannot adequately express the other.

GOOD NEWS FROM FRANCE.

From the Dallas News.

PARIS did a thing the other day which should hearten the world. In a way it was a small matter, but in another light it was certainly worth the cablegram which the Associated Press devoted to it, and a great deal more besides. What Paris did was simply to cheer a bicyclist who came out third in a race at the Velodrome. Not merely did the grandstand cheer him, but they insisted that he make an extra circuit by himself, thus according him the honors which customarily belong to the winner. And the man was a German. Of course there is something to be said for the plucky German who kept on in the race after having trouble with his machine at the beginning. For a time he appeared to be out of it, but he kept doggedly on and made up for much of his lost distance. He did it so well that Paris forgot he was a hated Hun. Or it may be that Paris even looked it. Anyhow, the insistence was that he receive the real honors of the race. And when he reached his dressing room there was a huge bouquet awaiting him—from Frenchmen. * * * The lone and unwelcome German out there in the cold with representatives of other nations, the first of his people to come on such a mission since the outbreak of the war, somehow appealed to the sporting instincts of the spectators. He had his courage, the man, and it was a courage of gallant messieurs, and he should have his reputation—the recognition of a man of spirit from men of spirit. And he got it.

"Tiger Rose" on the Screen.

A FINE play which in its stage version pointed the way to stardom for several actresses is "Tiger Rose," on view this week in its screen form at the Grand Central and West End Lyric Theaters. Lenore Ulric, who created the part of Rose on the stage, gives fine film characterization of the fiery, elemental young Canadian girl who fights with truly tigerish intensity to protect the man she loves when he is being hunted down for murder. There is a competent supporting cast. The picture closely follows the stage version and, as might have been expected, Miss Ulric's technique is that of the spoken, rather than the silent drama. One misses the spoken lines and the unforgetable vocal method and accent with which Miss Ulric invested the part on the stage, but this in a measure is supplied by title lines which are literal transcriptions of the text of the play.

The story is well known to theater-goers. Rose, adopted daughter of the Scotch factor of a Canadian trading post, is a creature of elemental emotions who, under stress, interlards her conversation with picturesque profanity and who loves with whirlwind intensity. She is coveted by a Northwest mounted policeman, but spurns his love for that of a young engineer. This engineer kills a man and the mounted policeman is set on his trail. Jealousy increases the policeman's zeal in the chase and love causes Rose to bring into play all of her tigerish propensities to protect the fugitive. The big scene in the picture, as it was in the stage play, is the one in which Rose hides her lover in her cabin and shoots the mounted man in her desperate effort to protect her lover. In the end, of course, the killing is found to have been justifiable and wedding bells ring out.

Those Good Old Days.

"THE FIGHTING COWARD," which is the current attraction at the Missouri Theater, is one of the great productions of the screen. In acting, in its natural touches, in plot, in the creation and sustaining of interest it is far and away ahead of the vast majority of motion pictures.

The scenario is based on Booth Tarkington's play, "Magnolia," and the producer was James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon." The cast is exceptionally strong, each principal part being taken by an actor who seems made for it.

The play is based on life along the lower Mississippi in slavery days—life among the hot-blooded planters who were much concerned about their "honor," and were quick on the trigger.

"Fighting and drinking," is the way in which one of the women in the play characterizes the men. Probably the picture is overdrawn, but the film gives an impression of life along the lower Mississippi among a certain type. It also gives a vivid picture of the mighty days of the steamboat, when fighters and gamblers rode up and down the river fleecing every one with whom they could play a game. The film is a veiled satire on the life which it depicts.

Cullen Landis has the role of Tom Rumford, the only son of a plantation owner, who was educated in the North and has no sympathy with the code of honor that means so much to his father and his mother. He is the coward of the play, because he refuses to fight; but when his father drives him from home he adopts the belligerent attitude that seems the pass to public respect. He becomes a river gambler and is known up and down the Mississippi as "the notorious Cunnel Blake."

Ernest Torrence, the tall star of "The Heritage of the Desert," is the owner of a gambling hall and the mentor of young Rumford in his career as a bully. His acting is genuine throughout. Every gesture, every glance counts.

Others in the cast are Noah Beery, who has the role of a notorious "killer," who is soundly whipped by Rumford, and Richard Neal, who has the part of the man who wins the hand of a girl after he "vindicates his honor" by killing a man.

The story ends with young Rumford returning to his father's home and winning the respect of everyone by making them think he is a first-class fighting man. It then develops that he has never killed anybody, but has bluffed his way through on the theory that "a little man like I am must make people afraid of him."

A Romance of the Sea.

"WOMEN WHO GIVE," featured at the Delmonte and Capitol theaters, is a picturization of "Cape Cod Folks," a novel of New England life. It has genuine New England settings and some remarkably fine sea views and fishing scenes. Frank Keenan, Joseph Dowling, Robert Fraser, Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree have the leading roles.

The story turns about the love of a young fisherman for the daughter of an old seaman who has retired and is rounding out his days as keeper of the light that guides the fishing smacks to shore on the "stern and rock-bound coast." This love is crossed in villainous style by the son of the town's richest man, who also is the closest chum of the old lighthouse tender. There

"Tiger Rose" on the Screen.

A FINE play which in its stage version pointed the way to stardom for several actresses in "Tiger Rose," on view this week at its screen form at the Grand Central and West End Lyric Theaters. Lenore Ulric, who created the part of Rose on the stage, gives the film characterization of the fiery, elemental young Canadian girl who fights with truly tigerish ferocity to protect the man she loves when he is being hunted down for murder. There is a competent supporting cast. The picture closely follows the stage version and, as might have been expected, Miss Ulric's technique is that of the spoken, rather than the silent drama. One misses the spoken lines and the unforgetable vocal method and accent with which Miss Ulric invested the part on the stage, but this in a measure is supplied by title lines which are literal transcriptions of the text of the play.

The story is well known to theatergoers. Rose, adopted daughter of the Scotch factor of a Canadian trading post, is a creature of elemental emotions who, under stress of warlards her conversation with picturesque profanity and who loves with whirlwind intensity. She is coveted by a Northwest mounted policeman, but spurns his love for that of a young engineer. This engineer kills a man and the mounted policeman is set on his trail. A Romance of the Sea.

"WOMEN WHO GIVE," featured at the Delmonte and Capitol theaters, is a picturization of "Cape Cod Folks," a novel of New England life. It has genuine New England settings and some remarkably fine sea views and fishing scenes. Frank Keenan, Joseph Dowling, Robert Frazer, Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree have the leading roles.

The story turns about the love of a young fisherman for the daughter of an old seaman who has retired and is rounding out his days as keeper of the light that guides the fishing smacks to shore on the stern and rock-bound coast." This love is crossed in villainous style by the son of the town's richest man, who also is the closest chum of the old lighthouse tender. There are excellent bits of character work by Frank Keenan and Joseph Dowling in these roles. As for the other New Englanders in the picture they are well drawn, but much more emotional than folks in that section of the country are generally supposed to be.

In the end the rich man's son and his unworthy love are thwarted after thrilling sea scenes which include a most realistic shipwreck. The big climax comes when the lighthouse lamp goes out and the old light tender sets his home on fire to make a beacon light. It is melodrama, but interesting all the way.

Yanking in the Celebrities.

THERE is material for half a dozen ordinary melodramas in "The Great White Way," the week's feature at the Kings Theater this week. In addition to the lurid story of adventure in the big city the producer has rounded up most of the artists, writers, sports and fighters who fondly believe their names are known around the world and has put them on the screen. Most of them are simply lugged in by the ears and shooed off the screen after they have shown their faces. Among those shown are a noted editorial writer, artists who draw the newspaper comics, fight promoters, a prize-fighter and a noted jockey. The introduction of all these celebrities in the early episodes consumes a great deal of footage without helping to unfold the story. Then comes the melodrama. It is all about a musical comedy star who is loved by a young prizefighter. After it starts the gates are down for thrills. The fighter saves the heroine from a designing villain. Next she is trapped in a burning building and he has to rescue her all over again. The villain gives the pair of lovers a false tip on a horse race and they lose all their money. The hero had intended to give up fighting, but after going broke he is forced to don the gloves again. The villain has him drugged just before the fight, but he comes to and wins. Anita Stewart has the leading role.

Melodrama and Mysticism.

THE Liberty Theater, under new management, has for its picture feature Tom Moore in "Harbor Lights," a homely New England drama in which the smiling Tom grins his way through a series of most disquieting events, including the kidnaping of the girl he loves. There are a good sister and one not quite so good. A scheming villain having discarded one sister, attempts to press his love upon the other.

The hero loves the good sister. In order to discredit her the villain lures her to his home. As an outcome of this meeting the villain is shot and killed. Suspicion falls on the hero and he has great difficulty in clearing his name, but in the nick of time the real slayer comes forward and confesses. On the program also is an "Our Gang" comedy. About half the time at the Liberty is taken up with a vaudeville act in which an alleged mind reader answers questions written on cards by persons in the audience.

DRAMA

Thrills and Laughs of "The Cat and the Canary" Are Still Functioning.

THE rigors of winter may have come and gone, many a cat and many a canary may be the worse for the cold and the rain, the snow and the sleet, but "The Cat and the Canary," which returned to the Shubert-Jefferson last night, wasn't visibly affected by the hardships of the past few months. It retained all the thrills and spooky emotions it exhibited when it opened the season at the same theater last September, playing for two weeks.

At that time this mystery melodrama, called by its producers more refinedly a play, caused a goodly part of its audiences to fluctuate between hysterical laughter and shrieks denoting the same state. It did the same thing last night, whenever an unseen had popped through a wall or a lifeless body lunged out a secret panel. The audience sympathized with the heroine, whom a villainous person was trying to frighten into insanity, so he might inherit the fortune left to her, and during the intermissions the male members began betting on "Who is the murderer?"

The cast was led by Emily Taft, daughter of Laredo Taft, who played the lead during the September visit. Miss Taft and her company carried off the business and the comedy just as if they hadn't been doing it all season. An audience of fair size attended.

"She Walks in Her Sleep" Is Nightie Farce

A YOUNG woman of somnambulistic propensities who strolls in her nightie into the hotel rooms of perfectly strange young married men and clings—terrible, but true—clings to husbands in the very presence of their wives, is the soul-stirring dramatic motif about which is constructed the somewhat strained and flimsy bedroom farce, "She Walks in Her Sleep," which is being romped this week at the Empress Theater, with the Woodward Players doing the romping. Last night all cavorted in a style highly befitting bedroom farces, and a jolly evening was had by most of the spectators. This marks the play's first appearance in St. Louis.

As in most bedroom farces, everybody does anything and everything but what he or she would probably do in real life, and even then it is with the greatest difficulty that they forestall the solution of their various dilemmas until the last. But starting with such an improbable situation, the improbable complications that arise are no more than justified, if proper consideration is to be taken of the mentality of characters represented in such works. Since the prime object is to compress into three acts as many laughs as possible, the performance could hardly be accounted as anything other than a success, for it got the laughs, even if there was boredom occasionally while the constantly threatening denouement was being buffeted back into the wings to make way for another laugh.

Finally after the matrimonial affairs of two couples are taking a decided trend toward Nevada, and the husbands are about to be assassinated by the sleep-walker's ogre parent, it is 11 o'clock and time for the happy ending. So with all hands assembled, the nocturnal stroller strolls in through the window and the Reno pilgrimages are turned into second honeymoons.

Helen Gilmore, a new member of the company, seen last week in a small part, makes her first appearance in a major role and stalks a husband diligently as one of the wives. Hazel Whitmore is the half-wit scrub girl of the hostelry. Alney Alba is the nightie-clad interloper.

HARRY J. CONLEY said he escaped paying elevator fare by walking to the top floor of the Woolworth Building. Perhaps it was his way of saying it that made the Orpheum audience laugh. He was boastful. But Harriet Towne, as the girl who loved and waited, took him seriously. His half-embarrased, half-bombastic small-town gallant seemed quite the best thing in yesterday's hilarity. "Rice and Old Shoes" was funny almost to the end, when the audience traced the tail-light of a motor cycle across scenery to a church and then to a cottage.

A fat man in love is usually excellent comedy, but Douglas Leavitt made a fat man married even better fun in his skit with Ruth Mary Lockwood. Was it the way the Mrs. kept pulling up his vest? Or was it that furious tete-a-tete in which Ruth tells him now she knows "how a Cadillac" and he comes right back with "Stutz so?" Such quick repartee wrung admiration. Shrieks of laughter, too.

Miss Norah Bayes, "returning by popular demand," as the program had it, was applauded as usual, thus proving the perennial charm of a comely woman with a semibaritone voice and personality. The audience liked best her song with the chorus, "He lay there and she lay there, and the wall lay right between." One knew that at the end Norah would marry them and then take the wall away before either they or the audience got used to it.

McLaughlin and Evans' East Side sketch and the black-face turn by Dennie O'Neill and "Cy" Plunkett amused the audience greatly; the roller-skating "Las Splendides" went well; Wade Booth, baritone soloist, was encored; the crowd stayed to enjoy Fred Berrens and Lora Foster, and a mechanical piano put on a song-dance act.

FRED STONE CHURCH SPEAKER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Fred Stone, comedian, yesterday made his first planned public speech for religion since he announced more than a year ago that he had decided to work actively for the church instead of being a passive Christian. He spoke in behalf of a campaign for funds to build the $4,000,000 Broadway Temple. Elsie Janis, actress, also spoke briefly and a prayer she wrote in war time was read.

Declaring that religion has enabled him to sing and dance with "an added inspiration," Stone said he did not consider a career on the stage to be incompatible with a religious life, and urged that New York City build as many first-grade churches as it now has theaters. The Broadway Temple will be housed in a 21-story building, which will contain a church, an auditorium, a day nursery, playgrounds, gymnasium and swimming pool.

The fund, which the association hopes to raise, will be used in building a structure at Sixteenth and Locust streets costing $1,425,000, a West End building to cost $450,000, a South Side structure, $400,000; a Carondelet building, $150,000; $25,000 for a permanent camp, $25,000 in additions to the North Side building, $200,000 for the Railroad Y. BY RICHARD L. STOKES.

WITH a consistently pleasurable performance of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," the San Carlo Opera Co. brought to a close, last night at the Odeon, what the management pronounced its most successful season in St. Louis, both as to attendance and receipts. It was estimated that at least 15,000 persons witnessed the nine productions.

From the first note of the overture to the finale, Verdi's opera is characterized by inspired melody and dramatic ardor. "La Forza del Destino" belongs chronologically to the master's second period, following "Un Ballo in Maschera" and preceding "Don Carlos." It antedated "Aida" by nine years and "Otello" by 25 years. In view of the fact that "Tristan und Isolde" was not produced until 1865, and "Das Rheingold" and "Die Walkuere" until 1870, it is interesting to note that Verdi, as early as 1862, apparently of his own initiative, struck in the present opera upon the Wagnerian ideas of the leit-motif and of declamatory melos.

Unlike those battle horses, "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore" and "La Traviata," the withers of "La Forza" remain unwrung by incessant campaigning. This was its second production here in recent years. At least two of its numbers are universally familiar—the duet for tenor and baritone, "Solenne in quest' ora," and the soprano solo, "Pace, pace, mio Dio." But as a whole, this 62-year-old opera retains, for St. Louis audiences, much of the freshness and surprise of a novelty.

The story, after a Spanish drama by the Duke of Rivas, relates how the capricious power of fate compels a lover accidentally to slay his sweetheart's father and brother, and to bring about his own death and hers. The plot is sanguinary, but it is redeemed by the sweetness and purity of the music.

Salazar at His Best.

Manuel Salazar, cast as the ill-starred lover, has never sung here with more beauty of voice, a more virile and yet poignant feeling, than he exhibited last night. He was admirably supported by the appealing accents of the hapless heroine, sung by Miss Saroya, and by the manly utterance and demeanor of Mario Basiola, as the brother who discovers that his bosom friend is the man against whom he has sworn vengeance for his father's murder. Minor parts were capably supplied by Misses Klinova and Morosini, and by Messrs. Cervi, Curci and Di Biasi. The audience, a large part of which understood as a native tongue the text of the opera, was highly demonstrative. Carlo Peroni directed with spontaneity and fire.

Members of the company left after the performance for Chicago, where the San Carlo organization is making its first visit this week, although it has played frequently in New York and Boston.

Breaking the Ten Commandments-

You can go on intending to save some day, but you'll never be free from ever-present need of saving.

Like the prisoner on the rock-pile who said the rocks reminded him of the Ten Commandments:

WHEELER REPLIES TO PARTISAN ATTACK

Says People of Montana Repudiated Stories at Polls and Quotes Judge's Approval of Him.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senator Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, the "prosecutor" in the Daugherty investigation, replied today to charges made against him by the Republican National Committee News Bureau by saying that the people of Montana "repudiated these stories and the authors of them by a majority of more than 20,000 at the last election."

The statement of the Montana Senator was brought out by a detailed attack on him issued last week by the News Bureau under the caption of "What Everybody Should Know About Senator Wheeler and His Montana Gang." The attack was to the effect that, while Senator Wheeler was United States Attorney for Montana, "the State became the hotbed of treason and sedition, the leaders in the treasonable and seditious movement being friends of Wheeler's," and that he refused to interfere.

"Everybody knows," said Senator Wheeler's statement, "what the story was put out for, and everybody in Montana knows that the charges are absolutely false. The people of Montana repudiated these stories and the authors of them by a majority of more than 20,000 votes at the last election.

"Complete Refutation."

Persons convicted under his regime as District Attorney, "including two ex-Attorneys-General of the State, charged with tampering with a jury," and their friends, the statement continued, sought to accuse him "when the war hysteria was at its height with a neglect of duty." A "complete refutation" of these charges, he said, was made by Federal Judge Bourquin of the Montana District, in a letter dated Nov. 2, 1922.

"I regret to hear there is a revival of the unfounded charges that while United States Attorney you refused to prosecute persons guilty of sedition," Judge Bourquin's letter, as given out by Senator Wheeler, read. "The truth is, evidenced by the records of this court, you prosecuted many charged with that offense, most of whom, with no reproach to you, were not indicted by the grand jury or were found not guilty either by direction of the Court or the will of the trial jury. The times were favorable to loose, unfounded and trivial charges of that character. * * *

Competent Prosecutor.

"A competent prosecutor always will refuse to conduct such prosecutions, refuse to persecute, and so far as you did so, it was with the sanction, approval and suggestion of the Court, in furtherance of sound public policy, and in vindication of your official oath and duty to yourself, to the Court and to society."

Judge Bourquin said he made his statement "with no object but simple justice to an honest, able and diligent prosecutor in a most trying period of our country's history."

In a later communication, Judge Bourquin followed up his statement with a congratulation to Senator Wheeler upon his 1922 election, predicting that his Senate service "would redound to your credit and the people's benefit," and adding in a personal postscript: "Apropos certain litigation of 1917, you were right that 'they' would 'get you,' and I was right that if they did, it would contribute much to your future advancement."

DAUGHERTY SAYS HE'S SUPPORTING THE PRESIDENT

In Race for Delegate.

He intimated that he would not withdraw from the race for delegate-at-large in the Ohio primaries, despite the fact that this delegation to the Republican National Convention undoubtedly will be instructed for Coolidge.

When asked if he had given the matter of his candidacy a thought since his resignation Daugherty said: "That's right, I am a candidate. Hadn't thought of that. I don't remember just what the law is, but I suppose it is too late for me to withdraw, if I wanted to. I have got to go out to Ohio pretty soon. I must remember about that. I've got some business out there—prefectly clean, honorable business. It's sort of dangerous for a man to have business these days, you know."

Daugherty took a long walk along the board walk yesterday and returned to the hotel for a nap.

CLEVELAND, O., March 31.—Republican leaders in Ohio face a difficult situation in the Daugherty case. The former Attorney-General always has been a power in Ohio politics. When he was dismissed there was manifest among his closest friends a bitter resentment against the President.

There is every indication this resentment will be carried into the primary fight, and the only way it can be expressed is for the Daugherty following to make every effort to give him a vote so large as to leave no doubt where Ohio stands in the controversy between Coolidge and Daugherty. Yet the situation is all the more difficult because votes cast for Daugherty as a delegate are cast for President Coolidge.

No straight-out rebuke can be administered to the President by the friends of Daugherty except by voting for some candidate for delegate-at-large who is pledged to Senator Johnson, and in adopting this course Daugherty's friends would be aligning themselves with Daugherty's enemies.

It has been suggested that, if elected, Daugherty will not act as delegate, but will permit his alternate to take his place. Those who best know Daugherty, however, venture the observation he never has been in the habit of sitting idly by and ignoring national conventions. They further say he is not in the habit of forgetting those who who have done him an injury.

It is too much to say that the manner in which he was removed from the Cabinet has won over to him any of his old-time enemies. It is a fact, however, that today there are dozens of Republican leaders, who three days ago were longing for Daugherty's disgrace, but now are in sympathy with him and bitterly condemning the President.

They point out that Mr. Coolidge, by not acting promptly, laid himself open to criticism that has weakened him in Ohio and elsewhere. This criticism has not been quieted by his action now and new antagonisms have been aroused.

Daugherty has always had friends who were intensely loyal and enemies who were unceasingly active. Both friends and enemies say he is a fighter and never a quitter. The friends today believe just as implicitly in his integrity as they ever did. His enemies are forced to admit a growing admiration for his pluck in the face of hostile investigation. A wave of reaction in his favor has set in, many Republican leaders believe, that will leave President Coolidge considerably weaker in Ohio than he was.

Roxie Stinson Defends Smith, "Not Vindictive" Toward Daugherty.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 31.—Roxie Stinson, whose statements in the Daugherty investigation caused a sensation, on returning to her home here yesterday declared that "everything Jesse Smith, her former husband, ever did was at the instigation or through the association of others."

Commenting on the resignation of Daugherty, Miss Stinson said: "I was not interested. I did not care. I do not feel vindictive toward Harry Daugherty, although I dislike him. But it amuses me to think that he is now trying to make himself out a martyr. I was rather angry when he attempted to assail my character through the hotel episode at Cleveland and I know I should feel vindictive but I do not."

MONTANA ALWAYS PROGRESSIVE ON NATIONAL ISSUES

should happen, the dissension in the Republican ranks might actually work to Walsh's disadvantage, by bringing out a candidate against him who would probably prove to be a more formidable opponent than Rankin.

Dixon, incidentally, is the man for whom E. Mont Riley of Kansas City has been peddling a vice presidential boom. It is not taken seriously in Montana.

Considering the influence that the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. exerts in Montana, the statement that this is politically a progressive commonwealth may seem strange. The statement is true as to the position taken by the State on national issues, for the copper company apparently doesn't care greatly who is the President of the United States or even who are the Senators from Montana. What the company mainly wants is a grip on local affairs, and to this end it is in politics up to its neck." It is a household word in Montana. Everybody calls it either the "A. C. M." or just "The Company." You can't engage in political discussion anywhere in the State without hearing frequent reference to "The Company."

So-and-so is a "Company Man," another is "one of the company's stool pigeons," another is fighting or being fought by the "company"—apparently everybody of any political consequence in Montana bears some definite, well understood relationship to "The Company."

Wheeler fought "The Company," which helped to encompass his defeat in the gubernatorial race of 1920. Some idea of how the economic issue overshadows the political may be gained from the fact that Henry L. Myers, then a Senator from Montana, a conservative Democrat, came out for Dixon, the Republican, against Wheeler. Two years later Wheeler rode into the senatorship on the wave of popular discontent with the Republican administration.

Though on good enough terms outwardly, there is no love lost between Walsh and Wheeler. At bottom, they are vastly different types of men. Walsh, however, has always remained regular by supporting Wheeler, and he will get his political reward next fall, which Wheeler will give fight to be returned to Clare Sheridan Finds Study in Contrasts in Liberal Women M. P.

Mrs. Winthringham, Typical Wife and Mother Is Quiet—Lady Terrington "Bright Spot" in Commons.

By CLARE SHERIDAN.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The two Liberal women M. P.'s are as unlike each other as day and night. The idea that they are thrown together for party work is simply comic.

Mrs. Winthringham was a member before the last general election. This is her return. She is quiet and colorless in personality. Her clothes are dull and nondescript, her face is earnest but without expression, she arouses no controversy and no comment. She is a sincere and steady worker, a typical wife and mother. One feels inclined to wonder why she does not feel a pang of contrition at the amount of home neglect that being a member of Parliament must entail.

Her Liberal sister is Lady Terrington. When the name is mentioned it produces various reactions in various people, either humorous or abusive, but it never leaves a blank silence. Her husband, before he inherited the title from a distant relative, was Mr. Woodhouse, a solicitor.

Has Decided Opinions and Wears Stylish Clothes.

Everybody has a story to tell about Lady Terrington. London is flooded with anecdotes concerning her. She insists that she has very decided opinions regarding the equality between men and women.

The real concern of her ladyship, however, is her clothes. She deemed it necessary to write to the newspapers and deny the allegation that on the occasion of her first appearance in Parliament she wore ropes of pearls.

Miss Jewson, who was described as wrapped in a shawl, made no contradiction.

Lady Terrington is known to be the best dressed woman in the House. The others are not dangerous competitors. She complains bitterly that the press does not accurately describe her dresses. In reply to her complaint to the chief Whip he answered:

"If you will show me what you are wearing, I promise I will have it all accurately reported."

"Women Should Make Themselves Attractive."

She knows people are inclined to be ill-natured and her justification to me of vanity was that "women should make themselves attractive when they are in a community of men."

"And when they are not," I answered.

She futrher assured me that "the members have told me that I am a little bright spot of color in the House."

The prevalent humorous opinion is that Lady Terrington stood for Parliament in order to be able to "vamp" 600 men. But in this vamping business she is not democratic. Her gardener complained bitterly and finally left, because "her Ladyship would persist in the habit of shouting orders from her bathroom window, wrapped in a bath towel." But gardeners were ever a conservative body.

CARDINAL MUNDELEIN GIVES TRADITIONAL FORMAL DINNER

American Prelates to Take Charge of Titular Churches and Then Return to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 31.—Cardinal Mundelain last night gave the formal dinner which devolves upon one who is rasied to the purple to the students of his alma mater in the Propaganda Fide, where he studied in Rome. There were 150 students present from all parts of the world and representatives of a score of nations.

The new American Cardinal, acting as host, gave a short address in which he urged the students to go out into the world on the mission for which the college for the propagation of the faith was formed.

Cardinal Hayes will take charge of his titular church, Santa Maria in Via Lata, next Thursday, and will leave for the United States April 10. Cardinal Mundelein will take over his titular church on April 21 and is expected to start back home during the first week of May.

A group of New Yorkers last night tendered Cardinal Hayes a dinner, at which were present among others Monsignor O'Hern of the American College, and members of the party which accompanied the American prelate, from New York for his elevation. Both the new American Cardinals will be received by Pope Pius during the week, probably on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Prediction of New Flood Causes Terror.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TIFLIS, Republic of Georgia, March 2.—Prof. Fedorow of Petrograd recently announced that the poles have been set in motion and predicted in consequence that the Arctic Ocean would overflow all Europe. This prophecy inspired terror among the peasants of the Northern Caucasus which soviet officials have not been able to allay. There are general pilgrimages to churches, and wholesale preparations are being made for the universal destruction which is believed to be imminent in Europe.

Here's a Wrench Without a Casting

No wonder the TRIMO Monkey Wrench is a favorite with men who use tools hard. There isn't a casting in it. The stationary jaw and handle of the TRIMO Monkey Wrench are one piece of specially selected tool steel, drop-forged. All parts are renewable. Nut guards keep the adjustment perfect, once the wrench is set. Since the movable jaw extends forward instead of toward the handle when adjusting, the leverage obtained increases in proportion to the work on which the wrench is used.

Buy a TRIMO can find a TRIMO. Design, material and workmanship combine to put them in a class by themselves. Get a TRIMO in your hand and see. Your dealer has them.

MAIL PILOT TELLS OF BEING LOST AT NIGHT IN ALASKA

ENTIRE TOWN OUT TO WELCOME HIM

Post-Dispatch Bureau,

WASHINGTON, March 31.—But for the resourcefulness of Pilot Carl B. Eielson, the attempt to establish an air mail route between Fairbanks and McGrath, Alaska, probably would have resulted in failure on the initial flight.

Eielson lost his way in the dark when he got off the course in returning to Fairbanks from McGrath. By exercising all his ingenuity, he finally got back to the route, landing in Fairbanks with only a light in front of the hangar to guide him.

He broke off one ski and the propeller, but the plane suffered no serious damage and was quickly put in commission for the next flight.

The entire population of Fairbanks was on the landing field to greet the "lost" pilot when he landed.

In making this announcement, Postmaster-General New today made public part of Eielson's report of the flight. He found it so interesting he read it at Friday's Cabinet meeting. President Coolidge sent this message to Eielson:

"I congratulate you on the conspicuous success of your undertaking. Your experience provides a unique and interesting chapter in the rapidly developing science of aerial navigation."

Accompanying this letter went the following from New: "I don't know of a more interesting story than is provided by the very intelligently prepared report, and I have no doubt it will attract the public attention which it so thoroughly deserves."

Describes Flight in Night.

Eielson made the first leg of his trip from Fairbanks to McGrath without a mishap, covering within three hours a distance formerly traversed by dog team in 16 to 18 days. Rather than face a cold motor in the morning and with a full realization of the danger of being caught by the early descending darkness of an Alaskan February night, he began the return journey at 2:35 p. m.

"I expected to get home by 5 o'clock," said Eielson in his report. "That is just at dusk. I flew over Appel Mountain and in one hour and 15 minutes I reached Lake Minchomina, which is nearly the half-way point. This was on schedule, so I thought I was right. Later I passed over a stream which was not on the map and I thought it must be the Kantishna River.

"Toward the left I saw a bluff which looked like the Neena Bluff. I checked it further by noting the river going around the bluff. I was positive it was Neena when I saw the river entering the Tanana at the point where the Neena River enters the Tanana, at the town of Neena.

"I struck for the bluff and everything was all right except that the town of Neena was not in its place. I knew I must have veered to the left, so I started up the Tanana. I followed it half an hour (that is 50 miles).

50 Miles Off Course.

"By this time it was pitch dark. I could not believe I had got 50 miles off my course after the same compass course had brought me to Lake Minchomina, half way, which is exactly on the course. I could not see the lights of Neena, so left the river, going east.

"I thought I must have got on the Kantishna River and I was following it back to Mount McKinley, as the country looked flat in the pitch darkness. The sky was entirely overcast; not a star shone. I wandered around completely lost most of an hour. Then I knew the river I had left was the Tanana. About this time I saw a light so I cut my altitude and went down to it. It must prove been a trapper's cabin near the Chataneka River.

"I was tempted to set the ship down there and have a nice place to sleep, but I knew I would wreck it if I did, so I decided to look around some more. I went back to the big river I had left and while following it down saw a flare in the distance. I hit for it and it turned out to be my home field. There was a light in front of the hangar."

5 Below Zero, but Warm.

Eielson had been in the air seven hours that day, covering a distance farther than from Fairbanks and Siberia, Fairbanks to Point Barrow or to Fairbanks to Juneau.

This seems incredible in Alaska, for it takes a month of hardship at this time of the year to go from Fairbanks to the fastest route—by dogs. The flight was made with the thermometer at 5 below zero, but Eielson complained of being too warm. This because of warm clothes and a special heating arrangement for heating the cockpit, perfected by the Postoffice Department.

Engineer for 50 Years Retires.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., March 31.—John Q. Hays, 74 years old, for 50 years an engineer in the employ of the Missouri Pacific and the roads that preceded the present system, made his last run Sunday. He is being retired on a pension and will settle down in Little Rock. According to J. L. Kendall, Missouri Pacific superintendent, Hays never has been in a major wreck and never been injured. A banquet was given for Hays' Friday night. Supt. Kendall was one of the guests.

POINCARE TO CONTINUE OLD POLICY, HE TELLS DEPUTIES; DENIES FRANCE IS SELFISH

Premier, Presenting New Cabinet to Parliament, Declares Troops Will Be Withdrawn From Ruhr Only as Germany Pays Reparations.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 31.—In presenting his new ministry to the Chamber of Deputies today Premier Poincare reaffirmed all the policies of his late Government and expressed "firm hope" for rapid liquidation of Germany's reparations after the expert committees have handed in their report.

The Chamber gave Poincare a fairly cool reception when he mounted the tribune. A large number of Deputies broke into laughter when the Premier said none of the men chosen for the new ministry had abandoned any of his opinions.

The policies practiced in the formation of the new Cabinet, Poincare declared, had as their object pursuance of the international policies of the former Government, and pursuance also of the economic and financial policies that had been approved by a majority of the chamber. Regarding the German occupation, the Premier said:

"France cannot withdraw her troops from the Ruhr except in proportion to payments. She will not exchange positive pledges for uncertain promises, but she has firm hope that after the experts have handed in their report, a general settlement and rapid liquidation of the reparations will become possible.

"As soon as the work of the experts has terminated, France will be ready to study it and seek with our friends to find the elements of a final solution."

Must Avoid Inflation.

"We must at all costs keep out of our finances all the germs of inflation," he said. "The time is no more when peoples can shut themselves up tranquilly at home, draw up their budgets as they like and disinterest themselves with their neighbors.

"Today there is no nation that is not exposed to the curiosity of others. If we have debtors we have creditors also, and until a concerted general settlement is reached we will be obliged to practice attentive reserve."

In allusion to the recent attack on France by Lloyd George, the Premier said:

"Victorious France has never, since the treaty of peace was signed, obeyed selfish inspirations. She has never had the ridiculous, imperialistic ambition which is so willingly attributed to her."

Speech Amuses Deputies.

The Chamber received with a great deal of amusement Poincare's affirmation that the Government adhered to the policy of resisting any and all appropriations which were not balanced by corresponding receipts, this being the point on which his preceding Cabinet fell and which was insisted upon particularly by M. de Lasteyrie, the Finance Minister, who was left out of the new Cabinet.

Successful efforts to stabilize the franc, the Premier remarked, would have no efficacy unless this Chamber and its successors persevered in an inexorable resolution to balance all budgets.

The passage most applauded was that in which the Premier declared that France would not evacuate the Ruhr until Germany undertook regulated reparation payments. His peroration was particularly cheered by the Republican and Democratic groups.

At the conclusion of his statement, Poincare asked the Chamber not to press the debate thereon until the emergency appropriation bill was adopted, as, this being the last day of the month, it was necessary to provide the Government with funds for the month beginning tomorrow.

Experts Expect Germany to Accept Reparations Report

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT,

PARIS, March 31.—Reparation experts have reason to believe, according to information reaching the Post-Dispatch and New York World, that the present German Government will agree to pay $2,500,000,000 gold marks annual reparations.

This figure, equal to about $500,000,000, is the total annual reparation figure and is to begin with the fourth year after a moratorium. It is the central figure toward which the experts have striven in making their report on Germany's ability to pay. This is the figure which is expected to be the center of the German inner struggle as to whether it is better to accept or refuse.

All other questions, such as the establishment of a gold bank, debentures on railroads and industry are considered interior German affairs. If Germany accepts and is able to carry out the payments as the experts recommend.

Despite adverse reports from Berlin, indicating that Germany will decline the terms, the experts maintain they have reason to believe that Germany will accept the plan. The experts, especially the Americans, are disturbed by reports that the final accord was reached by compromise. They are further perturbed over comments that they have been trying to arrive at political instead of technical results. They maintain the report, when published, will show that political considerations have not influenced them, but that they concentrated on Germany's ability to pay.

It is known, however, that the American and British technical experts attached to the committee wanted the report to make the annual reparations figure under 2,000,000,000 gold marks. But the leading experts, including British and American, decided the technical experts had underrated Germany's ability to pay and said their own figures proved it. Whatever difference of opinion remain lies in the technical advisers' belief that the others are too optimistic over Germany's rapid recovery, and hence have fixed the annuities too high and too soon. Some maintain that, even if Germany tries in good faith to carry out the annual payments, it will not be possible. These opinions, however, will not show in the report except as attached reports on taxes and budget.

Seemingly there is no doubt that the French and British will cause acceptance of the report through the Reparation Commission. Germany, despite the experts' assurances, remains the doubtful point. Just before finishing their labors, it is reported, the experts discussed whether they should not decide on a reparation total and determined it was a political question and that their technical job was to decide how much Germany could pay annually. It is significant, however, that the debentures on German railroads, which are expected to yield a billion marks annually, were fixed to run over a 50-year period.

As both the French and German elections come within the following three weeks, the question of reparation are certain to become an important if not decisive issue.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 31.—The Dawes committee of reparation experts buckled down this afternoon to the work of ironing out the remaining divergences among its members over their report to the Reparation Commission.

The desire of all concerned is to decide upon a text to which all can subscribe and the wording of which will not ruffle France, Belgium or Germany.

The most extreme care is being taken that there shall be no phrase in the report susceptible of being construed as meaning that the occupation of the Ruhr is either legal or illegal. The British, for their part, are willing to consider the Ruhr situation an accomplished fact and are desirous that the report shall not consider the past, but only the present and the future.

It is possible that Poincare will insist that the Reparation Commission deliberate on the experts' report before submitting it to the several Governments, in order to allow French opinion to crystallize before the French Government is obliged to make a decision.

Despite the persistent reticence of the members of the drafting committee, the impression in diplomatic and technical circles is that the report will be bound to indicate, although as deftly as possible—the disbelief of the experts in two of the cardinal points of the French program, namely the feasibility of maintaining the schedule of reparation payments adopted May 5, 1921, and the possibility of profitable exploitation of any portion of German territory under allied control.

MERGER COST BASIS OF PHONE RATE PLEA

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Cost of consolidating the Bell and Kinloch telephone systems in St. Louis and increased cost of operation of the merged system over that of operating the present Bell plants and lines will necessitate higher telephone rates in St. Louis, officials of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. told the Missouri Public Service Commission last week. Attorneys for the company will prepare and file with the commission a schedule of proposed higher rates desired by the company within six months, the commission was informed.

"The present rates are not now and in the future cannot possibly be compensatory nor afford a fair return upon the property used, or useful in rendering exchange telephone service in St. Louis," it was stated in the application. "However, your petitioner concurs with the views of the commission, repeatedly expressed, that no change in rates should be made until such time as service is completely unified."

Financial Statement Submitted.

A semi-annual financial statement presented with the application for an extension, covering the six months' period ending Feb. 29 last, showed total operating revenue for that period of $4,005,069. Operating expenses totaled $3,381,829, leaving $623,240 available for return on the investment. This sum would enable a return of about 6½ per cent, as compared to a return of 7½ for the previous six months, or an average return for the year of 6.94 per cent, it was stated. In most rate cases the commission has held approximately 7 per cent to be a reasonable return.

Comparison of the statement with that of the previous six months showed that revenues of the St. Louis exchange increased $144,722, but expenses operation increased $250,374. This resulted in a decrease of $10,622 in net revenue for six months, it was stated.

"The next six months will show tremendous increases in expense with only insignificant increases in revenue," the application stated, "and the net returns for the operations of the next six months will be much less than the returns for the past six months."

Increase in Traffic Expenses.

Traffic expenses increased $106,000 in the past six month and further increases will result due to the increase in traffic at completion of the merger, it was stated.

When the company filed an application with the commission on March 1, 1922, for authority to purchas the Kinloch system in St. Louis, it indicated higher rates would be sought at completion of the merger.

Cost of handling of additional traffic after the merger, maintaining additional property, depreciation, and return on larger capital would increase the operating expenses after the merger by $530,000 over and above the operating expenses of the two separate systems, it was stated. This increase in operating costs, due to the consolidation, could not be met merely by adjustment of the Kinloch rates to those in effect for the Bell system, company attorneys asserted.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. purchased the Kinloch system for $4,200,000, to be paid in preferred stock, plus $140,000 in cash, and assumed mortgages and other indebtedness not to exceed $5,500,000.

Rates Now in Effect.

Individual business telephones, $13 a month; individual residence telephones, $4.50; two-party lines, $3.75; four-party lines, $3; individual business telephones, limited to 67 calls a month, $4 a month, with a sliding scale of charges for additional calls; two-party business lines, limited to 60 calls a month, $3.50, plus 5 cents for each call after the first 60.

The financial statement for the six months ending Feb. 29 last contained the following items: Revenues—exchange service revenues, $3,710,116; toll service revenues, $175,080; miscellaneous, $119,873; total, $4,005,069.

Expenses — Current repairs, $513,288; depreciation, $575,803; traffic expenses, $1,271,085; amortization of strike expense, $24,363; commercial expenses, $263,689; general expenses, $135,210; uncollectable, $34,165; taxes, $352,891; rent reductions, $38,835; license payments, $172,500; total, $3,381,829.

Late National Head of Antisaloon League

HEAD OF THE NATIONAL ANTISALOON LEAGUE DIES

Dr. P. A. Baker General Superintendent of the Organization Continuously Since 1903.

By the Associated Press.

WESTERVILLE, O., March 31—Dr. P. A. Baker, 65 years old, for 20 years general superintendent of the National Anti-Saloon League died at his home here yesterday. He had been in ill health for almost a year. He recently announced he would present his resignation as general superintendent of the league, due to ill health.

Dr. Baker began his fight against strong drink as soon as he entered the ministry in the '80s. It was in 1896, however, that he became associated with the Anti-Saloon League.

His first pastorate was at Jasper, O., and one of his first converts was a saloon keeper, whom he persuaded to pour his stocks of liquor into the gutter and join the church.

It was during his pastorate of a Columbus (O.) church that he yielded to the urgings of Dr. Howard H. Russell and others of the Anti-Saloon League and decided to cast his lot with that organization. He was appointed superintendent of the Cleveland district of the organization in 1896, and the next year was promoted to the State superintendency, with headquarters at Columbus. In 1903, he was elected general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, and was re-elected biennially ever since. In 1919, upon the formation of the World League Against Alcoholism, Dr. Baker was made one of its vice presidents.

LABOR FEDERATION BACKS PENDING IMMIGRATION BILL

Calls Measure for Conscription of Labor In Emergency "Most Inimical" Ever Considered.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Immigration legislation is rated first among nine "outstanding" desirable pending measures and the bill providing the conscription of labor in a "national emergency" is described as the most "inimical" ever considered by Congress, in the report of the American Federation of Labor Legislative Committee, made public today.

The other eight measures approved, in the order given by the committee, are:

Bills for settlement of railroad labor disputes; the child labor constitutional amendment; workmen's compensation in the District of Columbia; soldier bonus; adequate wages for District of Columbia school teachers; extension of vocational rehabilitation; reclassification of Federal employes; adequate wages for postal employes.

The Johnson immigration bill, the report said, was being "maliciously attacked" both by foreign countries and by "unfair and greedy" domestic corporations. Opposition of the Federal Council of Churches to the abolition of the 'gentlemen's agreement" with Japan by excluding "aliens ineligible for citizenship" has been protested by President Gompers of the federation, the report adds, and it is "hoped that the influence that led it (the church council) into such a mistake will be exposed."

As to the "proposed conscription measure," the report said the term "national emergency" covered "many possibilities and may come in peace as well as war time." It added that the proposal to authorize the President to "stabilize prices of services and of all commodities" was a wage fixing measure, adding that radical "propaganda" by prominent public men indicated the intent to pay labor soldier's rates in such an emergency, or pay each wage earner "$30 a month, a place to live, food and other necessaries of life for himself and dependents."

NEW STRIKES IN ENGLAND THREATENED

LONDON, March 31.—More than 2,000,000 residents of this country—workmen, their wives and children—are involved in claims for higher wages in dispute that, if not settled, threaten big strikes.

A general coal strike and a lockout in all shipbuilding yards apparently is to result from the demands for higher wages for building and engineering workmen. Little less menacing are the demands about to be formulated by the unions in the wool and textile trades.

Further serious disputes are approaching the breaking point in the pottery industry, in the soap and candle trades, in the paint, color and varnish trades, and in the drug and fine chemical industries.

Beside these manifold threats, all indicating a revolt of workers against present conditions, the London traffic tie-up that threatened Saturday to bring about a government crisis seems insignificant.

The reason for the outbreak of industrial strife is stated by the press and most nonlabor observers to be due to the workers seeking to take advantage of the Labor Government. I think this is partly true, but it is also true that most of the demands now coming to a head have been simmering since before the last election.

Labor View of Situation.

"In section after section of industry demands for higher wages are reaching the point of crisis. The demands are in every case of long standing, and their coming to fruition at this time has been foreseen by all who watch events closely. Meanwhile the employers are preparing by speeches for another attack.

"This time the object is to bring down the wages of the 'sheltered' trades—land transport, railways, postal workers, civil workers—to the level against which the 'unsheltered' are at this moment in revolt."

This labor assertion that an attempt is being made to reduce wages in the "sheltered" trades, my information indicates, is untrue, but it is being used to arouse class passions and to alarm the "sheltered" workers.

The menace of a great series of lockout exists if the claims for higher wages are pressed. The shipping industry is believed to be prepared to lead the way with a lockout, April 10, unless the Southampton workers return to work.

Early Election Anticipated.

There exists belief in some sections of Labor and almost universally outside of Labor, that the Macdonald Cabinet is not strong enough to weather the storm. In this case dissolution, with a general election, is not far off and may be fought out to the accompaniment of big strikes and lockouts. Former Premier Baldwin is evidently of this latter opinion, as in a telegram to a conference of Yorkshire Unionist clubs yesterday he said:

"The Conservative party is the present bulwark against revolutionary Socialism. I look to our Yorkshire clubmen to do their duty to the King and country in our coming fight."

Such language is used by a party leader only on the eve of election, and I believe the chances are even that Premier Macdonald will not last more than another six weeks, if so long, in office.

London Tramway Strikers Accept Terms of Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 31.—The London tramway men today voted to accept the terms for settlement of their strike reached between the union delegates and representatives of the companies. This will result in the strike which has tied up the London car lines for the last 10 days being called off.

TENANTS SLOW IN MOVING OUT OF OLD UNION MARKET

Notice to Vacate by Tomorrow Was Given, but They Will Have Few Days of Grace.

Union Market, by tomorrow morning, should present a scene of complete desertion, its old building and stalls void of tenants, awaiting the hand of wreckers who will prepare the site for a new $1,000,000 municipal bond issue market and garage. But apparently the majority of its tenants are loath to leave the old landmark, and today most of the stalls seemed to be doing business as usual.

Comptroller Nolte, who ordered the tenants to move by April 1, is not worried. He is willing to allow a few days unofficial grace and then, if the market is not cleared, he will ask the city legal department to take up the matter of formal eviction. Most of the tenants have advised him that they have new locations, but none has defied the order to get out.

Work of clearing the Union Market site is expected to begin in a few weeks. Necessary condemnation has been voted by the Board of Aldermen and the work now awaits only the sale of bonds.

When $700 Saves $16,000

In 1915 a splendid bank building was erected in Bridgeport, Conn.

Less than two years later the iron plumbing pipe developed serious leaks, which occurred with increasing frequency until the Fall of 1922, when the rust-consumed iron pipe was replaced with Brass, in both the cold and hot water lines.

The bank paid $16,800 to make this change-over; but when the building was erected could have been installed for only $703.38 over the cost of the iron pipe.

Leo Stack Gives Bond for Men in Denver.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Col., March 31.—Six men arrested yesterday during a disturbance between Ku Klux Klan supporters and anti-klan factions were released under bond on charges of carrying concealed weapons had been preferred against two and all had been charged with disturbing the peace.

According to J. Leo Stack, oil operator, to whom each of the arrested men made a statement after he had furnished bond for them, a large number of klan posters were thrown into the clubrooms of the Knights of Columbus When they went to the door they saw no one, but shortly afterward a telephone call was received from a member of the order that klan members were working near his home, according to Stack, Six men then went to the place where the disturbance ensued, Stack said. One shot was fired, according to the police, who said that a patrolman had fired once in an attempt to halt one of the men arrested. Those arrested declared that they had not brandished weapons or struck any blows.

BERGDOLL'S RETURN APRIL FOOL'S JOKE

By SAMUEL SPEWACK,

BERLIN, March 31.—Germany abounds this year in April 1 foolery, but the best jest so far is provided by Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, and it is not clear whether the draft evader or the American magazine men who tried to entice him home are the proper butts of the joke.

Sunday supplements printed pictures of divers performing dental operations on sharks underneath the surface of the Gold Gate. But Bergdoll's drollery surpasses such efforts. According to a Mossbach paper, the American magazine men promised that his sentence would be cut to four months if he sailed before April 1.

The draft dodger wrote a letter promising he would be on his way before that date. But upon investigation—so the story runs—Bergdoll wondered whether the promises were as genuine as the filling of the shark's tooth exhibited in the German newspapers.

A grave touch to the April 1 adventure has been given by the Eberbach Messenger to an account of the visit of the three Hearst representatives and a supposed representative of the American State Department to Bergdoll.

"New Sensation" for America.

The Messenger says that Leighton Blood, who is a correspondent of a Hearst magazine, posed as the State Department man.

From the paper's standpoint, "The American Government is attempting to entice the German-American Bergdoll in order to give the American people a new sensation."

According to the Messenger, the Hearst men carried passports signed in Secretary Hughes' name and promised him that if he returned immediately he would not have to serve more than four months of his five-year sentence. "And further blank passports were carried with Bergdoll's photograph and the name Bryant," under which he was to travel.

The paper recounts the slacker's hesitation and alleged statements of the Hearst men that the State Department had granted him a few more days' consideration." Blood told the draft dodger, according to the newspaper, when the latter paused in thoughtful hesitation, that he might as well come because Blood knew two expeditions had started from Paris, "either to kidnap or murder Bergdoll."

Not Coming Home, He Says.

The newspaper says solemnly that Bergdoll was being tempted to go back "to draw public attention away from the oil scandal in which various members of the Government are involved. From all indications the material for the article was furnished by the slacker himself.

The fact remains that Bergdoll resisted the temptation to see his native shore and stands on the April 1 letter to the magazine men. Interested observers are wondering who fooled whom. The magazine had already announced that Bergdoll had agreed to come home.

But the slacker is resting comfortably at Eberbach today, and if he intends to leave, his interviews there with newspaper men must be still another April 1 story. For he insists that he is not going back until the Government realizes he is not guilty of desertion since he never was in the army.

Government Has No Interest in Bergdoll Negotiations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—State Department officials today reiterated that the Government had never promised any immunity or a light sentence to Grover C. Bergdoll, should he return to this country.

It was explained that State Department letters carried by American Legion representatives in Germany were such documents as are usually given to persons traveling abroad in the form of introductions to Consular and diplomatic officers and designed primarily to make the tasks of the traveler easier. These letters are available at the request of any reputable organization. The Washington government had no other interest in the matter.

Friends of Bergdoll recently approached the War Department with the outline of conditions under which they said he would return, but met with a flat rejection

State and War Department officials announced jointly 10 days ago that no agreement would be entered into with the draft evader and that the Government had taken no part in steps to persuade him to return.

Plant Reopened After Two Years.

The Mississippi Valley Iron Co. yesterday, for the first time in two years, resumed operations at its plant at 6500 South Broadway, under a contract whereby the St. Louis Coke and Iron Co. supplies virtually all the raw materials and receives in return the plant's entire output of pig iron, between 350 and 400 tons a day. The arrangement, originally planned as an emergency measure while the Granite City furnace of the St. Louis Coke and Iron Co. was being repaired, will probably be permanent, officials of the latter company said. A second blast furnace, to be installed at Granite City, will bring the combined pig iron production to 1400 tons a day, it was said.

PARIS, March 31.—A woman who registered in the Hotel Palais Royal here under the name of Helen Kuebler of St. Louis, was found dead yesterday morning from veronal, having taken several bottles of the soporific. The police are not satisfied with a suicide theory and are making an investigation, but suicide is probable.

The woman was about 40 years old, well dressed and handsome. From her wardrobe markings there is some doubt as to whether the name she registered under is her correct one.

DAVIS WILL NOT DROP CLIENTS AS BID FOR OFFICE

Ex-Ambassador Rejects Suggestion He Change Legal Connections to Win Presidential Favor.

'WOULD NOT PAY THIS PRICE FOR HONOR'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—John W. Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain, whose availability for the Democratic nomination for the presidency has been widely discussed, has written a friend in the Senate rejecting any suggestion that he drop his present legal connections in order to strengthen his political position.

"Any lawyer who surrenders his independence by trimming his professional course to fit the gusts of popular opinion, in my judgment, not only dishonors himself but degrades his great profession," the letter said. "I tell you in candor that I would not pay this price for any honor in the gift of man."

It had been suggested to Davis that he disassociate himself from various connections as counsel for financial interests, including the Morgan banking firm, on the theory that they would mitigate against consideration of his name by the Democratic National Convention.

"If I were in the market for the goods you offer," replied Davis, "I would not complain of the character of this consignment, although I notice you do not guarantee delivery. The price you put on them, however, is entirely too high.

"You offer me a chance to be the Democratic nominee which carries with it in this year of grace more than a fair prospect of becoming President of the United States. In exchange, I am to abandon forthwith and immediately a law practice which is both pleasant, and, within modest bounds, profitable; to throw over honorable clients who offer me honest employment; and desert a group of professional colleagues who are able, upright and loyal.

"The only limitation upon a right-thinking lawyer's independence is the duty which he owes his clients, once selected, to serve them without the slightest thought of the effect such service may have upon his own personal popularity or political fortunes."

Negro Singer Honored In New York Church

St. George's Thronged at Vespers at Which Songs of Harry Burleigh, Soloist, Are Sung—Purse Given to Composer

NEW YORK, March 31.—Harry T. Burleigh, a negro, for 30 years baritone soloist in the choir of St. George's Episcopal Church, had his reward yesterday, when, at the 4 o'clock vesper service, a capacity crowd came to do him homage. The late J. P. Morgan was a vestryman of St. George's Church, and the late Mayor Seth Low was a member.

Half an hour before the service began the church was filled and standing room was gone long before the first peals of the organ rolled down the darkening nave. Hundreds were turned away. People well known in exclusive social and business circles sat in the same pew, or stood side by side with people of Burleigh's race.

The service had its climax when the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector, at the close of a brief address called on his "faithful co-worker, devoted friend and inspiring companion" to join him. Out of the choir strode a musician, a small man, gray-haired, not very dark but distinctly negroid, wearing the insigna of the degree of doctor of music over his white surplice. He mounted the J. Pierpont Morgan memorial pulpit and he and Dr. Reiland stood there a moment with hands clasped.

Purse Given to Singer.

At the close of the morning service, the vestry had made Burleigh a present of a purse filled with gold.

The vesper service was entirely musical. All the music was composed by the negro, from the first chant of the choir heard from the distance—a setting of the words "Lead me, Lord, lead me in thy righteousness"—to the last prayer.

The processional was Burleigh's and to it the pageant of the church, led by the flag with its red cross glowing on a white ground, proceeded solemnly from the one end of the nave.

Then came the real Burleigh, singing without accompaniment. The choir sang his setting of several Southern spirituals. There was "Nobody Knows de Trouble I've Seen" and "Weepin' Mary" and "Deep River."

Burleigh himself sang the solo part in "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," but it was just after he had stepped down from the pulpit and he was quite hoarse. His voice had lost momentarily the resonant clarity with which it had sounded above the whole choir when he marched in with the procession. Strange music from a choir that has sung the noble old anthems of the masters. Music with a barbaric note of color that gripped the congregation. Sometimes it would be hummed, sometimes there was a humming accompaniment to the words. When the last chord of "Deep River" shaded into silence more than one handkerchief mopped wet eyes.

Dr. Reiland's Address.

Dr. Reiland's brief talk was on the contribution of the negroes to music—"a wondrous, limpid, delicate, spiritual song." He recalled that in the neighborhood of St. George's Church Dvorak was living when he wrote his "Symphony from the New World," said to be based in part on the negro spiritual "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and Burleigh gave him assistance in the writing of this work, Dr. Reiland said.

"Thirty years ago we took into the choir a good man with a fine voice," Dr. Reiland continued. "We did not know that he would become the leading creating genius of his race in music, as a composer and interpreter."

CONFESSED SLAYER TO PLEAD INSANITY

Insanity is to be the defense of Beecher Coleman, confessed murderer of Albert Saegesser, Webster Groves contractor, his counsel indicated when impanelling of a jury to try Coleman was begun in Circuit Judge Wurdeman's court at Clayton today.

All residents of Webster Groves are to be excluded from consideration as jurors. John W. Schuster, one of Coleman's lawyers, said the defense would be obliged to take a change of venue unless this exception was granted. Feeling in the suburb had been so intense that Coleman was taken to the St. Louis jail for safekeeping.

Coleman shot Saegesser as the latter sat in the living room of his home, 686 Oakwood avenue, the evening of Feb. 16, with a radio headphone to his ears. The slayer had been discharged that afternoon by the real estate company of which Saegesser was an official.

After the murder Coleman surrendered at Police Headquarters in St. Louis and made a full statement. He again admitted his guilt at his preliminary hearing, but when arraigned before Judge Wurdeman appeared dazed and mumbled replies in a disconnected manner.

Counsel for Saegesser told a Post-Dispatch reporter that one of the facts they would introduce in the plea was their client's discharge from the Government coast guard service in 1917. He was discharged because of dementia praecox, an unbalanced mental condition, they assert.

Testimony to Start Wednesday.

Witnesses were excused until Wednesday morning, when testimony is expected to start.

Coleman is a former St. Louis policeman and member of the Ku Klux Klan. He was repudiated by the klan at a recent meeting in which "the living death" was pronounced upon him.

HOLDUP AT THEATER ON GRAND BOULEVARD

A robber held up four persons at 11 a. m. today at the Lindell Theater, 3511 North Grand boulevard, and got away with part of the receipts for Saturday night and Sunday, which had been tied up to be taken to bank.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bassal and her 16-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, of 2200 Farrar street, had just finished cleaning up the theater when the robber entered and with a revolver backed them into the box office, where were Manager Samuel Norman and Fred Rits, leader of the orchestra. The robber compelled the four to hold up their hands and ordered Norman to open the safe. He said it was not locked.

The robber saw two packages of bills lying on the desk. He snatched these and, warning the four to stay in the office 20 minutes, ran out and escaped. The amount taken has not been disclosed.

Norman called the police, but no trace of the robber was obtained.

MAN WHO SHOT MAYOR DENIES KLAN WAS INVOLVED

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 31.—The cause of the shooting of Mayor Arthur Sisson by his former friend and neighbor, Newan Estes, on the main street of Maysville, Mo., Saturday is not yet known. Sisson lingers at the point of death in a St. Joseph hospital. His condition is so critical that the doctors are afraid to operate for the bullet. Estes, brought to jail here to escape possible mob violence, refuses to talk, except to deny that he and Sisson quarreled over the Ku Klux Klan, as witnesses to the shooting declared.

One theory of the shooting is that it is an aftermath of the failure of the Dekalb County State Bank at Maysville, Mo., more than a year ago. Sisson and E. H. Bunton, who was president of the bank, are friends and Estes is said to have been angered by Sisson's defense of Bunton. Bunton, who is more than 80 years old, is under indictment on eight counts of embezzlement, forgery and grand larceny. When he was tried at Savannah, Mo., last fall on a change of venue, for forgery, the jury failed to agree. His next trial is set for May at Savannah.

Estes today was admitted to $50,000 bail, with six Maysville citizens as sureties.

ARCHBISHOP GLENNON BUYS JULIUS S. WALSH SR. MANSION

Sale of the Julius S. Walsh Sr. mansion at 4510 Lindell boulevard to Archbishop Glennon, for use as his residence, was announced today by Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., who declined to state the consideration.

Negotiations had been under way for some time. The price mentioned before consummation of the deal was $45,000. Wade was acting for himself and nine other Lindell boulevard property owners who bought the house to prevent its purchase by Charles Geraghty, an undertaker. The syndicate said it had paid $52,000 for the residence.

Geraghty was inclined to make a court case of the dispute, but entrance of the Archbishop into the matter indicated a peaceful settlement. The Archbishop, who now resides at 3810 Lindell boulevard, will take possession of his new home within a few weeks.

Waxing is the easy way to care for Fine Linoleum Floors

A FLOOR of Armstrong's Linoleum, laid the modern way, will last as long as you want it to.

It will never need refinishing. It does not require harsh scrubbing. It will be the easiest of all floors to clean—if you wax it.

This waxing is easy, simple, and inexpensive. It will be described. But first—

A word about laying

To lay linoleum for permanent beauty there is one certain, proved, and proper way. First, a lining of builders' deadening felt is pasted to the bare wood floor. Then the linoleum is pasted to this felt. Round the edges and at the seams, waterproof cement is used. This work is done by any good home furnishing or department store. No tacks, no brads.

Such a floor lies flat and smooth and with seams so tightly joined you can hardly find them. The floor is water-tight and lasting. When the wood underfloor expands in summer or contracts in winter, the deadening felt takes this movement up. The linoleum doesn't stretch, doesn't wrinkle or crack, and is quiet and easier to the tread. In winter the room is warmer.

A word about waxing

Wash new inlaid linoleum as soon as laid with a mild soap like Ivory. Then give it two very thin coats of standard floor wax rubbed in thoroughly, and polished with a weighted brush.

A dry mop used daily will take all dust and dirt from this smooth surface and renew the polish. Rewax once or twice a year, and restore a little more frequently the walked-on places with a cloth moistened with a little liquid wax.

Linoleum so treated mellows and gets better-looking. It will wear for years and years. With this care a linoleum floor is practically permanent and always beautiful. Waxing and polishing makes frequent washing unnecessary and is the easiest way.

Varnish printed linoleum

Printed linoleum should be varnished when new, and about once a year thereafter. This preserves the pattern; hence longer wear! Never use strong soaps or scrubbing powders. They will quickly eat up your fine floor.

Write for free sample and booklet

Let us send you a sample of Armstrong's Linoleum and our 24-page booklet, "New Floors for Old," containing a score of colorplates of distinctive designs that you can see at good stores—Jaspés, carpet inlaids, tile inlaids, and printed patterns; also information on laying linoleum and on how to care for your linoleum floors. You can also buy Armstrong's Linoleum Rugs in printed or inlaid patterns, in four sizes, from 6x9 feet to 9x12 feet.

GIRL KILLED BY OVERTURNED AUTO, THREE ARE HURT

Miss Lola Tinker, 19 years old, a telephone operator, residing at 4556 Wichita avenue, was killed at 2:30 a. m. yesterday when an automobile in which she was riding overturned on Oakland avenue, near Tamm avenue; after the driver lost control. She was caught beneath the machine and her head crushed.

Three of the other four young persons in the car were injured. James Licata, 21, of 6715 Manchester avenue, the driver, suffered a fractured right wrist. Miss Pearl Reeves, 17, of the Wichita avenue address, also a telephone operator, and cousin of Miss Tinker, suffered a fracture of the left collar bone. Injuries to Robert Moon, 19, of 6659 Garner avenue, were a fractured rib and bruises. Howard Moore, 19, of 2040 Knox avenue, was unhurt.

Licata said he did not know how he lost control of the car, saying he was driving east on Overland avenue, about 25 miles an hour when the machine suddenly swerved from side to side and then turned over. All of the occupants, except Miss Tinker, who was in the front seat with Licata, were thrown clear of the car, which was upside down, pointing west, after the accident. The car which Licata had borrowed for the evening from a friend, was damaged.

Moon and Moore, testifying today at the inquest, said the young people were returning from a party in Northwest St. Louis, at which both admitted having a few drinks of "home brew." They said they did not know if Licata had taken any, but asserted he was not intoxicated. The inquest was continued until Thursday to hear the testimony of Licata, whose condition did not permit him to be present today.

Miss Tinker's death was the thirty-fifth automobile fatality of the year. In the corresponding period last year, 28 persons were killed.

EFFORT MADE TO PREVENT WAR PRISONERS' DEPORTATION

Episcopal Commission Says Decree "Does Violence to Traditions of Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Initiation of new proceedings in an effort to prevent deportation of 17 former war-time prisoners, released by Presidents Harding and Coolidge is requested in a letter to Secretary Davis, made public by the Social Service Commission of the Episcopal Diocese of New York.

The men, none of whom is naturalized, were convicted under the now repealed espionage act, and were ordered deported by the Supreme Court. This action, the commission's letter states, "does violence to our American traditions of freedom." It asserts that the crimes of the men convicted under a war statute, do not make them undesirable citizens, and that they should be given a new hearing to determine whether or not there is need for deportation on some other basis.

AGED COUPLE RESCUED

PADUCAH, Ky., March 31.—After 36 hours' imprisonment under timbers of their storm-wrecked home, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boswell, both over 70 years old, were rescued and removed to a hospital yesterday by William Fischer, a relative, who called at their home to investigate why they did not answer the telephone.

The house, a two-story brick, collapsed in the windstorm Friday night which caused $50,000 damage in McCracken County. Mrs. Boswell suffered pneumonia from exposure and a cut on the head. Boswell was exhausted from trying to release himself and his wife.

By Dent McSkimming.

For the first time in five years, a St. Louis soccer cup team lost on a local field to a visiting team at High School Field yesterday. The Fall River eleven of Fall River, Mass., defeated the Vespers of this city, 4 goals to 2 and carried off the National Challenge Cup, emblematic of the soccer championship of the United States.

A capacity crowd of 13,686 fans paid $14,605.80 to witness the final. It was the largest "gate" in the history of American soccer, although the Fall River-Coats game at Tiverton, R. I., three months ago drew 14,378 persons at a smaller admission charge.

Fall River displayed one of the finest teams that has ever appeared here. Unlike many high-class Eastern clubs, Fall River put a great deal of speed into its passing game and the forwards shot with deadly accuracy. It is true that the visitors obtained innumerable scoring chances, while the Vespers made good on a smaller number of opening. The St. Louis team did well to score two goals in the face of the vastly superior game of the visitors.

Late in the second half, when the score was 3 to 2 against them, the Vespers made a furious assault upon the west goal, kicking against the wind, and came within the narrowest margin of tying the count. Goaltender Kerr picked a hot shot off the goal upright when the attack was at its height.

Fall River Team Play Successful.

The St. Louisans were at a loss for a method of breaking up the combination play of the visitors. The local lads strove gamely to win by sheer speed and pluck; but the methodical checker-like moving and shifting of the opponents who were not entirely devoid of speed, left the local players quite helpless.

Fall River, on the other hand, was capable of a remarkably strong defense. The Vespers did not take full advantage of the wind, in the first half, but late in the second period they started such a concerted drive that nothing but a wonderful defense could prevent a score. It was at this time, with the score 3—2, that Fall River packed nine men on the defense, leaving only Center Forward Brittan and Outside Right Campbell up the field.

In turning its efforts to a last stand, the Vespers disregarded their own defense and when Fullback Tate's goal kick carried beyond the center line and over Scott's head, Brittan had a clear field ahead of him and he raced down the field and scored on an open shot.

Visitors' Fullbacks Ordinary.

In only one respect was Fall River less impressive than other great Eastern teams that have shown here. Their fullbacks were not as brilliant. It was only the rugged work of the halfback line that saved the situation many times for the visitors. But it was a bad day for fullbacks on both sides, possibly due to the strong, shifting wind.

There was not even the suspicion of a good passing game in the Vesper attack. Perhaps this is another evidence of the strong defense of the Fall Rivers, but the St. Louis forwards left the fans wondering when they would get started.

Attendance at Cup Game Set New Mark For U. S. F. A. Final

The attendance at yesterday's U. S. F. A. cup final—13,686 paid—established a new record for the soccer final. However, it was not a record crowd, as Fall River recently had an attendance of better than 14,000. However, the receipts, $14,605.80, were the largest ever taken in at a soccer match in this country.

The share for the Vespers, Fall River and U. S. F. A., totaled $2689.47. Expenses ran close to $6500.

The St. Louis Soccer and Exhibition Co. lost money on the venture. The company's 20 per cent for handling the game was less than $2500, while improvements on the park alone cost $2300. In addition, there was the cost of getting the field into shape, ticket sellers and takers, watchmen and other expenses incidental to the handling of the battle.

Harris and McCarthy Best for Vespers; Harold Brittan Effective, Not Brilliant

Tom Harris and Joe McCarthy stood out as the most effective of the St. Louis forwards. Center Corrigan was almost always at a loss. Not once in the whole game did he show a flash of the form which he has displayed upon other occasions.

Burke worked hard at center halfback but he was often in quandary because his mates did not know how to cover their particular man. Only on the throw-in did the St. Louis players cover up. In midfield they did not know how to mark their man.

Harold Brittan, of whom St. Louisans had heard a great deal, was effective but not brilliant. Only occasionally did he soar to great heights. He contented himself with directing the team's attack rather than with monopolizing the spot lights. Thus, he frequently passed to the wings immediately upon being pressed. He dribbled through the entire Vesper team on one or two occasions, to be stopped when within scoring distance.

The Vespers won the toss and chose to kick with the wind in the first half. In spite of the breeze against them, Fall River was the first to attack. They obtained several shots before Morley scored with his head from a long pass from McPherson, right halfback.

The Vespers attacked in spurts, always threatening. Wimer got rid of several good crosses and McCarthy tried a shot which was tipped over for a corner kick. After about 35 minutes of play St. Louis scored on a penalty kick after Fullback Kemp had halted one of Wimer's passes with his hand. Tom Harris registered the goal. The half ended with the ball in midfield and the score 1-1.

Confident of victory with the wind in their favor, the visitors went immediately to the attack in the second half. After six minutes Morley again scored. Campbell had tried a hard shot and La Barge tipped the ball over the bar for a corner kick. McKenna took the kick and Morley drove the ball through La Barge's legs on a short shot.

Vespers Again Tie Score.

The Vespers kept hope alive in the hearts of the fans by opening a whirlwind drive on the west goal and tieing the score in one minute. Harris broke through on the right wing and crossed to Corrigan, who kept the ball going to Becker and then to McCarthy, who scored.

From that point on the game grew exceedingly fast and as rough as the rules would permit. Joe McCarthy and Fullback Tate put up their fists in fighting pose but Referee McCabe quelled the disturbance. Morley came out of a scrimmage with a bad ankle. The Vespers were more than holding their own and Gockel's long cross to the goal mouth found Becker and McCarthy on the job. One of them headed the ball against the goal upright. They returned again to the attack and the ball was driven out for a goal kick. With the whole Vesper team in Fall River territory, Fullback Tate drove the ball past center and Brittan scored an easy goal, without interference.

NO DECISION REACHED IN MATTER OF PICKING OLYMPIC SOCCER TEAM

The American Olympic Soccer Committee, members of which are officials of the United States Football Association, met last night at the Coronado Hotel to discuss the method of selection of the team that will represent this country at Paris. No definite decision was made, it was announced after a long session.

The subject will be taken up again at a meeting of the National Commission of the U. S. F. A. at New York, April 6. A mail vote of state associations affiliated with the U. S. F. A. is said to have been favorable to a "picked" team because of the fact that the teams still remaining in the Amateur Cup competition are composed of foreigners who are not naturalized Americans and are therefore not eligible to compete for America.

TWO WEEKS TOUR OF EAST PLANNED FOR ST. LOUIS ALL-STARS

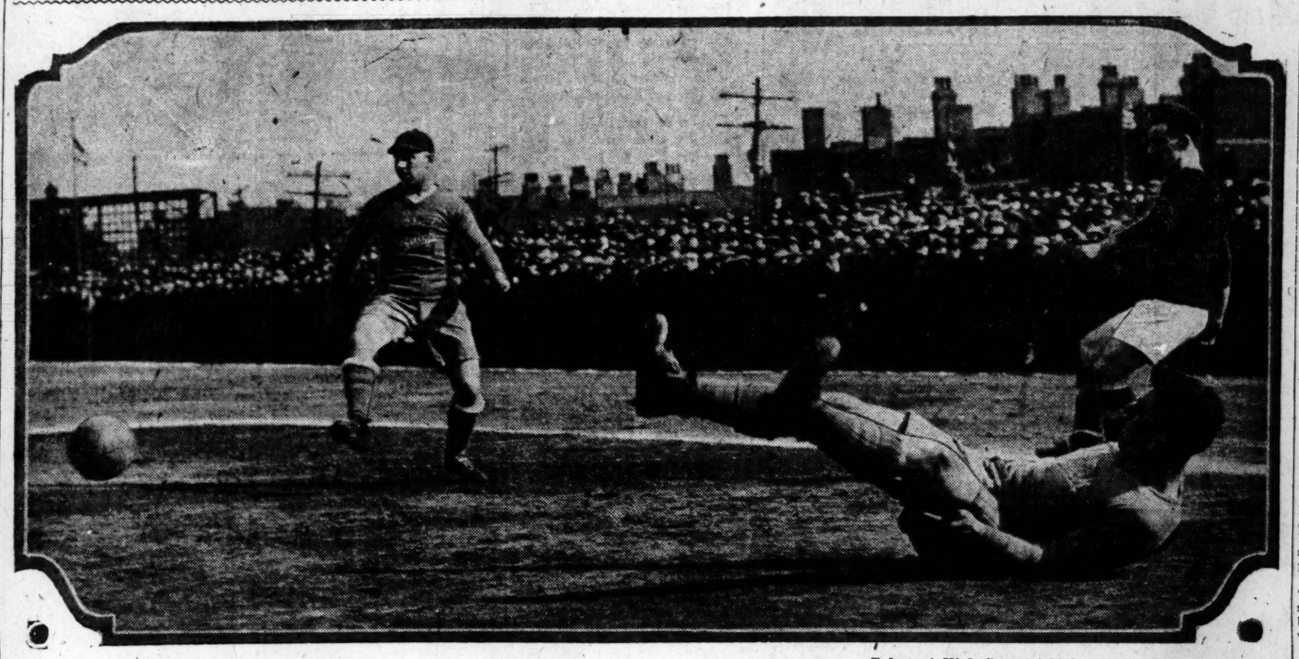

A two weeks' tour of the East by an all-star St. Louis soccer team is planned and some definite announcement will without a doubt be made during Bethlehem's visit here.

A letter has been written to Walter Kelly, secretary of the Bethlehem club, asking him to arrange games with American League teams as follows: Coats at Pawtucket, April 12; Fall River, April 13; Bethlehem, April 16; Philadelphia, April 19, and New York, April 20.

Veteran Enters Tourney.

One of the Many Spills that Featured the Fall River-Vesper Game

Left to right: Gockel (Vespers), McKenna (Fall River); on the ground Scott (Vespers). In the first half no less than five injuries were recorded, the most serious resulting in Wimer being carried off the field. Twice time was taken out for St. Louis players. Two Fall River men were badly shaken up, but the play continued.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Spaulding Institute, Peoria, Ill., became national Catholic interscholastic basketball champions last night by defeating Marquette High, Milwaukee, 21 to 7, in the final game of the tournament, held at Loyola University.

Jones Joins Dodgers.

Johnny Jones, $25,000 Pacific Coast Leaguer, joined Brooklyn yesterday and will be worked at shortstop in the regular infield until Manager Robinson gauges his ability. Johnston will be shifted to second base, with High remaining at third and Klugman retiring to utility. Bernie Neis, outfielder asking additional salary, is still with the club but is not working out, and threatens to join the Beloit outlaw club.

Hagen Leads North-South Event

Professoinal Has Score of 68 for First 18 Holes at Pinehurst.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 31.—Walter Hagen, veteran professional, led the early field in the annual North and South Open Golf Tournament today when he turned in a card of 68 for the first 18 holes. Hagen was closely followed by Jim Barnes, MacDonald Smith and Emmet French, each with 70.

One hundred and two players, including national and international golf professionals, are playing.

Hagen, who has been installed by the gallery as one of the favorites, was out in 34 and back in the same figure. Barnes took two 35s to make his 70, as did Emmett French, while MacDonald Smith, with a 32 for the first nine, came in with 38.

New Soccer Champions Used Mound City Tactics to Win

By Herman Wecke.

"We beat them at their own game." That was the comment of Manager and Captain Harold Brittan of the Fall River eleven after its 4 goals to 2 victory over the Vespers in the United States Football Association final at High School Field yesterday afternoon, before the largest crowd—13,686 paid—that has ever witnessed a battle for the American Soccer championship.

And there was much truth in Brittan's assertion. The championship cup remains in the East for another year, but the much mooted question regarding the superiority of the American style of play as employed by St. Louis and the foreign style as employed by a majority of the teams that come here is still unsettled.

At first thought this latter would seem entirely out of line, considering that the Fall River players are all foreign-born and that each and every one gained his soccer knowledge "across the pond." Nevertheless it is true. Fall River yesterday played a typical St. Louis game—long passes and shots at goal from far out. And they were successful. Everytime a long pass was attempted, it went directly to the proper man. There was perfect team-play. The Vespers on the other hand, for some unknown reason, tried the Eastern short pass game, but except on rare occasions made a mess of it. There was little co-ordination on the local front line in complete contrast to that of the visitors.

St. Louis Speedsters Outspeeded.

Commenting further on the game, Brittan said. "We heard a lot about the speed of the St. Louis players before we came West and consequently schooled ourselves to combat this style of play. It was a good, clean game, hard-fought and I think that the crowd was well satisfied."

One of the outstanding features of the Fall River play was the unselfishness of the players. There was little individual work. Each man passed the ball to an uncovered mate.

It brought results. Brittan was closely watched by the Vespers. If anything he was covered too closely. As a result other players on the team were left uncovered. This was especially true of Outside Right Campbell, who had a clear field on practically every occasion he was handed the sphere.

Speaking about this phase of the game, Brittan asserted: "The secret of success of soccer is playing the ball to a man who is uncovered. That is just what we attempted to do."

Fall River's Share Attached.

Sam Marks, owner of the Fall River team, was elated over his eleven's conquest. But still there was a bit of the bitter for Marks in the victory. This was in an attachment of the Fall River share of the gate receipts, brought by Harry Ratican. As a result, $1500 of Fall River's net profit of $2689.47 is now held by Thomas Cahill, secretary of the U. S. F. A., until the suit is settled in court. Ratican claims the money as back salary and for services rendered in getting players for Fall River.

"Go To It," Referee Tells Belligerents.

Edward McCabe of Philadelphia, who refereed the game in fine style, was high in his praises for both aggregations. "It was a hard clean game and the better team was the winner. I had no trouble with the players. Three times they squared off as if to battle, but I did not caution them to quit. I told them to go to it and then I would have my say, which meant a trip to the club house. It was effective."

"Never since I left Scotland have I seen a field in such perfect condition as the one upon which the final was played. It was a revelation to me."

Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the U. S. F. A., was between two fires. He is a former St. Louisan and St. Louis ranks first with him. Then Fall River is a member of the American Soccer League' Cahill's Eastern pet. Cahill's first love lost, but his second won, so all in all it was a successful day for the national secretary.

Victors Shoot From Long Range.

Statistics on the game bring out some interesting facts. Chief among these is the great difference in the number of shots at goal by the rival elevens. In the past, St. Louis teams have always been the leaders in this respect. Yesterday, however, the two goals attempted was better than 2 to 1 in favor of Fall River. The visitors took many shots from far out, especially in the closing period. The Easterners took 32 shots at goal, while the total for the Vespers was but 13. In goal kicks, the Vespers had 23 and Fall River had but eight.

Run Star Wins in Coffroth Handicap

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 31.—Run Star, California's 5-year-old chestnut horse, owned by A. B. Spreckles, yesterday won the Coffroth handicap, the feature of the season's racing at the Tia Juana track. Osprey, from the Leslie stable, was second, and Cherry Tree, owned by Baron Long of San Diego was third.

Run Star's victory brought his owner, $43,650. Jockey Barnes, who piloted the big runner to victory, received a silk purse containing $1500 from the Jockey Club.

Run Star took the lead at once and held it throughout the mile and a quarter. Run Star, carrying 123 pounds, ran the mile and a quarter in 2:05 2-5, the time being within a fifth of a second of the track record.

The crowd, estimated at more than 20,000, was the largest in the history of the track, it was announced.

The $2 mutuels paid: Run Star, $12.60, or $5.20 to $1 to win; $6 to place and $5.20 to show. Osprey paid $16 to place and $9 to show, while Cherry Tree's show price was $5.40.

Exterminator. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's 9-year-old gelding, one of the favorites in the betting, finished fourth. Exterminator's share of the purse yesterday was $1250, making hi sttoal winnings, $250,296 and now ranks second to Zev.

The defeat of Exterminator was a blow to the crowd which had backed the nine-year-old veteran down to 16 to 10 in the mutuels. The weight seemed to hold back the old fellow from making his run, although it is more probable that the distance was too short.

Exterminator broke in front but was immediately outpaced and fell back to sixth place. He soon moved up to fifth position, where he raced until the stretch. Here Sunyland spurt died and the old fellow moved up to fourth position. With the first three horses only noses apart, Exterminator was only a length and one-half behind and coming steadily.

M'CABE TO REFEREE BETHLEHEM'S GAMES WITH LOCAL STARS

Edward McCabe, who handled the cup final in great style yesterday, will referee the two game exhibition series between the St. Louis All-Stars and the Bethlehem team to be played at High School Field next Saturday and Sunday. This was the announcement made last night by officials of the St. Louis League.

The teams to oppose the Bethlehem eleven will be selected at a meeting of the league officials within the next few days.

Browns Show Return to 1922 Form in Crushing Mobile; Kolp And Vangilder at Their Best

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

MOBILE, Ala., March 31.—George Sisler and his Browns played like world's champions yesterday. They collected 15 hits, scored 10 runs, played errorless baseball in the field and ran bases shrewdly and yet daringly. Vangilder and Kolp pitched shutout baseball, Vangilder allowing two hits in four innings and Kolp two hits in five innings.

It was the best exhibition a St. Louis team has given in the South in at least three years and gives weight to the Brownies' belief that they have a splendid chance in the coming championship race.

There was glory for everybody. George Sisler, of course, was the observed of all observers and he came through in brilliant style. He batted .750, getting three singles in four times at bat, scored a run, stole a base and handled grounders, difficult throws and pop flies without difficulty or the semolance of an error.

Daniel Boone, a lanky right-hander who was with Cleveland last year and who came to Mobile via Boston, started for Mobile and that's about all he did. After the Browns had slammed him for six hits in the first inning he was taken out. Just to show that they could hit anybody, the Browns gathered nine more safeties off Adkins and Wiltse, two pretty fair southpaws with good curves.

Browns Annihilate Pitchers.

That first inning was reminiscent of the Brownies' great days of 1922. Tobin walked and went to third on Gerber's single to center. Sisler singled past short, scoring Tobin. Joe Evans singled to center, scoring Gerber. McManus singled to left, scoring Sisler and Evans. Jacobson grounded out, but Hank Severeid and Gene Robertson continued the bombardment with singles. Vangilder walked and when Tobin drew his second walk of the inning, Adkins relieved Boone. Gerber was hit by a pitched ball and Sisler singled to left for his second safety of the inning. Tobin tried to score on the hit and was caught at the plate. Evans forced Sisler at second, ending the inning.

The best bit of base running of the day was done by Joe Evans in the sixth inning. Joe was on second with one out when McManus hit a slow roller in front of the plate. The catcher threw out McManus, but while he was doing that Evans was tearing around the bases. He rounded third and, seeing that the catcher was drawn out of position fielding McManus' grounder, Joe kept on at full speed and slid into the plate before the catcher could scramble back to the return throw.

Plays like that win ball games and Evans has demonstrated again that Sisler made a wise move when he signed the former Cleveland and Washington player.

Only 13 men faced Vangilder in the four innings he worked. In the first frame Mulvey, a St. Louis boy, singled to left with two down, but he tried to go to second on the hit and was retired by Evans' fine throw to McManus. Vanglider turned back the Bears in order in the second and third, striking out the last batter in each frame. In the fourth Marriott opened with a single, but he advanced no farther, two force plays and an outfield fly following.

Kolp in Championship Form.

Kolp's pitching was so good that it was spectacular. He struck out six men in the five innings and five of them were called out on a third strike. His curve was breaking more sharply than ever. He said after the game that he never knew his curve to function so well as this season. He always had plenty of stuff, but his curves were of the sandlot or roundhouse variety. This year his slants are abrupt, which slants must be if they are to deceive batters consistently.

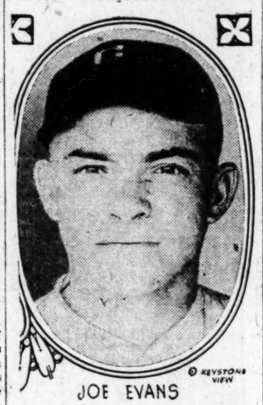

Kolp fielded his position excellently, turning two hard smashes into putouts by knocking them down and pouncing on the ball. Kolp and Vanglider each covered first on a grounder to Sisler and the play went through neatly each time. Brownie pitchers say Sisler can hand the ball to the pitcher covering first with an accuracy and speed all his own, and plays of that type have been going through with unusual precision with Sisler on the job.

Robertson and Rice Play Third.

Gene Robertson played third base for seven innings and Harry Rice for two, but neither had a fielding chance. Robertson had a single drew two walks and flied to right, while Rice on his only trip to the plate popped to the catcher.

The Browns worked out this morning at the Mobile park, where the world's champion Yankees will meet the Rochester club of the International League in an exhibition game this afternoon. Tomorrow the Browns play Mobile in the eighth and final game of their series and then the squad bids goodbye to their training camp, starting a tour in New Orleans.

Discarded by Two Teams, He Stars With the Browns

JOE EVANS

Reports from Mobile indicate that this former Washington U. football star is the most alert baserunner in the Brownie training camp. His fielding and hitting help to make him the best reserve outfielder the Browns have had in many years.

DATES SELECTED FOR AMERICAN ZONE PLAY IN DAVIS CUP SERIES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The final round among teams in the American zone of the Davis Cup tennis play will be contested Aug. 14, 15 and 16 and the survivor will meet the winner of the European zone in this country Sept. 4, 5 and 6, under tentative plans announced yesterday by the committee in charge of the international team tennis championships.

The matches between Cuba and Canada and Australia and China in the American zone, must be completed not later than Aug. 2. Japan will meet the winner of the first match not later than Aug. 9, when Mexico will play the survivor of the China-Australia meeting.

By the Associated Press.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Hard on the Eyes.

From accounts of the ring habits of this pair it would appear that a pillow fight in a girls' dormitory would be by comparison a thrilling spectacle.

Both gentlemen have ideas of defense built on the theory that if you hold the other man's glove he can't hit you with it. Such uncertain and obsolete methods as blocking, guarding, ducking, slipping, side-stepping, etc., would appear to be missing from the bright lexicon of these clinging ivies.

The $25 ringside victim will therefore in all probability have to sit through 12 rounds of hugging and cuffing such as in the past have driven local patrons of stalling matches to rise in their $4.40 places and accurately describe the principals to their very faces.

These gallipago ring champions who pull their necks back into their "shells," and refuse to come out from under the testudo may, like Mike McTigue, creep into a championship; but for real interest and action any half-baked amateur has them lost.

The only thing about a fighter that the public pays to see is his fighting. The day of the camouflage and the strategic retreat went down with Ludendorff.

Our Soccer Lession.

THE lesson administered by the Fall River soccer team to the Vespers should not be lost on the promoters of soccer here. It is that the city is slipping and the standard of play going down, instead of up. The Vespers fought a plucky, uphill game and were not discredited; but they lacked the class of better elevens that have represented this city.

St. Louis soccer is in need of coaching in fundamentals, and until our Municipal and independent players can be taught them, the local professional league will have no other recourse than to build up with foreign talent. The importation of some first division players, who might serve also as coaches, might react favorably on the entire pastime in this city.

Where We Stand.

AFTER the display of the Fall River team, Secretary Tom Cahill and other intense nationalists will not be so eager to send an eleven of all-American-born players against an all-British Isles team. The manner in which the Fall Rivers adapted themselves to St. Louis tactics and beat our boys at their own game is proof conclusive that FINISH counts in this great game, as well as speed and hustle.

Skill and combination, plus speed and alertness, can defeat mere speed doing anything. That's another lesson of yesterday's contest.

• • •

One of the Fall River players, rated as the best man on the eleven and of good standing in the old country not so long since, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that it was very doubtful if the Fall River eleven could win games in the second division of British soccer circles. And he was not talking for effect, either.

Against first division teams the Rivers would have no chance whatever to win, he said.

What chance, then would an American-born team have against an all-British eleven, when the comparatively weak Fall Rivers outplayed the Vespers and did it unquestionably?

• • •

That 3-Game Final.

SOME day the national soccer final will be a three-game series. In fact, a majority of contending teams appear to favor the plan for adoption at the next meeting of the U. S. F. A.

It was just as well for the Vespers, perhaps, that it was not in vogue this year. There seems little reason to believe they could have hoped for a better break in another game.

However, it is barely possible that they were not quite up to their best mark, yesterday, and a little improvement and some luck might have given them a look-in.

The virtue of the three-game series is that it prevents a championship from passing through accidents that, occurring in a single game, might throw the verdict to the inferior eleven.

• • •

The Day of the "Pro" Leagues.

A RE-ARRANGEMENT of soccer conditions, as far as the National championship is concerned, is certain for next year. The 12 teams of the American Soccer League and the four teams of the St. Louis Soccer League, which between them seem to include all the best units in the country, will not consent to have their regular league schedules split wide open by cup ties with teams that have absolutely no standing.

It seems inevitable that the Eastern and Western professional organizations will be to soccer what the National and American Leagues are to organized baseball—the dictators.

Black Gold Now A 15-to-1 Chance

Future Book Derby Price on Mrs. Hoots' Eligible Gradually Shrinking.

Revised future book odds on the Kentucky Derby, as promulgated by Tom Kearney, the local turf authority, show that the only important change to date has been the shortening of the price against Black Gold, winner of the Louisiana Derby, owned by an Indian woman, Mrs. R. H. Hoots.

Black Gold's price opened at 30 to 1 and has fallen back to 15 to 1, probably due to the shipping of the Black Toney colt to Churchill Downs, and the strong probability that he will go to the post May 17.

Stock Expects to Be Traded; Will Start Training Tuesday

MILTON STOCK, Cardinal holdout, announced yesterday that he would start working out Tuesday with the Mobile club. He said he expected the Cardinals to trade him soon and wanted to get his batting eye into condition. Otherwise, he said, he was ready to start.

"I will not report to the Cardinals for the salary stated in the contract offered me," Stock said. "If they want me to play for them they will have to meet my terms. I have played for them for five years and refuse to take a cut in salary. I have asked to be traded, and the management, answering me by letter, has stated that efforts will be made to arrange a deal sending me somewhere else."

NEW YORK, March 31.—Peter Swan, 18-year-old boxer, who suffered concussion of the brain and a possible fracture of the skull when he was knocked out Saturday night in a boxing bout with Harry Mills, last night was said to be in a serious condition at the hospital.

Swan was knocked out in the fourth round after having fought a losing battle from the beginning of the bout. He remained unconscious for half an hour.

TWO MILLION GOLF SWINGS

Practice strokes, 250 an hour, two hours daily, 210 days a year for fifteen years equals 1,575,000.

Playing strokes, 100 to each 18 holes (including practice swings), 240 rounds a year for 15 years equals 360,000.

That's how many times Chick Evans has swung a club during fifteen years of golfing, during which time he has won the National Open title once, the National Amateur title twice and the Western Amateur title eight times.

The figures were compiled on a basis of only five miles for eighteen holes and an average of twenty rounds a month for seven months out of the year. They came to 10,500 miles for the fifteen years!

RAY'S SIXTH SENSE

Joie Can Time His Own Pace.

One reason for Joie Ray's success on the cinder path seems to be his queer ability to judge almost to a fraction of a second just what speed he is making, whatever the distance may be.

While he was in Columbus last year on an exhibition run, he told the judges before starting that "he would run them a mile in 4:30" that evening.

FRENCH RUGBY

Slugging Due to Over Enthusiasm.

The Rugby Federation in France has been facing a quandry lately owing to the undue roughness which is allowable under present rules.

After the Toulouse-Biarritz match last year, twelve of the Toulouse players out of the fifteen were on the casualty list. One sporting paper described the game as a "splendid example of street fighting."

The rough work, it seems, is not due altogether to the French rules but rather to the keen rivalry between rugby teams in different parts of France. The Frenchman seems to let his enthusiasm get the better of him.

Makes a "One" to Own Sweater Pocket.

The record for freak drives goes to Harry Moore of the Willowick Golf Club of Cleveland.

One day last winter while Moore, who is a left handed golfer, was playing out of a sandtrap at Willowick, he drove the ball into a nearby bunker. As it struck the bunker it took a reverse English and plumped into the right hand pocket of Moore's sweater.

WITH so many brands on the market El Producto could never have become America's fastest selling cigar by chance. There must be something which El Producto alone can give the smoker.

And there is. It is a character which only El Producto owns. A mild, distinctive character you can obtain in no other cigar at any price. But a character which you can obtain in El Producto at every price from 10c to 30c. In any shade and shape and size that suits your fancy.

Better Tone as Shorts Cover in Stocks — Bonds Are Firm but Quiet — Call Money Rate Up.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"A distinctly better tone appeared in the markets today as the shorts apparently impressed by the strength of the technical position which they had created, attempted to cover. After a little uncertainty at the start, stocks rallied well, particularly those issues which were under the greatest pressure last week. An attempt to stem the rise, which was made in the early afternoon, met with little success and the close revealed numerous gains of one and two points. Total sales amounted to about 700,000 shares. Bonds also were firm, but quiet, and the rate on call money, which opened at 5 per cent, was raised to 5½ per cent just before the start of the last hour.

Exchange Market Strong.

"Strength was general throughout the foreign exchange market. Business was unusually small; but there was a fair demand while supplies were distinctly scanty. With tomorrow the day on which franc settlements must be made at Paris, that currency ran up seven points to a new high for the recovery at 5.55 cents. This advance carried the price a few points beyond the London quotation; adjustment to the latter resulted in a later quotation of 5.52. Sterling meanwhile gained ⅛ of a cent at $4.29 with London more hopeful over the continental outlook. Similar gains prevailed among the other Europeans. The show of strength extended far enough to embrace the Canadian dollar and the Japanese yen. Altogether, the exchange market displayed a greater degree of uniformity than in some time.

ST. LOUIS TRANSIT COMPANY

5% Twenty-Year Improvement Bonds

To the Holders of Certificates of Deposit for Above Bonds Deposited Under Agreement Dated July 10, 1917:

Recent developments indicate that a reorganization of the United Railways Company of St. Louis is not far distant and that adequate recognition of the Transit Bonds will be insured if all holders of such bonds are represented by one committee. To this end your Committee considers it advisable to combine with the Committee constituted under agreement dated April 22, 1919, and representing a large number of bonds. It is intended that the members of your Committee will become members of that Committee, which will then consist of Edwin M. Bulkley, chairman; William P. Gest, vice chairman; Leroy W. Baldwin, Oscar Fenley, F. J. Lisman, Charles S. Ludlam, Harrison Nesbit, D. Sommers and George W. Wilson, and that thereafter the Combined Committees will proceed under the terms of the agreement of that committee, dated April 22, 1919.

Accordingly, your Committee considering it expedient to terminate the agreement of July 10, 1917, by which it was constituted, has adopted resolutions terminating said agreement, pursuant to Article "Tenth" thereof. Your Committee recommends that you forthwith deposit your bonds with the Combined Committee under the Deposit Agreement dated April 22, 1919. It is also contemplated that the Combined Committee will be able to arrange to advance to such Depositors as so desire, the interest due April 1, should the same be defaulted, as now seems certain.

The Combined Committee expects to assume the expenses and obligations to date of your Committee. If you deposit with the Combined Committee, no payment on account of expenses will be required at this time. If, however, you do not desire to deposit your bonds with the Combined Committee you may now withdraw them upon paying your pro rata share of your Committee's expenses to date, amounting to Ten Dollars ($10) for each $1000 bond. The accounts of the Committee will be filed with the Depositaries pursuant to said Article "Tenth." The Committee advises immediate action by depositors.

Any holder of a certificate of deposit who has not received notice by mail may obtain form for redepositing his bonds or may withdraw his bonds from your Committee, as he prefers, upon communicating with the Secretary or upon application to either of the Depositaries.

IRREGULAR PRICE TREND ON THE CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 31.—Wheat had a better tone at the start today but there was important selling on the upturn that caused prices to ease. Commission houses bought at the opening and this was said to be partly for foreign account and partly for the northwest. After a fractional upturn there was heavy selling of May and July and this was credited to a local long by some and to eastern interests by others. Nat C. Murray's estimated a crop of 578,000,000 bushels of winter wheat based on present condition. Murray estimated the abandoned area at six per cent compared with 10 per cent last year. A harvest acreage of 37,780,000 acres is indicated against 39,522,000 last year. Export trade was quiet but a seaboard message told of 6,000,000 bushels of Manitoba wheat being sold to Italy the last 10 days. Milling demand for wheat was quiet. Primary receipts were small. Visible supply decreased 1,075,000 bushels last week.

Short coverings and improved commission house buying later caused a sharp upward turn in wheat. Last prices were one to 1⅛c higher. May $1.02⅛ to ⅝; July $1.03⅝@¾; September $1.04⅛@⅝.

Sentiment was mixed in the corn pit. Replacing of short lines covered Saturday caused a fair reduction in prices at the start. On the dip there was buying credited to one of the leading shorts and some local buying. The market rallied later on buying induced by the decrease of 902,000 bushels in the visible supply and the advance of ⅛@1c in cash corn. Some shippers reported a better eastern demand but the majority would see no improvement. Receipts were light.

Corn closed ⅛c to 1c lower; May 77@77⅛c; July 78@78⅛c; September 78@[illegible]

Oats were strong. Commission houses were good buyers and shorts covered. Visible supply decreased 616,000 bushels. Oats closed ⅝@⅛c higher; May 45⅜c; July 44⅛@⅛c September 40⅞c.

Local cash sales were 20,000 bushels wheat; 10,000 bushels corn and 71,000 bushels oats.

In provisions trade consisted largely of changing over from May to July contracts by longs. Price changes were small.

Rye, no sales. Barley, 70@83c. Timothy seed, $5@8. Cloverseed, $16.50@[illegible]. Lard, $10.70. Ribs, $9.62. Bellies, $10.25.

SPURT IN MAY COTTON ON COVERING BY SHORTS

NEW YORK, March 31.—The cotton market opened firm today, with first prices 7 to 22 points higher on improved Liverpool cables and reports of better business in cotton goods at Manchester. Trade buying and covering by near month shorts sent the price of May up to 27.95c, or 39 points net higher. This had a sympathetic influence on later deliveries and October advanced to 24.45c, or 35 points net higher, but the weather map made a favorable showing and the advance met considerable Southern selling as well as realizing, which caused reactions of 20 to 25 points in early trading. Private cables reported a quiet market in Liverpool, with the tone steady on a good spot demand.

The market quieted down late in the morning. There was some selling of May against purchases of July by spot houses at the wider differences and the better weather outlook caused a little local or commission house selling of new crop deliveries. With New Orleans also selling here prices eased off to 27.68c for May and 24.10c for October, nearly back to Saturday's closing figures on the more active positions.

The demand from May shorts became more urgent in the early afternoon, sending the price up to 28.50c, or 94 points net higher. Later months were influenced by the May advance, and October sold to 24.65c, or 55 points above the close of last week. Prices were within a few points of these figures, with the market firm, around 2 o'clock.

HOG RUN MODERATE BUT EARLY RISE NOT HELD

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., March 31.—Receipts today estimated: Cattle and calves, 4000; hogs, 18,0000; sheep 500; horses and mules, 300.

CATTLE—A moderate run of cattle here today encountered an active market and values ruled strong to 25c higher in virtually all classes. Beef steers sold largely from $7.40 per cwt, paid for a plain kind to $11, the top, this for a consignment of long yearlings. Light steers and heifers sold up to $9.25 and butcher cows were most numerous at $4.50 to $6.25, followed by cutter cows at $3.00 to $4.00 and canners at $2.25 to $3.00. Bulls did not show as much strength as other cattle. Bolognas were noted largely at $4.25 to $5.10.

VEAL CALVES—Values in this department averaged about 50c lower, a few head topping at $10.50 and the bulk selling around $10. Quality was not particularly good.

Quotations—Beef steers, practical range, $6.00 to $12.25; light yearlings, range, $3.50 to $12.25; butcher cows, range, $4.00 to $7.50; cutter cows, range, $3.00 to $4.00; canner cows, range, $2.25 to $3.00; bologna bulls, range, $4.25 to $5.25; stocker and feeder steers, range, $4.00 to $8.25.

HOGS—Under moderate receipts of 18,000 head the hog market today advanced 10c to 15c. Trading ruled fairly active at the advance, order buyers and city butchers taking the swine from 190 to 250 pounds in a spread of $7.75 to $7.80 largely, lighter grades from 160 to 180 pounds average clearing at $7.70 to $7.85, the latter figure representing the top. There was a generous quota of lights and pigs included in the offerings today, the lighter grades finding slow outlet early. Offerings from 130 to 150 pounds weight sold form $7.00 to $7.60 on the opening rounds, medium weights from 110 to 130 pounds at $6.50 to $7.00 and light pigs and pee wees from 110 pounds and down at $5.75 to $6.50. Sows were about steady at $6.60, stags selling from $4.50 to $5.25 mostly, according to weight and quality.

The late hog market was 5c to 10c lower, butcher hogs being $7.65 to $7.70. Others were not changed.

SHEEP—Trading quiet on the early rounds under light receipts. A few lambs sold up to $16.00 with a consignment of mutton ewes at $11.25 looking about steady.

Good to choice lambs quotable at $16 to $16.50, medium to good kinds at $15.50 to $16.00 and plain to medium at $14.75 to $15.50. Culls quotable at $11 to $14. Good to choice mutton ewes were quotable at $10 to $11.50, medium to good at $9.00 to $10.00 and plain to medium at $7.00 to $9.00. Choppers and bucks at $5.00 to $8.00 and canners at $2.50 to $4.00 largely.

HORSES AND MULES—Receipts were again of modest volume here at the week's opening, estimate placing the day's arrivals at 300 head, the bulk of which were on commission. Demand was about equal to the supply, and early selling reflected no particular change in the trade from last week.

The Tail Wags the Dog

THE MOTORIST buys gasoline at frequent intervals and pays cash for it, because the unit of purchase is small.

For this reason the price of gasoline is ever present in his mind.

But, in fairness, the price of gasoline should be considered in relation to other fixed charges incident to the operation of his automobile.

Petroleum Age, in its issue of February 1, 1924, states that "reliable figures obtained in the study of the operation cost of automobiles in oil field service between July, 1922, and July, 1923, shows that the average cost per mile for cars ranging in price from $400.00 to $1,400.00 each was 10c. During that period approximately 22c per gallon was paid for gasoline."

Computing the average mileage at 15 miles per gallon it is shown that out of a mileage cost of 10c gasoline represented less than 1½c. In other words the 1½c wags the 8½c, and the 1½c covers the hazard of drilling and bringing the crude oil above ground—its transportation to the refinery—storage—refining—maintenance of the refineries—transporting of gasoline—bulk storage depots—delivery system, including tank wagons and service stations—cost of labor—and a fair and reasonable profit.

If the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and others engaged in the petroleum industry had not expended millions in experiment and research, which has resulted in taking from crude petroleum scores of other products, the present low price of gasoline could not be maintained.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana), because of its advanced work in refining petroleum, has been able to recover these other products without in any way affecting the quality of the gasoline.

In this way the operations of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) accrue to the advantage of the consumer in keeping the price of gasoline down to a point where the man of modest means can enjoy the pleasures of motoring without bearing a burdensome charge for fuel to propel his car.

STRESEMANN WINS BY SWITCH TO REACTION

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, March 31.—Creation of a democratic monarch and restoration of the black, red and white flag of kaiserism was incorporated in the official platform of the People's party at their Hanover convention last night. The dominant group in the Reich—big business—has practically allied itself with the reactionary German Nationalist party, whose call for "one people, one land, one Kaiser," is bearing rich fruit.

Foreign Minister Stresemann won leadership of the party which had threatened to disown him by falling into goose-step. The Foreign Minister of the republic disowned the Weimar Constitution which fashioned it. Stresemann's greatest achievement, according to his fellow party members, was in bringing the Crown Prince back.

The Reich is left breathless with amazement by the announcement of Foreign Minister Stresemann, made in his Hanover address, that he is faithful to the "black, white and red"—the flag of old imperial Germany. He welcomed the entry into the Government of the German National party, whose program calls for "one people, one land, one Kaiser." But the climax of his proclamation was his expressed lack of sympathy with the Weimar Constitution—in other words, with the formation of the German republic. No dyed-in-the-wool monarchist has made a more reactionary speech than that of the present Foreign Minister of the Reich.

It is explained simply by internal politics. The reactionary element of the People's party meant to dislodge him. The split threatened the party. For prestige and for power Stresemann has renounced his principles and won an overwhelming victory.

$15,000 Taken in Bank Holdup.

DETROIT, Mich., March 31.—Four armed men who held up the West Fort street branch of the Commonwealth Federal Savings Bank at noon today, held two employes and a customer at bay while they scooped up all the money in sight and escaped in an automobile. Vital Statistics--Questions Answered

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

C. ANXIOUS. — Write to the Sporting News, Tenth and Olive, for the information regarding the ball player.

T. E. Mc.—Write to the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club, Maryland Hotel, Ninth and Pine streets, regarding the German police dog.

A. W. J.—Pearls are never found in the white perch fish; they are generally found in oysters, clams, mussels and the like.

A READER.—Apply to the Central Trades and Labor Union for the information. The Farmer-Worker Party has not been active since the last campaign.

A NEW READER.—Hot tamales are a mixture of meat or fowl made hot with chillies and wrapped in corn husks. For the wrapping cut off the inside leaves of the corn husks about an inch from the stalk end and boil in clear water until perfectly clean. Tear a few in narrow strips to use for tying the ends; dry the rest and rub them over a cloth dipped in hot lard. The recipe follows: Use equal quantities of cold boiled chicken and veal, and half as much ham, all chopped. Mix together and moisten with good gravy. Season with salt, cayenne and a little chopped parsley. Make a dough by pouring a cupful of boiling water on a quart of fine fresh corn meal; work in a big lump of dough about the size of an egg; put it out flat, put a tablespoon of the meat on it and roll for the inner husk. Then put on the outer husks with a thick piece of dough in each. Tie the ends and boil in water containing a few red peppers and a clove or garlic.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A. B. C.—The landlord can sue you out without giving you a month's notice, under the circumstances.

A. Z.—If there was no agreement to the contrary, he can remove the clubhouse provided it is not permanently attached to the posts.

GRATEFUL. — (1) You will not need any other license, except that if you carry a stock of goods in any other city you probably will have to take out a merchant's license or its equivalent there.

G. K.—In our opinion the Constitution does not make it impossible for a woman to become President, although it speaks of the President as "he" and provides that he shall be commander-in-chief of the army, navy, etc.

AUTOMOBILE. — If you did not agree to give him a note for the balance, then you may be able to get your money back. Consult a lawyer or the Legal Aid Bureau in the Muncipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

VERNON.—If the woman with whom he is living has a husband from whom she is not divorced, then she cannot be his common law wife. The woman whom he legally marries could be his lawful wife, not the one with whom he is living.

CONSTANT READER.—We cannot advise you, as we do not know all the facts and apparenly you do not either. You should consult a lawyer and have him find out why the property in question was not included in the final settlement of the estate.

ANNA MAE.—Your husband can be prosecuted for his desertion of you and the baby. You can also sue him for separate maintenance. Report the facts to the Circuit Attorney's office, in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets, or consult the Legal Aid Bureau or a lawyer.

CHARLES. — Missouri is now about to complete the payment of its soldiers' bonus. Under the law, claims should have been filed by Dec. 31, 1922, but possibly some provision will be made for claims filed since that date. Write to the Bonus Commission, Jefferson City, Mo.

MICKEY.—You can be sued on the note, and after judgment is obtained, your salary or wages could be garnished. However, if you are the head of a family, only 10 per cent of your wages could be garnished. You would have a claim against your partner for the amount of the note, however, if he agreed to assume that indebtedness.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

WORRIED—Bring the matter to the attention of the Health Dept., Municipal Courts Bldg.

A LOVER OF CHILDREN—We do not think the cause you mention accounts for the condition. Often currettement will pave the way to a satisfactory conclusion.

L. L. G.—Insulin is a preparation made from spleens which prevents accumulation of glucose in the blood. It is administered hypodermatically.

PUSH.—A child born at seven months is naturally not so perfectly developed as one born at full time, and lack of mature development may be noted.

CHRISTINE H.—Do not neglect to take the child to a physician or to a clinic. There is, of course, an inflammatory condition and it may be venereal. If so the child is in danger.

JOHNSON.—If unable to pay a physician, we advise your consulting an ear, nose and throat clinic. There is evidently a nerve disturbance, possibly due to the recent operation. The condition is necessary to be seen.

A FAITHFUL READER. — The following might be tried for the condition: Tinct. capsicum, 4 drops; tinct. nux vomica, 1 oz.; tinct. calumba, 1 oz.; tinct. cinchona compd., enough added to make 4 ozs. Take a teaspoonful in water after meals.

SELMA.—The St. Louis School for the Feeble Minded is expected to open in May of this year. Any child who has legal residence in St. Louis or St. Louis County is eligible. Maintenance cost must be paid, in whole or in part, when the parent is able to pay, otherwise admission is free. The maintenance cost has not yet been determined. If the institution at the Bellefontaine Farms is referred to, this institution is functioning and has been for some years. For information apply to the Board of Children's Guardians.

BRIDGES ON IRISH ROAD BLOWN UP DURING NIGHT

Republicans Disclaim Responsibility for Damage—Highways Blocked With Felled Trees.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, Ireland, March 31.—A number of bridges on the main road between Longford and Athlone, in Central Ireland, were blown up last night and the roads were blocked with felled trees. The Republicans disclaimed responsibility for the destruction.

Residents of the country districts around Mullingar, County Westmeath, were awakened at midnight by a series of loud explosions. All the roads in the district were blocked or blown up. An attempt to blow up a bridge on the Dublin road failed.

MISSING AIRMAN A PRISONER

Member of Mexican Federal Forces Taken Captive by Rebels.

By the Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, March 31.—Pablo Sidar, an aviator attached to the Federal forces, who had been reported missing, is safe, according to advices received here. Sidar was forced to descend near Perote, State of Vera Cruz, and was taken prisoner by the rebels. He is said to have succeeded in inducing his captors to open parleys for surrender with the War Department.

Dispatches from Puerto, Mexico, say that Gen. Serrano, Secretary of War, is organizing four columns of troops for the southeastern campaign. It is unofficially reported that the vanguard of the Government troops has reached Frontera.

Few Americans in Brazil.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 15.—There are 3439 American citizens living in Brazil, according to official statistics just published here. The American colony is one of the smallest, despite the fact that Brazil does more business with the United States than with any other country. Of the Americans, 1066 live in Rio de Janeiro and 1200 in Sao Paulo.

Services were held at St. Rose's Church at 10 a. m. Active pallbearers were: R. W. Byrne, G. L. Leitner, J. K. James, T. L. Hirshman, H. D. Landry, F. E. Rownd, W. D. May and Clark Kretschmar.

STRESEMANN URGES EXPERTS REPORT SOON

Delay Is Particularly Injurious to Germany, Confusing Voters, He Asserts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, March 31.—The Echo de Paris prints an interview with former German Chancellor Stresemann on the forthcoming report of the committee of experts, in part, as follows:

"We hope the report will result in preparing the way for pourparlers between the Governments for a solution of the reparations problem, with conditions acceptable to all, and that it will open the road to political and economic peace.

"We keenly desire that the decision of the experts be made known as soon as possible. The report will have to furnish a solution of the present impasse, for it is absolutely impossible for the great industries of Germany further to prolong the effort to avert an economic catastrophe.

"The Reich itself is in no condition to finance deliveries in kind but needs a complete moratorium of long duration.

"Delay in rendering the experts' report is particularly injurious to Germany. If we knew what disposition was to be made of the Ruhr and what was the total amount of our obligation, we could have a more precise electoral program than now. In the present indecision, the voters are left in ignorance as to why the various candidates are contesting."

Stresemann thought the atmosphere between France and Germany less favorable than two months ago. "At the beginning of the inquest, the experts were welcomed with enthusiasm," he said. "Now, all foreign policies are plunged into stagnation."

Waterloo (Ill.) Miller Dies.

Jacob J. Koenigsmark, 65 years old, president of the Koenigsmark Milling Co., and vice president of the State National Bank at Waterloo, Ill., died at his home there last night after an illness of a year's duration from a complication of diseases. He was a member of the Board of Education of Waterloo for 29 years and an active Mason, belonging to Moolah Temple in St. Louis. He is survived by his widow and five sons and two daughters. The funeral will be tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the residence. Masons will have charge at the cemetery.

PRINCE OF WALES OUT AGAIN

Looks Fit and Well After Recovery From Fall at Races.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 31.—The Prince of Wales was out yesterday for the first time since his recent fall while racing. He looked fit and well and probably will fulfill some engagements this week, but his physicians are said to have forbidden him to follow the Oxford-Cambridge boat race in a launch, owing to the prevalent cold weather.

The Prince is responsible for large West End window displays of handkerchiefs with highly-colored and decorative borders. Recently the royal heir appeared with such a handkerchief prominently displayed in his breast pocket. The haberdashers have learned from long experience that to follow the Prince in his fashions is money in their pocket, hence they are selling the young bloods the "hankies" by the dozen. None of them can hope to compare with the Prince in the number of handkerchiefs kept in the wardrobe, the Prince's valet says.

Firemen Give Minstrel Show.

With faces blackened with burnt cork instead of smoke, Fire Department members last night gave the first of three minstrel performances at Community Center Hall, Grand boulevard and Vista avenue, to raise funds to equip the department's 60-piece band. The minstrel, followed by a dance, is to be repeated tonight and tomorrow evening. A good-sized audience was in attendance. Addresses were made by Fire Chief Panzer, Director of Public Safety McKelvey and Mayor Kiel.

Try the New Way

Of teeth cleaning

The way millions now employ

This is to urge you, once again, to try the new way of teeth cleaning. You see the results now wherever you look, in whiter, cleaner, safer teeth.

The use has now spread the world over. Millions of careful people, in every clime, enjoy its benefits. Those good results belong to you and yours. Learn how much they mean.

The war on film

Film is the teeth's great enemy—that viscous film you feel. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so much of it clings and stays. Soon it becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That is why teeth lose their pearly luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

New ways found

Modern science has found ways to fight that film on teeth. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Many careful tests have proved these methods effective. They do what must be done. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Two mistakes

Research also proved that old methods made two great mistakes. They reduced the alkalinity of the saliva, which is there to neutralize mouth acids. They reduced the starch digestant in saliva, which is there to digest starch deposits on teeth.

Pepsodent brings the opposite effects. It multiplies the alkalinity, multiplies the starch digestant. Thus it gives an increased power to these great tooth-protecting agents in the mouth.

Protect the Enamel

Multiplied beauty

One result is whiter teeth. And nothing else can add so much to beauty. But those whiter teeth mean cleaner, safer teeth.

Learn the benefits that Pepsodent can bring to you and yours. See and feel the quick, conspicuous effects. Then judge for yourself what is best.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will be amazed and delighted. Do this for your own sake. Cut out coupon now.

"Hoppin' the Freight"

More than 88,000 people are killed in the United States every year by accident. Of this number less than 8½% are killed by the railroads.

"Hoppin' the freight" is a contributing factor to these accidents; one of the dangerous practices that the L. & N. Railroad is endeavoring to correct; one of many obstacles that the Road is striving to overcome in its unceasing fight for public safety. Every L. & N. station master—and train employee as well—is charged with the special duty of watching boys around the stations, to keep them from "hoppin' the freight", and other such hazardous pastimes. And it is a hard job.

Some accidents cannot be prevented; they are unavoidable. But "hoppin' the freight" and many other seemingly petty violations of railroad rules are unnecessary and preventable; and can be reduced to a minimum only by intelligent co-operation on the part of the public.

The traveler who boards the moving train; the man who can't wait until the car stops before he alights, and the motorist who neither stops, looks nor listens at railroad crossings—each is needlessly imperiling his life, as much as is the boy who "steals a ride" on a freight. They, like the youth, too often disregard the warnings of safety until serious injury or death makes it impossible to continue these risky habits.

The L. & N. is constantly installing new and modern devices for the safety of passengers. Therefore, if you yourself will be careful and take no unnecessary chances when on or near railroad property, you will help to reduce the number of accidents and injuries.

SPECTACULAR RAID ON FILLING STATION

Many Persons See Robbers Flee Empty Handed After Dynamiting Safe.

Four men drove up in an automobile and stopped across the street. The leader, with a shotgun slung under his arm, stepped out. He handed the weapon to one man and posted him near the door:

"If the bulls show, give it to them, and give it to them good," he commanded, and, throwing his body against the door of the filling station, stumbled in as it fell.

A chance witness ran to find a telephone and a minute later a loud explosion brought men and women to the windows of nearby homes. The robbers were seen runnin to the automobile, which moved west on Clayton avenue at high speed. The inner door of the safe withstood the explosion.

Second Robbery of Grand Boulevard Bus in Two Weeks.

For the second time in two weeks, a Grand boulevard bus of the Peoples Motorbus Co., was held up and its crew robbed. The robbers boarded the bus at Grand boulevard and Kansas street shortly after midnight and with revolvers took $21 from Conductor Clifford Wilcoksen and Chauffeur Arthur Zollner. A bus was robbed previously in a like manner at the entrance to Carondelet Park.

John Brooks, who has an antique shop at 2658 Cass avenue, phoned the police late last night that he had been robbed while he slept the night before, but was too ill to ascertain the amount of his loss until late in the day. He declared that a desk had been forced open and $510 in cash taken.

FAMILY OF 5, SEEKING SAFETY IN TREE, PERISHES IN FLOOD

By the Associated Press.

KITZMILLER, Md., March 31.—Five persons, members of an entire family, were drowned here, when a tree to which they were clinging, was uprooted and swept away by the flood waters of the Potomac River. Two of the bodies have been recovered.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Beeman, their two children and David Beeman, grandfather of the children. They had left their home when it was flooded and had sought safety in a tree. The force of the current with their added weight uprooted the tree and swept it away. The bodies recovered were those of the two children, a girl and boy.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 31.—Floods in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, caused by warm rains and melting snows in the mountains, had devastated a wide area in those states today, taken a toll of 13 lives and caused millions of dollars' damage to property.

After having flooded an area of 175 miles, extending from its headwaters at German, Md. to Harpers Ferry, V. Va., with the greatest damage done at Cumberland, Md., the Potomac River, was rapidly returning to its channel.

In the Western Pennsylvania district, the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers, meeting here to form the Ohio, swept over the lower sections of their valleys and the Youghiogheny river, coming down the Allegheny mountains, flooded a section extending from Connellsville to McKeesport, a distance of 40 miles.

Railroad traffic throughout the flooded area was demoralized when bridges were destroyed and many miles of track washed away.

WELFARE LEAGUE TO URGE IMPROVEMENT AT CITY JAIL

$150,000 Appropriation to Complete Fifth and Sixth Floors at Once to Be Recommended.

Representatives of the Missouri Welfare League plan to appear before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment Friday or during a special hearing, to urge approval of the recommendation of Director of Public Welfare Cunliff that $150,000 be appropriated for completion of the fifth and sixth floors of the city jail.

It will be recalled this step was advised by Dr. Hastings H. Hart, director of the Child-Helping Department, of the Russell Sage Foundation, in his report of a survey made several months ago at the request of Director Cunliff and the Welfare League.

Miss Carol W. Bates, secretary of the league, said today that members would appear before the board to oppose any reduction in the appropriation or postponement of the work. The league believes the crowded conditions at the jail, as reported by Dr. Hart, require immediate remedy.

Dr. Hart will return to St. Louis May 6 to remain for several days. He will then present a report of a survey at the workhouse and speak at the annual meeting of the Welfare League.

THE REVELATIONS OF A PAID COMPANION

By JANE PHELPS

"Author of "My Husband and I," "A Wife's Story," Etc.

CHAPTER XLVII.

LAUREL WORTHING CONFIDES IN RITA.

AFTER I had seen Mrs. Ellwood made comfortable for the night, had read to her and chatted a while, telling her what Mollie wore, and so on, I went to my room, and a little later Laurel tapped on my door asking if I were sleepy, or if she might come in and chat a little while.

"Do," I replied.

We talked of all sorts of things for a while, then she led me on to speak of Mollie. Mrs. Ellwood had told her of her hope that Mollie and Rush Millbank would marry, and she asked if I thought Mollie cared.

"Of course, the doctor does," she said.

"Then they aren't engaged?"

"No. I am sure I should know if they were."

"I have a feeling that she is dangerous, Rita. You'll think me silly, but I can't help it. I should die if she stole him. I never saw him so intrigued before. He has not seen her since she was a young girl, you know. And she is so lovely, so vivacious, so everything I am not."

"Nonsense, Laurel. What ever put such a notion in your head?" In spite of what I had observed, I was shocked.

"I don't really know, but ever since we came I have been depressed, felt as if something were going to happen, something hateful to me."

I made some light reply, not knowing what to say. She paid no attention, but went on:

"It is terrible to love anyone as I love Jim. To feel that life is only worth living because of him. When he is away from me I am miserable. When he is with me I watch every moment to see if he shows any sign of ceasing to love me. I don't know why I talk to you like this, only that it is a relief to speak of it to someone. He never looked at me tonight, his eyes only for Mollie. And he—forgot to kiss me when he left."

Surely she was morbid, neurotic.

"He has never given you any cause to feel this way, Laurel, I am sure. You must not"—

"I never have spoken of it to a living soul. But he has—once. I thought my heart would break. We had been married only a year; she was lovely, too, like Mollie. Oh, I can't talk of it, even to you. It was too humiliating!"

"You mustn't, Laurel. That nothing came out of the incident should prove he means nothing."

"Nothing came of it because I loved him too well to let him go. But I knew he wanted to."

"Why don't you do the things he does?" I asked.

"Dance and play the outdoor games he likes?"

"I can't, Rita. My heart is too weak. I nearly died of grief—that time. The doctors have cautioned me, said I must not do anything strenuous or I would die. And I can't leave him."

My heart ached with pity for the sweet little woman whose love made her unhappy, yet who clung to the unhappiness rather than lose him. I still thought her foolishly apprehensive.

I changed the subject, tried to get her mind off from her fears. After a little she brightened, and when she said good-night I was sure she was happier. But after she left me I sat quietly, thinking of all she had said. My experience with married life had been only what I had seen of the Ellwoods, the remembrance of my own father and mother, kind always, devoted to each other. Her story was like a book of fiction, interesting me.

It was 2 o'clock when I stopped my dreamy thinking, and started to prepare for bed. I felt hungry, and knowing the cook always left something tasty in the icebox for such a contingency, I threw on a kimono and went quietly downstairs.

Taking a sandwich and a glass of milk, I retraced my steps. When I reached the door of the dining room into the hall, I heard voices and drew back into the darkness of the room. Only the night light burned in the hall. But in its faint glow I saw Mollie and Jim, and then suddenly he caught her in his arms and kissed her, she pulling back, but laughingly.

"You lovely creature, you drive me mad!" I heard him say, as with a light laugh and a kiss blown from her fingertips, she eluded him and flew up the stairs. I didn't move until I heard first her door, then his, close. Then I crept up to my room, my heart wrung with pity for Laurel, a feeling about marriage I never before had experienced.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Instead of Bands.

One woman puts hems at the top and bottom of her kitchen aprons and runs a tape through one end for strings. The tape can be changed from one end to the other hem and the wear on the apron be evenly distributed.

* * *

A Silk Test.

A good test for silk is to cut off a small piece and burn it. If it is inclined to smolder and leaves a heavy reddish ash, it has been doctored, but if it burns quickly, leaving a clear gray ash, the silk is pure.

* * *

Spilled Grease.

When grease is spilled on the wooden floor, pour cold water over it immediately, causing the grease to harden and not sink into the wood. It can then be scraped up with a knife and the floor scrubbed with hot water, soapsuds and a little ammonia.

* * *

Keep Them Separated.

How often have you watched a housewife frantically going through the dresser drawer in search of a spoon or fork while smoke arises from the article being cooked? This would be avoided if the drawer for kitchen cutlery were partitioned and the various utensils sorted and kept in their places.

Fashion Frills

Dresses for day time wear in many designers' hands of Paris have broken forth today into an epidemic of panels. These panels, strictly tailored and lying quite flat, include the chasuble, the foliated, round panels and panels in trellis work.

* * *

First create a style; then disguise it. This seems to be the notion just now in Paris. Hence the very snugly fitted gown widens on one side by the insertion of fan shaped ruffles, or it hides the snugness on one side by a big bow.

* * *

Among the favorite shades in London today for all except the formal gown are dove gray, wood brown and black. The combination of black and white is also frequently noted.

* * *

Lingerie in silver tints is being selected by the spring bride in London. The material may be metal cloth, georgette, or silk, but the tints range from bright silver to silver gray. Against this background a few wisps of embroidery in delicate shades of green or rose or blue are permitted.

Bronze slippers, never quite "out," but for some months not really chic, are once more in style. The newest bronze pumps in one New York shop have a very narrow line of gold around the top of the shoe and outlining the stitching.

What Kind of Husbands Do the "Jimmies" Make

The Role That Mrs. Jimmy Must Play — Several Houses and No Home — A Phenomenon Peculiarly American

The responsibilities of matrimony and how they should be met have engaged the attention of other notable contributors to this great forum on the problems of modern society as exemplified primarily in "Love, Marriage and the Modern Woman," but in the present article the author discusses an all-too-prevalent condition—matrimony without responsibility.

The penalty of this irresponsibility, as Mr. Fitzgerald shows, affects other social conditions as well, and in the same degree that it threatens the institution of matrimony he believes that it threatens, unless corrected, the structure of American society.

By SCOTT FITZGERALD

HOW about the sons and daughters of the rich? Those whose engagements and marriages are this day announced on society pages the country over. What kind of a success will they make of marriage and what sort of ideals are they capable of passing on to their children? Consider:

"Drunk?" asks Eddie.

"Is he dressed?" Eddie does not mean: Is he in his underwear?—though this would not surprise him a great deal. He means: Does he have on a dinner coat?

"Yes."

"All right," says Eddie. "Show him in."

And into the Mont Mihiel cafe reels that peerless aristocrat, that fine flower of American civilization, young Mr. Jimmy Worthington. His father made a fortune hoarding food during the war but the son scorns commerce and has gone in for aristocracy on a large scale.

I have often talked to Jimmy and tried to find out his ideas about life. It is an enlightening if somewhat alarming experience, for Jimmy's conversation is chiefly a history of his more recent dissipations. He has heard his father make remarks about "these dangerous radicals," so Jimmy thinks of all the policemen and soldiers in America as a sort of bodyguard to protect his person from the "lower classes."

He thinks that when he is arrested for running his car 60 miles an hour he can always get out of trouble by handing his captor a large enough bill—and he knows that even if he has the bad luck to run over someone when he's drunk, his father will buy off the family and keep him out of jail. This is a complete summary of Jimmy's attitude toward the Government under which he lives.

Fashions in Behavior.

It has been the fashion for the last five years to blame rich girls for the "wildness" of the younger generation. Women, however, are always just what men make them. In 1840, women were required to faint to show their delicacy—in 1924 women are required to dissipate to show their sportsmanship. Occasionally the revulsion from some orgy throws Jimmy in a panic into the arms of a girl of character. But, as a rule, he marries someone like himself.

Jimmy and Mrs. Jimmy have a year of dissipation together. Mrs. Jimmy is "a good sport"—she has to be; if she ceased being one Jimmy would find another lady to be a good sport in her stead. Perhaps at the end of a year or two, there is a single child—not particularly wanted nor particularly unwanted; not the center of the household, apparently, nor the result of any scheme of life—simply a child which exists through its infancy in a sort of vacuum; not unloved but, somehow, an incongruity inasmuch as its parents, though they may have three houses, have not yet succeeded in establishing anything in the nature of a home.

On the contrary, they are already drifting apart. Their bonds were never very close, for in the world of continual stimulation in which they moved they never really regarded marriage as a permanent thing.

Jimmy's Children.

The psychological effect of the child on Mrs. Jimmy begins a new era in their marriage. Something is wrong and she knows it. She is torn between her natural love for the child and the idea that she's got to keep up with Jimmy. But the problem is solved for her by Jimmy, who has learned to amuse himself without her. To all intents and purposes their marriage is over.

Let us suppose though that Jimmy and Mrs. Jimmy remain together after a fashion and have a series of three children over an interval of 10 years. Is Jimmy in any position to supervise their education? Not he. He hasn't even the wisdom to leave them intelligently alone.

He knows by this time that there is something wrong with his life and his one idea is that his children shall be unlike himself. And of all the intolerant, mean, and unjust parents in the world an exlibertine is the worst. He looks with horror on the mildest escapade.

"The Little Brother of the Rich."

While at no period in the world's history, perhaps, has a larger proportion of the family income been spent upon display, an even worse phenomenon is observable in those who come into direct contact with the irresponsible rich. Every wealthy set in the big cities has many couples who, from their inability to pay the heavy financial cost of post-prohibition entertaining, have become nothing more than sponges and parasites. I know dozens of boys who have never been able to live down expensive educations—who have come into contact with the rich, wasting class at the big prep schools and universities and never realized that what young Midas wastes today was once paid for by old Midas, his grandfather, and that what he himself wastes is going to be sweated out of his parents' inadequate bank book. He sees young Midas reel through life like Jimmy, or, if he wants to work, become a director in six companies on his twenty-fifth birthday. So the poor but lazy young man gets a confused, jealous, and distorted picture of the world.

A Test of Aristocracy.

Is Jimmy, lasting a month in Wall street, to blame for his failure to hold a job? What possible attraction can Wall street hold for him? Joy in the work? He hates the work—he is too dull and slow for it. Money? He knows there's plenty of money at home and his for the asking. Pride? But he need feel no shame in being a parasite since half the rich young men he knows are just as lazy and useless as himself. Responsibility?

Here we come to something that sets the American "leisure class" off from the leisure class of all other nations—and makes it probably the most shallow, most hollow, most pernicious leisure class in the world. It has frequently no consciousness that leisure is a privilege, not a right, and that a privilege always implies a responsibility.

Sons of the Newly Rich.

In the first place, the young Englishman of wealth heretofore has made an honest attempt to go into politics and run his Government. He may not have been brilliant at it, but he was rich and he didn't need bribes and stock presents and tips on the market—and that's why the British Government has been incomparably the cleanest Government in the world. Compared to it, recent developments would make the American Government appear to be a barnyard of scandal and corruption. Can you imagine the Teapot Dome oil disclosures or wounded-veteran graft having happened in the British Isles?

There is, of course, the Jimmy in England, too, but he is in a minority there. Here, since the war, at least, Jimmy has become a majority of the rich boys of the land. He occurs most frequently among the newly rich. The older families often have some tradition of responsibility. Their boys go into politics if they can afford it or into the law or one of the arts. They are sent to carefully chosen schools—schools which realize that the rich boy must be broken into habits of work and discipline when he is young. And they are given no such allowances as the Jimmies are given.

There was a boy in my class at Princeton who was the son of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in the Middle West. During his freshman year he kept an account book with a record of every dollar spent. I make no comment on the value of this particular practice, but it shows how necessary it seemed to this boy's father that he should have a sense of responsibility—if not to the country, at least to the fortune he was some day to control.

Probably the most encouraging thing about the Jimmies is that they don't survive—survive, I mean as rich men. The largest purse has a bottom, and though Jimmy never works while he can bluff and sponge and borrow his way along, his children will have to take what scraps remain and start again in the middle class.

Since I was seven year old, just 20 years ago, I have seen in my own experience the break up of five sizable fortunes. Out in St. Paul where I was born, a dozen houses still stand that were once inhabited by one-generation "aristocrats." The "aristocrats" are dead now and their fortunes have melted away; their children who had no sense of responsibility, even toward their father's money, are bad examples around the streets or, at best, starting life over again with nothing but their own talents and a pioneer name.

This phenomenon, remember, is peculiarly American. English families seldom if ever decay with such rapidity, because they are founded not on sand, but on aristocracy. And real aristocracy, whatever its faults, is willing to undergo a discipline of its own.

A Pretentious Mockery.

The leisure class of England are not soft. They have their scandals, their wastrels, their roues—but in London one never gets the impression that one does sometimes in New York, that all society is a silly, pretentious, vicious mockery of a defunct fuedal regime.

Let the American rich have their summer and winter places which tower over our suburban bungalows; let them keep 12 suits and servants to our one. The founder of a great family has been shrewd and successful and bought his descendants soft, fine things that no relative has seen fit to provide for us.

Theoretically, at least, we have the same chance for a marble mausoleum as all the Astors in England and America. It is not so much what the rich do as what they don't do that becomes more and more deplorable each year. They grow softer and softer—and Jimmy's father is now just as soft as Jimmy. Let two dozen workmen meet behind a barn and he bursts out in a cold sweat, casts aside eight centuries of justice and tries to get half a dozen bewildered foreigners sent to Leavenworth for ten years. He stocks his cellar with liquor and then votes righteously for prohibition "for the good of the masses."

Women and Their Handicaps.

The effect of this on the children of the rich has been enormous. Women are not public spirited and they are not natural idealists—they are too "practical" to be concerned with anything that is not their own. When they make standards they are inclined to make violently selfish and unchivalric standards.

Can you imagine the usual very rich woman urging her son to go into politics for the good of the country—if, say, he were making a big success in business? The thing is inconceivable. Women do have vast dreams for their children, but when it comes down to cases their desire is that their children shall take no chances and, at all costs, keep out of trouble.

The Source of Jimmy's Ideals.

American rich boys of this generation get what ideals they have from their mothers. The boy watches his mother's almost insane strivings toward a social position commensurate with her money. He sees her change her accent, her clothes, her friends, her very soul, as she pushes her way up in life pulling her busy husband with her. Jimmy's idea of politics becomes the remembrance of some preposterous women's club that met at his mother's house one day. Politics, he thinks, is a thing where ugly women read long, dull papers made up out of the month's newspaper editorials.

By the time he is 21 Jimmy is about as public-spirited as a rattlesnake. He is not told that his father grew rich because America is the richest country in the world and his father was somewhat shrewder and more industrious than other men. He is told that his father is an unselfish individual who "helped develop the country." He is told that because his father has done this noble work he can now look down on everyone else less rich than he. This privilege, the boy gathers from his mother, is the highest inspiration of which a citizen is capable.

So, as it turns out, our rich boy grows up in one of two ways: Either he learns a set of intensely soft, intensely selfish ideals at his mother's knee and spends his life busily adding to the fortune that his father made; or, he learns no ideals at all and, assuming that aristocacy is a sort of drunken reel between two long lines of bribed policemen, spends his life and money in a riot of extravagance and petty vice.

What a waste! Think of the hundreds of first-rate men who have come out of the British leisure class—statesmen, poets, painters, architects, soldiers, scientists, physicians, philosophers, empire builders—men who have made life easier and more beautiful by having lived. And then look at the American leisure class and note that it has produced—well, two Presidents out of 27! The greatest Americans have come almost invariably from the very poorest class—Lincoln, Edison, Whitman, Ford, Mark Twain.

I have a list of our 500 richest families. I run down the list. Here is a Jimmy, a typical Jimmy, and another, and another, without variation. Here is a row of Jimmies; you can see them every night in certain cafes of New York. Here is a family which has produced nothing but Jimmies for three generations and yet its wealth for some mysterious reason doubles and multiplies.

All that leisure—for nothing! All that wealth—it has begotten waste and destruction and dissipation and snobbery; nothing more. Three generations of chorus girls and race track touts and one generation of bootleggers have profited from it—that is all.

Is this to go on forever? Are the rich to breed 10,000 Jimmies until they become a race apart—or will they find that if they want to survive they must realize what really is the responsibility toward the country? Otherwise it will be brought home to them in the decay and failure of their own begotten sons.

WHERE JIMMY DERIVES HIS IDEALS

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

IS it brought on the wind's softest sigh, is it some passing glow in the sky which, though north winds may scream over white field and stream, tell us plainly: "The springtime is nigh"? Not a wing down the forest aisles flashed, not a wave in the frozen stream splashed, not a bud or a blade; yet the message has strayed, down the air's viewless paths it is flashed. And we know, though no sign has been seen, though the air is still icy and keen, that these paths will ere long ring and echo with song, these bare boughs will be clothed in fresh green. Does it come with a smile or a glance, with a touch of the hand that by chance in some roseate hour makes life bloom like a flower, with the fragrance and hue of romance? It must come from the heavens above, floating down like the gray-plumaged dove; yet no ear hears the cry of the guest from the sky; only hearts heed the message of love! And sometimes, when the traveler grows tired, when the day and the way have conspired to make surest faith seem like a mist and a dream that the soul has but vainly desired; when the only thing left is to grope up the difficult, desolate slope, to forget in the climb erstwhile visions sublime, to renounce siren voices of hope; then it comes! None can cay whence it came, none can give it a cause or a name; but the message goes through, joy and peace wake anew and hope flares into glorious flame!

Love's Arithmetic

DRAWN BY POPINI

LOVE'S arithmetic is life's algebra. It formulates something like this—One plus One makes Two, who act like One. That is to say:

A—meaning you—plus B—meaning the other—makes (A plus B). Now, as these symbols are one only when held together by brackets, which in this case are the symbols for Love, it necessarily follows that without love the two would fly apart and act—well, like the very dickens!

Therefore, two who would be truly happy must be held together by love, or—Ah, that's what he is so earnestly striving to tell her and what she is endeavoring to comprehend, counting this difficult—but joyous—problem on the fingers of her lovely hand!—POPINI.

FIG PUDDING.

Rinse a half pound of dried figs, then run them through the food chopper, using the finest knife. Remove all the fiber from a little more than a quarter of a pound of suet and then chop it fine and add it to the figs with three-quarters of a cupful of fine crumbs, a half cupful of sugar, a quarter cupful of flour and a saltspoonful of salt. Beat two eggs and add to them a half pint of milk. Mix all these ingredients together, adding a teaspoonful of vanilla and a little grating of nutmeg. Pour the mixture into a well-buttered mold, cover it and steam it for two and a half hours. Mix to a paste a half cupful of butter and three-quarters of a cupful of sugar. When they are blended add a beaten egg, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and a generous grating of nutmeg. Set the sauce over the top of the teakettle and stir it as it melts until it is smooth.

According to statistics compiled by the United States Department of Commerce, women wear more shoes than men. The 1923 leather shoe production was 351,114,223 pairs. Of this number women's footwear made up over 109,000,000 of the total, while men's shoes totaled 100,282,000 pairs, and the remainder divided among infants, boys, athletic and other classifications.

Tailored voiles, batistes and tissues now are being made into attractive morning frocks for country wear. Very much tailored, they find a new decoration in hand drawn motifs.

The Quacks Regain Faith

No greater joy may be attained
Than lost faith that has been regained.
—Old Mother Nature.

UNKNOWN to Farmer Brown's Boy, Peter Rabbit had watched all that had happened over there at the mouth of the Laughing Brook where it enters the Big River. He had watched Farmer Brown's Boy scatter the corn there, build the blind and hide in it. He had watched Mr. and Mrs. Quack find that corn and greedily stuff themselves. He had watched Farmer Brown's Boy leave the blind and start for home.

Then Peter came from his hiding place. He was in high spirits, was Peter Rabbit. He fairly ached to tell Mr. and Mrs. Quack where that corn had come from. But Mr. and Mrs. Quack had hidden in the broken-down rushes, and, though Peter waited and waited, they did not come out. Finally Peter went home to the dear Old Briar Patch.

"I knew it would be all right if Farmer Brown's Boy found Mr. and Mrs. Quack," said he to himself. "I knew it would be all right."

The next day Peter was back to visit the Quacks. So was Farmer Brown's Boy. As before, he brought corn and scattered it. This time the Quacks from their hiding place saw him do it, but they didn't see him hide in his blind. They thought he had gone away. They waited only long enough to feel quite sure that he had gone, and then they ate that corn almost as greedily as they had done the day before.

The next day they watched for the coming of Farmer Brown's Boy, and they were not disappointed. This time they were so eager for that corn that they did not remain hidden. A few days later they actually began to pick up that corn with Farmer Brown's Boy standing in plain sight. It wasn't long after this before they would come to meet him as soon as they saw him on the bank. So it was that little by little the Quacks regained faith and no longer doubted all of the two-legged creatures called men.

It was surprising how fast they regained their good looks. They began to grow plump. Mr. Quack's beautiful feathers regained their brightness, and he spent a great deal of time dressing them and caring for them, as had been his habit in other years.

"What did I tell you about Farmer Brown's Boy?" demanded Peter of the Quacks one day after Farmer Brown's Boy had gone away. "Didn't I tell you that he is a friend to be trusted?"

"Didn't I tell you that he was a friend to be trusted?"

"He is, Peter. He certainly is," said Mrs. Quack. Then she sighed. "I wish that there were more of those two-legged creatures like him. I do so. I wish Mr. Quack and I could stay here all next winter. But I suppose the ice and snow will drive us south as usual, and we will have another just such terrible winter. I can't bear to think of it."

"Don't," said Peter. "Next winter is a long way off. Be thankful for what you have now and don't borrow trouble from the future. I suppose that before long you and Mr. Quack will be starting for your summer home in the Far North. You look as if you were strong enough now."

"We are," said Mrs. Quack, "but"—— She looked at Mr. Quack, and Mr. Quack looked at her. Neither said anything further.

SCRAMBLED EGGS AND MUSHROOMS.

Wipe and peel the flaps of half a pound of mushrooms and cut the stems up fine. Beat six eggs, add pepper, salt and a half cupful of rich milk or cream. Saute the mushroom flaps in butter. Stir the stems into the eggs. Heat a frying-pan hot and put in a heaping tablespoonful of butter. When this is melted turn in the eggs and scramble them with a silver fork. Heap the eggs onto a hot dish and lay the flaps over the top.

The Wonderful New Starch for Children's Clothes

Because Linit remains THIN and FREE-RUNNING like water, it penetrates every thread of the fabric, and helps strengthen it, thus preventing wear and increasing the life of the material.

New Starch Discovery

USE Linit according to directions, and, unlike other starches, you will not find Linit stiff or jelly-like.

This is also why Linit goes much farther than old-fashioned starches—and why it is easier to iron with Linit.

GO to your grocer, ask for a 10c package of Linit and begin to use it for all fabrics. Linit is the economy starch—it goes further and saves your clothes.

The Extras in a Sack of Enterprise Flour

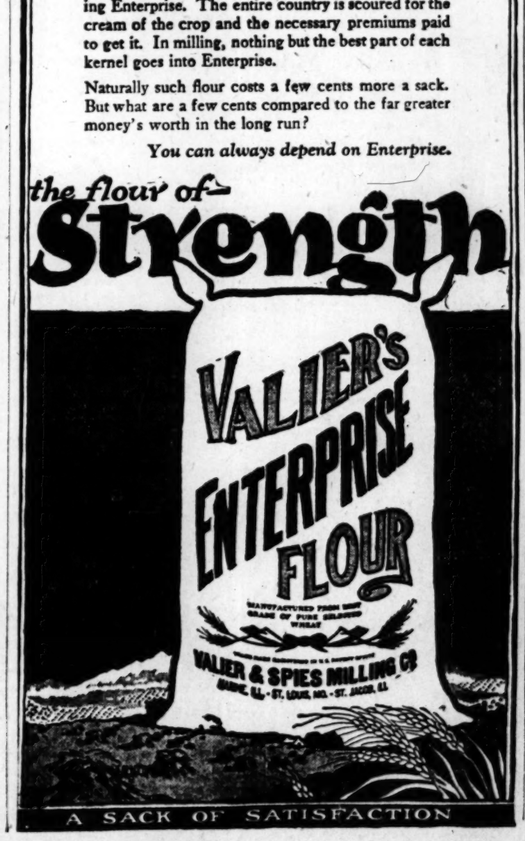

In every sack of Enterprise Flour you get three things which are not in a sack of ordinary flour. 1. Better baking—bread, rolls, cakes, pies—everything. 2. More baking from each sack—at least four extra loaves. 3. Dependability—the elimination of costly failures.

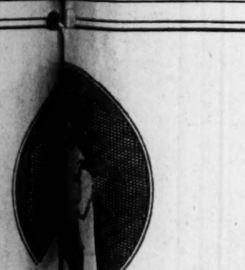

Even now, when there is a shortage of good strong hard wheat, only the very finest grade is used in making Enterprise. The entire country is scoured for the cream of the crop and the necessary premiums paid to get it. In milling, nothing but the best part of each kernel goes into Enterprise.

Naturally such flour costs a few cents more a sack. But what are a few cents compared to the far greater money's worth in the long run?

Dear Editor:

Well I thought you might maybe want to hear a few details in regards to the hotel where I been stopping, namely, the Grove Park Inn, which nestles at the feet of Sunset Mountain just out of Asheville and shyly admits that it is the finest and most unique resort hotel in the world. Personally I was broughten up to assume that unique meant something which they ain't nothing else like it, so when anybody says most unique they are certainly using a mouth full of big words.

However, you can excuse them being a little fluent if they have got grounds for same and will state at this junction that while I have not stopped at more than one-half the hotels in the world, why of all the ones where I have stopped at, the Inn in question is a whole lot more different from that it is similar to.

In the first place, you go into most hotels and they give you a room and bath and when you get there you find the bath tub is porcelain and you are afraid to get into it on account of slipping, as you are used to nonskid tubs, but in the Inn they have got big grab bars bolted into the wall behind the tub and above the grab bars they's a sign which says "This grab bar has a heavy iron center and is fastened with heavy bolts. You should hold on to it when getting out of or standing in the tub."

It's a Pipe.

One of the boys told me that the reason for this precaution was tha: one time a man had drove here from Seattle in a open Ford without never leaving his seat and on arriving in Asheville kind of felt like he needed a bath so he climbed in and managed at first to keep his feet though his tub at home was lined with porcupine quills, but when he was pretty near through and had pulled the stopper, he slipped and fell and beaned himself on the porcelain and was washed out through the drain pipe without recovering consciousness.

Another sign in the Inn's bathrooms says that the hot water is always exactly 150 degrees above zero winter or summer which saves guests the trouble of strapping a thermometer around their waist before stepping into the tub.

In fact the Inn has got more signs than the Lincoln Highway and for those guests who can read, why they can find out anything their little heart desires without inquiring from nobody. A sign tells you that if you spill ink on the bedroom rug you will be cordially invited to buy the rug. If you burn the dressing table with your curling iron your husband can have the table at cost price. A sign tells you that all employs of the Inn wears rubber O'Heels, but don't say what kind of collars. A sign tells you that the big Skinner organ downstairs requires a 15 Horse power motor to blow it and took 3 freight cars to bring it and 4 months to install it. It don't say what it takes to play it, but I suppose most anybody, as it is a pipe.

In addition to the signs devoted to information the place is pretty well stocked with happiness signs, mostly translations of foreign proverbs meaning look for the silver lining which the boss hopes you will happen to see one just after looking over your bill.

The word menu don't come nowheres near describing what you order off of at Grove Park. Nobody ever eats their first lunch because by the time they get through reading the menu it is time for dinner. When you go into New York's swellest hotel and set down to order your food you haven't no idear what you will get as everything is under assumed names. But they don't leave no doubt in your mind at this here Inn. For inst. a typical item on the card would be "Fried Sea Trout, Tartar Sauce (Received by Express from Morehead City, N. C. Fried and Served With a Sauce Made of Chopped Gherkins, Onions, Capers, Parsley and Mayonnaise)."

Or "Cold Chicken (Breast of Chicken Especially Selected and Ran Over by a Expensive, Black, High-Powered Touring Car at 45 Miles per Hour on the Turnpike between Here and Hendersonville, Picked Up by a Male Quartette of Ambulance Surgeons Wearing Sanitary Pall Bearers' Gloves and Borne to the Inn to the Tune of Arcady Played in Fox Trot Tempo by a Band Made Up of Paul Whiteman's Cousins.)"

Tend to Own Boiling.

The back page of the menu is headed "Eating" and the first sentence reads, "Some people do not know HOW to eat, WHAT to eat or WHEN to eat." The author then gives the answer to these three riddles and also kind of hints around at WHERE to eat. Lower down on the page is the autobiography of a Grove Park Inn prune. It seems that every prune served here is a milkfed prune, educated in a convent and then brought from California in a separate drawing room so as to not risk no collusion with common prunes that rides in uppers.

The front page expresses the hope that guests won't bring along no dogs or children. It says, "Positively no dogs of any size, value, color or ugliness allowed at the Inn. Guests who attempt to smuggle them in in vanity boxes or suit cases will be asked to vacate their rooms." This last may sound like a joke, but they tell me that one time a long while ago a guest brought in a police dog in the back of his watch, as his father had been a good watch dog. But any way the guest made quite a stay and the dog got the habit of sleeping close to the door of the room and by the time the guest got ready to go the dog had growed so big that his master could not get past him to get out the door which he leaped from the window and broke 3 ribs and tried to borrow them back from the proprietor and author of the hotel.

There is no mosquitoes in Asheville and was it not for the fear of dogs and children or the danger of an occasional bacillus in the milk, the Inn would not half to be screened. As it is several canaries has managed to get in through the screens and I have noticed some of them ignoring the sign about guests not making no noise before 9 A. M. but maybe they can't read.

How sanitary everything is may be judged from the fact that all the dishes is boiled in two boilings after each meal and the finger bowls and silver is treated the same way. However, if a guest wants to get boiled he has to go down town and tend to it himself. The favorite fluid seems to be Corn which Ashevillians pronounce as if its first name was Abe.
